HARDLUCK STORIES OF CHARLES "HARDLUCK" HAUGHTON AND STILL HE'S ALWAYS HAPPY

Haughton, Who Is President, Manager, Matchmaker and Everything Else at the West End Club, Says That His Hardluck Began at the Age of Five.

BY J. E. WRAY.

Most St. Louisans whose wives will let them out Thursday evenings without requiring an alibi to prove how they passed the time, know Charles Henry Haughton—"Hardluck" Haughton—president, manager, matchmaker and everything else necessary to the West End Physical Culture Club's welfare.

They know a smooth-faced, well-groomed, happy looking creature who appears 30 years old and has lived three times that long, if events count. One who smiles when 500 passes are sandwiched in with paid admissions on "fight nights" at the club, who says "thank you" when a bill is presented and "much obliged" when he tells the bearer to call next Thursday.

From appearances his sole care in life is to be able to afford his fellow citizens an interesting evening or two by getting certain other fellow citizens into a ring where they endeavor to change each other's landscapes in fashion approved by boxers.

With all his smiles, Haughton is staggering under the crushing impost of an unforgiving Fate, and sundry other more wordly and pecuniary difficulties sufficient to try the patience of Job.

"Hardluck" is his nickname, and hard luck is his history.

His First Run of Hard Luck.

Haughton's hard luck began at the age of 5. At this time Charles Henry had already developed advanced ideas, and, according to his own story, was in the habit of enjoying a post-prandial cigar on the cellar door or behind the woodshed, enlivened by a quiet little game of craps.

"Craps" resulted in his first and early downfall. Having lost to another 5-year-old everything he possessed in the shape of negotiable property liable to be owned at 5, he one day staked his last jelly roll against the run of the dice, and lost, going supperless to bed.

Fate established a precedent on that occasion which it has since religiously followed. At almost every important turn of the wheel of fortune, Haughton has drawn a red ticket and had black show up.

"The worst luck I ever had was when I got into the fight-promoting business," said Haughton, as he bought 25-cent cigars with the remnants left from the box office on last "entertainment night." "I got into the game through what I considered a piece of luck, then. If I had lost I would have been worth money.

"I was manager of the Pastime Athletic Club at the time, and Pete Nolan was interested with me. The place was paying well, and we were making money, when Nolan and I split up.

"'It's me or you has got to go,' said I to Nolan, 'let's cut the cards. "I cut a six and thought it was all over until he turned up a tray. That's my luck. Some called it a 'good thing.' It's still for sale.

"That's how I came to be in the fight business, in any case. If anyone thinks it a good one, let him get a microscope and hunt for my bank roll."

Haughton's one piece of luck since that time was when he pulled off the Kid McCoy-Billy Stift fight in the late 90s at the Exposition Coliseum.

Following that stirring affair, which started the Roman instinct in the St. Louis masculine breast, Haughton sustained a shock that nearly put him out of business.

He had arranged a big match for the Coliseum. Clarence Forbes and Steve Flannagan, two of the best men that ever jolted an opponent to sleep, and both in their palmy days at the time, were scheduled as one of the features. The affair was to have taken place on Monday, and by Thursday before the fight over $4000 had been taken in on advance sales. This was more than enough to cover expenses right there, and Haughton was floating around in carriages ("balloons," he calls them) trying to find some place where they would take his money without arguing about it.

A rival establishment had tried to break into the pugilistic field, and was holding shows at the Fourteenth Street Theater.

Part of its program was a bout between two untrained members of the populace—a milkman and a butcher. Events proved that though the milkman was favorite, his stock was watered, and the butcher made a chopping block of him.

While the affair was going on, Haughton was at the Rozier Htoel in the midst of calculations.

"If I have taken in $4000 in advance on this fight, what will the total receipts amount to at the box office the night of the contest, considering that the McCoy house was worth $8000, with $3000 advance sale?" was the interesting problem.

Haughton had got as far as meditating whether he would take the Cook's tour through Europe and Egypt or charter a steam yacht and cruise about alone, when a messenger boy burst into the room breathless.

"There'll be one killed in Hotel Rozier if you don't keep quiet," said Haughton, figuring up the price of first cabin staterooms for himself and retinue, in line with the European trip.

"It's one of them prizefighters," went on the messenger.

That was different. Waiting for no more, Haughton grabbed his hat and rushed over to the theater, where he was informed that the milkman had cashed in all the due bills he had against life and wound up existence as a result of the scrap with the butcher.

Haughton took no European trip.

The mishap closed up the boxing game here. Haughton lost his lease on the Exposition Coliseum, lost his fight and had to beg and borrow enough to make up what he had spent in order to pay back $4000 he had received from the advance sale of tickets.

"You will please remember," says Haughton, in referring to the episode, "that the fight which probably cost me $10,000 or $12,000, was being fought for a purse of $25. Wouldn't that freeze your ambition?"

"These big catastrophies hurt less than the little things," continued Haughton, warmed to the subject. "It is the petty annoyances, such as getting in hock to a cab driver or having to pawn your gold teeth that are embarrassing and annoying. By the way, you never got yourself in pawn or hocked your gold teeth, did you?

"I have, and I suggest that you avoid it where you can. It's not respectable. I was forced into it by hard luck. I had gone to Denver to secure a match, perhaps you remember it—the 'Young Corbett'-Dave Sullivan affair.

"I had some money with me when we left St. Louis, but you know how that goes—I met a few merry fellows on the road out there that I held a better hand than they, and when I got to Denver and jumped into a cab I could jingle a quarter against a bunch of keys as my wealth.

"I drove about from place to place, forgetting my prospective cab bill. I was seeking fight managers. Of course I could find nobody. All morning I traveled about the cab bill getting higher every hour and nothing was doing.

"Cabby was getting nervous. He didn't know whether he had the president's secretary or a lunatic in his vehicle and finally he put the question.

"You know what putting the quesetion is? He asked me for 'mazuma.'

"'My dear sir,' said I, 'I'm only half through with you. When we finish we'll crack a bottle together,' and on we went. He was an easy mark, for a cabman.

"I tried for two more hours. It was then 2 p. m., and the cabman's horse was ready to stop at any time and rest on the cobble stones. It occurred to me that there was trouble brewing unless I found a roll and found it quick.

"I went through my pockets, but still nothing turned up. I admit I began to sweat when I saw the vehicle turn into the gutter and the cabman swung open the door and made a few remarks. I won't repeat them—they were not good form.

"Say, I didn't know what to do. If I went out one door of the cab there was the driver. If I went out the other the probabilities were it would be a policeman.

"I concluded to prefer the driver. I stepped out of the carriage, thinking hurriedly. In front of me was the old familiar three-ball sign—many times a haven when financial wreck stares one in the face.

"I felt in my pocket, as if for money, and felt something I had passed over before. I pulled it out—it was a gold tooth or the crown of one. It was a good crown and was heavy. Inspired, I marched into the pawnbroker's shop, sold the gold for a reasonablep rice and paid cabby most of what I owed him.

"Did I redeem the tooth—well, I am wearing it now. I don't suppose you care a reasonable price and paid cabby most next day and bought him that bottle of wine. Nothing like standing in with a cabmen—you may need them sometime.

"I had what I thought was another piece of good luck after that—I am always imagining I am getting lucky. My good fortune consisted in inducing Young Corbett to consent to meet Dave Sullivan. Everything was arranged and I returned to St. Louis. I borrowed enough money to pay the training expenses and transportation of the fighters. I brought both of them here; I had all my arrangements made and had sold several hundred dollars' worth of advance seats when the city fathers concluded that fighting, when champions were concerned, was not proper. I called it off and had to mortgage my billiard table to get the fighters out of town.

How He Lost $1000 Cold.

"That was another one of those cases where it is useless to kick. Grumbling does no good. Between the lines of old Omar Khayan you can read this bit of philosophy to hard luck characters.

"'If things are not coming your way there are three alternatives: Go off and die, sample juice of the grape in inordinate quantities or go to sleep. They all serve. I sleep.'

"That episode did not disturb my slumbers a bit. The only time I recall having had insomnia was after a visit to a race track. I had gone out there with $1 over my admission. Perhaps I had bummed the last. I agreed with myself that if I won the first bet I would not be a piker, but would bet the whole thing back on each race as far as the money or my winners went.

"I made three straight bets and won—this is not a dream. Some of them were place bets so that the odds were not all large and the quantity of wealth I had at the end of the fifth race was nearly a century of dollars. A good samaritan gave me a 10 to 1 shot in the last. No, I didn't hold out $10 for an emergency—I put the bunch up on the long shot.

"Never shall I forget that moment when the nags came down the stretch necks apart with my horse in front by a whisker. In an insurance company's place I would not have taken a 30-second risk on my heart's holding out.

"Ten yards from the wire my horse faltered and something happened which my eye couldn't follow. Anyhow, my horse passed under the finish wire, second."

The West End Club's president here paused and communed with himself. Then he proceeded:

"The numbers fell down across the way—and verifying the fact that the long shot had run second, I turned away tearing up my ticket. I would hate to give you a written statement as to how I felt.

"Suddenly there was commotion behind me. The mob was howling around the judges' stand. A crowd was calling on the officials for something, and presently the numbers across the track changed—my horse's number was hung up first. The winner had been disqualified.

"Well, forget about it. I hunted for the pieces—but I didn't even find a pencil mark. I couldn't even remember the number of the ticket. I borrowed a nickel and went out.

"I failed to sleep that night. I spent the evening drawing checks on my imagination."

Haughton's unfailing presentation of a cheerful face to misfortune has helped him out of many holes. Only once has he ever given a sign of faltering. For many years his motto on his club invitations to "entertainments" has been "on the up and up always."

Last winter they were about to wrest the club building from him. His fights broke badly and his receipts worse. The smile grew less frequent and came with an effort and presently on the announcement cards appeared the motto: "On the down and down now."

Not for long—as if disdaining to grumble or to let fate think she has made a conquest he had the type distributed and reset again—this time with the old story "on the up and up again."

A crisis is coming in the history of this shuttlecock of fate—another "tap lick"—a risk of all on one throw is in contemplation.

A champion is advertised for exhibition at the West End Club, the featherweight champion of America. He will fight there July 30, and whether for the manyeth time the goblet of very hard luck will be held out to him is a question he would like answered.

TWO OF THEM HERE NOW, OR THE DAWN OF THE HANSOM CAB-AGE IN ST. LOUIS

A New Yorker Walked Out of the Planters' Hotel the Other Day and Saw a Hansom Cab at the Curb—"Hello!" He Said, "If There Isn't a Hansom in St. Louis! Horse, Have the Indians Finally Captured All Those Old Stage Coaches, That You Are Driven to This?"

Everybody has pitied the St. Louis hansom cab, which has stood at the curb around the Planters' Hotel these two years, and was just as lonesome and miserable as Adam was before the creation of Eve.

Everybody will be glad to hear that the poor fellow has a mate—that there are now two hansom cabs on the downtown streets of St. Louis.

Nineteen years ago St. Louis went buggy on the subejct of hansom cabs. A concern bought about 20 of them and put them on the streets. They had steel tires. St. Louis streets in those days were paved with jolt rocks, a rough red granite quarried out at Joiler, Mo. When the hansom cabs, with their steel tires, ran over the jolt-paved St. Louis streets, the cowboys who were still in town at that early day could not hear their guns go off, and the hansoms were driven from the streets.

After that nothing was seen of a hansom cab on the streets of St. Louis until two years ago, when one bright morning a hansom cab stood just off the east curb of the Planters' Hotel, even as Columbus, on a certain day of surprises, stood off the shores of Salvador.

The driver called out to the people "Keb!" "Keb!" The people called back, "Aw, go ride yerself in the booby hatch!"

This naturally discouraged the driver. Evidently St. Louis was still a western town. All around the old courthouse stood vehicles with four wheels and bullet marks. The drivers still sat in front, where they could conveniently fight Indians. They didn't say "Keb!" "Keb!" They said "Stage." There was nothing appealing in their calls. It really made no never minds with them whether you rode or not.

According to the Cab Age, a periodical at the head of the publications in this field, hansom cabs are distributed among the chief cities of the world as follows:

London	15,000
New York	10,000
Paris	6,000
Chicago	4,000
Boston	2,000
Philadelphia	2,000
St. Petersburg	3,500
Vienna	2,400
Berlin	3,000
Rome	1,800
St. Louis	2

One day a New Yorker came to the Planters'. He walked out on the north side and saw a hansom cab standing at the curb.

"Hello! If there isn't a hansom. What's become of those old St. Louis stage coaches? Did the Indians finally capture all of them?"

The driver of the hansom did not shoot. He was a hansom driver from New York. He had never saved a mail pouch in his life. He had never known the exhilaration of galloping over the prairie with one hand around a bunch of reins and the other full of revolvers. He was all grace, and he wore one of those funny little sawed-off tiles that differentiate a hansom driver from a bogus nobleman.

The New Yorker hired the hansom. He climbed in and had himself secured behind the glass doors. The hansome had rubber tires by this time. It rolled up the street with a thumpety-thump of its own. The fat jowls of the New Yorker rolled like fat seas in a fair breeze.

"There goes the little dippy wagon with a man for the foolish house!"

People stared. The police blew their whistles and the New Yorker blew his nose. He got a nostril into the sneeze that made the police stand around and suck their whistles like babies sucking their thumbs.

The next day the New Yorker rode again. That evening he met a Londoner in the rotunda.

"Blokes, I want you to help me modernize this western city. There is a hansom cab out in front of this hotel. It has been there two weeks, and I am the only man who has ridden in it. People out here don't know what a hansom is. I called one fellow who was roasting me for riding in it, and asked him if he knew what kind of a vehicle it was. He said it looked like a woozy wagon. I told him it was a hansom cab, and he said he couldn't see anything handsome about it. Wouldn't that make you slap yourself?"

Blokes laughed inordinately. "Don't see 'ansom about it, heh? Doesn't he know 'ansom's dead?"

The New Yorker kicked himself as high as he could, and continued:

"I want you to ride in this hansom as much as you can find time to do it while you are here, and help give the community confidence in it."

So they did, and finally the hansom cab began to get a little bite out of the cab cake that is cut every day in the city of St. Louis. Recently it did so well that the owners put a second one in service over at the Southern Hotel.

So don't get frightened if you see a crowd on the street. It isn't a fight. It is the people looking at these hansom cabs—two of them together. Think of it! Think of it!

Fred Sackman drives the hansom at the Southern. He said to the Post-Dispatch:

"The hansom cab is gaining in favor here every day, and within a short while it will become as common on St. Louis streets as it is upon those of other big cities. I have never understood why it is so, but St. Louis has been prejudiced against them. When the first came the streets were too rough, but now they ride as easily as carriages, and this objection can no longer be made to them. Our patrons are mostly eastern people and Europeans who naturally look for a hansom as soon as they step from their hotels."

THAT BELLIGERENT "MUGGSEY" M'GRAW SAYS ST. LOUIS FANS ARE SIMPLY AWFUL

Manager of the New York Giants Who Has Caused More Trouble in Baseballdom Than Any Other Player Declares St. Louis Is the Worst Place in the United States for Roasting.

BY ANITA MOORE.

Clad in a business suit of soft gray, Oxford tie bulldog-toe shoes, spotless white linen shirt, black four-in-hand tie, sailor hat in left hand, dark-brown hair that would wave if coaxed a little, parted in the middle and roached well off of a high, broad forehead, steel gray eyes, deep set in the head, eyes that are as keen as an eagle's eyes that haven't any wink or blink about them, eyes that are piercing in their keenness, a good nose, but a trifle small, a firm mouth, with just a touch of cynicism playing at the corners, a strong chin and a square jaw, about 5 feet 11 inches tall, lithe, strong and athletic.

This is the mental picture I drew of J. J. (Muggsey) McGraw, manager-captain of the New York Giants, as he sat opposite me on the veranda of the Southern Hotel.

His walk, his whole appearance, is that of a brisk business man, and a very busy man is this baseball manager-captain. Before he spoke I knew he would not waste words any more than he would "strikes" when at the "plate." He is very agreeable and courteous, but he doesn't put on any extra frills or talk about the weather.

I had seen this wonderful baseball player one short minute at the plate, when he lifted a beauty out to the center. He apparently only touched the ball with the bat, but how that ball did soar up in the air, just like a swallow homeward bound. It saved the day for the Giants. I became enthusiastic and be was called "a knocker" by the howling mob of Cardinal-mad fans and rooters in the grand stand. I am sure I can't see why an artist of the ball grounds is not entitled to as much applause as the artist of the footlights.

"Why do you sometimes jump in and play ball yourself, as you did yesterday?" was my first question.

"Because I think I am stronger than the man whose place I take. I was batting for Mathewson. He is a pitcher, and as a rule the pitcher is poor at the bat. Mathewson is a clever pitcher."

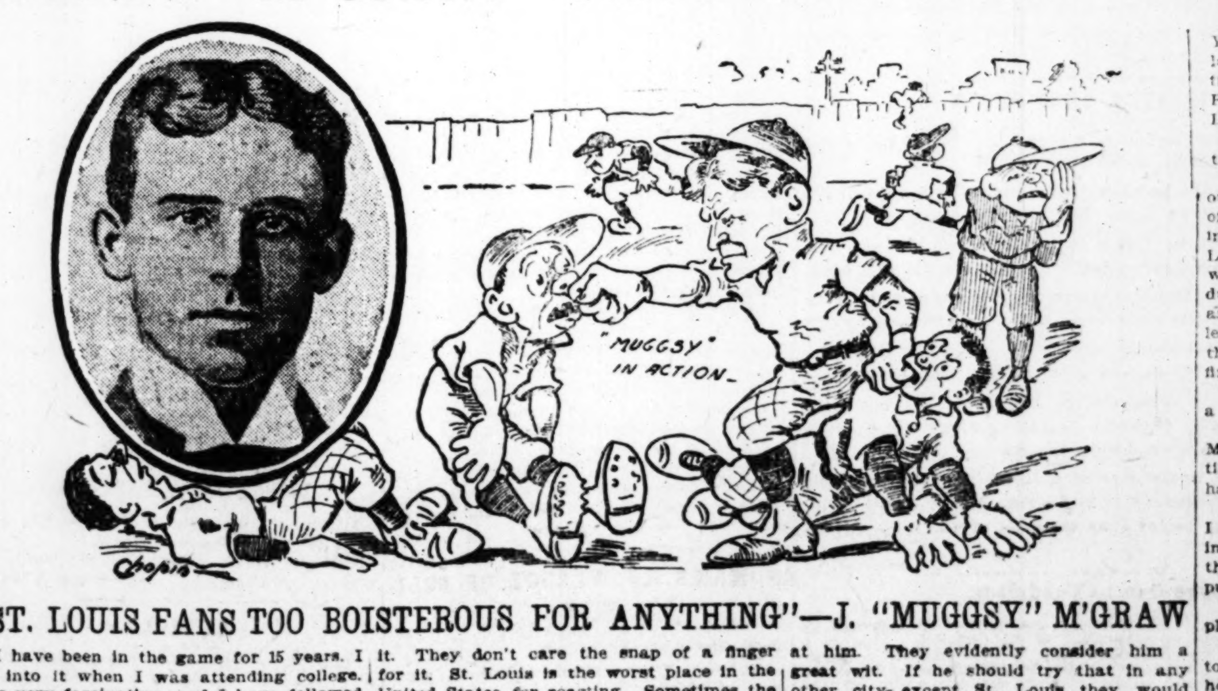
"What effect does your playing have upon your team?

"It encourages them. They know if I take a man's place I see some reason for doing so. They know that I think it is for the best. I know the game thoroughly, and understand my business and they know it."

"Do you ever pitch, catch or field for your team?"

"Yes, I sometimes field. All my best work was done at the third base and short stop."

"Why, when, where and how did you break into baseball?"



"ST. LOUIS FANS TOO BOISTEROUS FOR ANYTHING"—J. "MUGGSY" M'GRAW

"I have been in the game for 15 years. I got into it when I was attending college. It is very fascinating, and I have followed it ever since."

"How does it effect the playing of your men to be roasted by the fans and rooters in a strange town? What is your opinion of the fans and rooters?

"All the rooters and fans in the world could not effect my men. They don't hear it. They don't care the snap of a finger for it. St. Louis is the worst place in the United States for roasting. Sometimes the rooters and fans in the grandstand are positively indecent. It would not be tolerated in any other city; the police would put them out. Then in the bleachers' stand it is something awful. They had a big negro up there who called the players harsh names, and the white people laughed at him. They evidently consider him a great wit. If he should try that in any other city except St. Louis they would throw him out. Of course all towns cheer their home team, but they do it with some show of dignity, and if the visiting team makes a good or clever play they receive applause; not so in St. Louis.

"Which is the best baseball town in the country, and which is the worst?"

"I suppose you mean in attendance. New York is far the best, because it is much larger and then the game is widely advertised. The newspapers are very good to us. Philadelphia is perhaps the worst, then St. Louis and Boston."

"Do you find the presence of women at the game encouraging to your players?"

"Certainly. Baseball players are like all other men. They like to bask in the smiles of women, and their applause is encouraging and very flattering. The games in St. Louis are not very well attended by the weaker sex. I think it is in a measure due to the boisterous actions of the rooters and fans in the grandstand. To say the least, it certainly would be offensive to them or any person with any sense of refinement."

"How many 'mash' notes per week does a baseball favorite receive?"

When I asked this question Mr. Muggsy McGraw smiled. It was the first and only time he smiled during the whole of the half-hour's conversation.

"That is one thing that I cannot answer. I am a married man, and all I get I throw in the waste basket. You can rest assured that the baseball favorite, like all other public favorites, gets his share."

"Do you have any jealousies among your players?" I asked him.

"No, they all pull together for team victories rather than personal victories and honors. Baseball is a profession; it is not like football, a fad of the season. We play 140 to 175 games a season. There is plenty of time and opportunity for each member to distinguish himself in that time. They pull together for the honor of the team."

"What is the most important qualification for a baseball player?"

"Good running and staying qualities, quick action, I should say."

"At what age does a man's usefulness in a baseball life end?"

"About 37 or 38."

"What effect does baseball have on a man's morals, and what is the effect on his physical welfare?"

"As to the moral side, it is all owing to the man. Temptations in a baseball career are strong and many. A man must show his strength of character here as in any other walk in life if he is going to be a manly man.

"As to the physical side, it is a fine thing for him. He gets plenty of exercise, fresh air and sunshine all of which are essential to good health."

"Who, outside of yourself, is the best ball player in the country?" I asked as I started to leave him. A bellboy had brought Mr. McGraw's morning mail, stacks and stacks of letters, and I took the [illegible]

"Why don't you have two umpir[illegible]

"In the first place there are n[illegible] umpires. One poor one is bad e[illegible] and two would be worse. It is impossible to get a good umpire, they don't exist, so why should we go to the extra expense of paying for another stick?

"Have the umpires been unfair to your team?"

"No. A team never suffers from an umpire's supposed unfairness. One day he may make a decision against us, the next day in our favor, so at the end of the season the account is pretty well balanced."

"What are your chances for coming out as the champion team this season?

"Pittsburg has that cinched, unless something unforeseen should happen. Then we have as good a chance as any other team. You see we have a number of comparatively new men. As it is we will come in second or third for a piece of the cloth."

What he meant by a "piece of the cloth" I don't know, and I did not have time to ask him, as he was assisting me in the elevator and it shot down to the second floor. Whatever it is I hope the Giants will g[illegible] it, for [illegible] certainly play a beautiful ga[illegible]

JUDGE GANTT'S CANDIDACY.

The announcement of Judge Gantt's candidacy for the governorship in the Clinton Tribune, his home paper, is not denied. On the contrary, it seems to have been inspired by the judge himself. Besides, it has been followed by apparently authorized editorials in other state papers, which leave little doubt of his real attitude.

It is a disagreeable surprise. It grates harshly on the sense of propriety.

What will be thought of a judge of the supreme court actively canvassing for a political office? For it is given out that he does not mean to resign his judicial position.

A man who canvasses for a political office must deal with all sorts of people. He must win support by promises to politicians, some of whom are not high types of public or private character. He wants votes and in the fever of competition the candidate is apt to enter into combinations, the details of which will not bear scrutiny. Of course a man may run for governor without compromising himself, but the tendency is all the other way, and few, in these days, resist all the temptations of ambition.

These considerations apply with special force to a man in judicial office. The first rule of a judge should be to keep himself free from personal obligations. But when he solicits and obtains support can he be sure that it will not affect his judgment when called upon to pass upon cases on appeal? Suppose his most useful managers happen to be objects of a criminal prosecution and he is called upon to review the proceedings of the trial court? Will he command the public confidence as he would if free from such obligations? Will he be sure of himself, his motives, his intellectual insight and his understanding of the law?

A supreme court judge may honorably aspire to the governorship. But before becoming a candidate he should get off the bench. This is the long and short of it, and the people of Missouri will take no other view of the matter.

WHAT ABOUT BASEBALL?

What is the matter with baseball? Is every trace of altruism to be banished from the game, and are a few rowdy players to be allowed to bring the great national pastime into disrepute?

Scarcely a week passes without some disgraceful scene on the diamond. One of these occurred in St. Louis, where the drunken captain of a visiting American League team addressed insulting language to a player at the bat, resulting in a fight. In Pittsburg, only a few days ago, a body of police were called upon to protect a visiting player who had assaulted the captain of the Pittsburg National League team in another city, and last Friday "Rube" Waddell of the Philadelphia American League team, one of the bright particular stars of baseball, while playing on his own grounds left the pitcher's box, walked into the grandstand and assaulted a spectator whose conduct did not suit him.

Supposing an actor should be guilty of such breaches of decency and decorum in the presence of an audience? What would become of him and the company with which he was connected? And what, after all, is a baseball player but an actor? The thespian plays on a wooden stage, either in a theater or a summer garden. People pay to see him perform and to be [illegible]ned. The baseball player plays on a stage called the [illegible] and he is enacting a part just as much as Richard [illegible] or Francis Wilson or Joseph Jefferson ever did. BOER FAMILY BIBLES.

One of the most remarkable official documents ever issued is Lord Roberts' memorandum to officers and soldiers, urging them to return all Boer family Bibles, of which they may have come into possession.

Lord Roberts says that the Boers "set great store by their family Bibles, which often contain family records of some antiquity." He assures the officers and soldiers of his belief that they will return the books "when they learn how they are valued by their former possessors; and he thinks it unnecessary to emphasize how much such a kindly act would be appreciated by our new fellow subjects."

Isn't is rich? Isn't it humiliating to every civilized man?

These Bibles were stolen. The war in South Africa was between two civilized powers and it was supposed that the laws of "civilized war" prevailed. Soldiers have been shot by their own commanders for pilfering from non-combatant enemies, yet the British, it seems, stole even the family Bibles.

In effect Lord Roberts exhorts the officers and soldiers of the British army to be honorable, to be manly, to be decent.

What a kindly act indeed—to return stolen goods!

Dun's weekly review reports that crops are making rapid progress and that the army of unemployed is diminishing. Railway traffic is heavy, earnings thus far reported for July exceeding last year's by 18.2 per cent and those of 1901 by 18.2 per cent. Retail trade is seasonable, merchandise is fully up to the average and there is less than the customary midsummer quiet among wholesalers, while the preparations of jobbers and manufacturers indicate confidence in a large fall business.

ANOTHER VOICE FOR RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

Capt. Chittenden's Omaha address on river improvement is especially noteworthy because it voices the conclusions of a competent engineer of long experience as chief of the United States commission in charge of work on the Missouri.

The first object, in Capt. Chittenden's opinion, should be protection against overflow, but this work can be made to serve the purpose of deepening the channel and insuring a navigable channel in all the rivers. The two objects can be reached by the same engineering scheme.

This is the position assumed from the beginning by the Post-Dispatch, and it appeals with equal force to all the interests involved. The farmers in the low lands along which the rivers flow, commercial interests, river cities, rail and water transportation companies are all insured a special benefit, and the general welfare of the whole country will be promoted by the preservation of an open waterway which shall be a perpetual and never failing guarantee of competition.

The interest in this subject is enhanced by the proposals for comprehensive improvements of the Erie canal. The people of New York have learned by experience the advantages of a water route as a check to rail monopoly, and they seem to be determined to preserve and augment the protection which has served them so well in the past. A practical scheme should come out of suggestions like those of Capt. Chittenden so that the matter can be brought before Congress next winter.

LITERATURE AND POLITICS.

One of Mr. John A. Lee's titles to distinction is his cleverness as a letter writer. But he finds, like so many other great statesmen, that statesmanship and epistolary literature are both jealous and exacting; to succeed in one is to fail in the other. Success in both is impossible.

Justly proud of his brilliant powers as a writer Mr. Lee committed his thoughts to paper. While these letters illustrate all the excellencies of imagination, their composition was fatal to the writer's statesmanship because incineration was not insured. Ever since Mr. Mulligan's love of epistolary literature led him to treasure up Mr. Blaine's letters, despite that statesman's solemn injunction to burn them, no statesman relies on incineration who hopes to rise. He knows that the best letter in literature is the one that isn't written.

When Mr. Lee wrote Mr. Kelley telling him how to buy votes he made a substantial contribution to political practice. But did the letter contribute to his political fortune? Again, when he wrote Mr. Kelley asking for money because he was a ruined man, he supplied Kelley with the very reason why the money shouldn't be sent. As a bit of literature it was a masterpiece of pathos and moral pathology, but as practical statesmanship it didn't contain a sliver of driftwood.

The sugar, alum and oil of politics make good dough, but the mixture is spoiled by the wine of literature.

Mr. Lee's sad fate brings to mind those touching lines of the great poet Roland Silversmith:

When boodle statesmen take to letters
  And find too late they're given away,
How can they 'scape from dreaded fetters?
  How best remain at large, I pray.

The way to 'scape incarceration?
  Keep freedom as in times of yore?
Just plead the statute's limitation
  Or give Joe Folk some boodle lore.

Lieut. Everhart says: "How the word Jackie, or Jacky, ever came to be applied to our man-of-warsmen I do not know. Suffice it to say that, to the infinite disgust of our sailors, this very objectionable term has obtained a certain vogue among the fresh young scribblers of the press. It is never used by officers of the navy in speaking of their men." So let there be no more "Jackies or Jackys." Every faithful seaman is entitled to the respect of his countrymen.

Judge Gantt's Candidacy.

From the Lexington (Mo.) News.

Judge James Gantt is considering the matter of making the race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. This is a free country and he has a perfect right to be a candidate. However, in announcing his candidacy the proper thing to do would be to resign as supreme judge. Unless we are badly off the people will not elect a man to office while holding another, and that, too, with six years yet unexpired. Resign, judge, and then begin your canvass for governor.

THE NORTH POLE.

Two college professors, no matter their names,
Call one of them Jacob, the other one James,
One day in vacation when the weather was hot
And in all the great town there was nix a cool spot,
Decided the way of avoiding paresis
Was about the North Pole to frame up a new thesis;
So each sat him down, to the limit resolved:
And these are the theses these savants evolved:

The North Pole, the North Pole,
A hole in the ground is the North Pole.
When you get to the spot there is nothing to see—
There is nothing about but the sky and the sea—
The North Pole, the North Pole,
The slippery, slippery pole.

The North Pole, the North Pole,
An icicle great is the North Pole.
It's up in the air like a skate at a race,
You know where it is but you can't find the place—
The North Pole, the North Pole,
The slippery, slippery pole.

A Word With Reader.

A reader of the Post-Dispatch says: "Please inform me how to freshen a yellow leather traveling bag."

Reader has put us up against a delicate and difficult task. There are few persons who can tell off-hand how to freshen a traveling bag of any sort. In the first place, it depends upon how far the bag has traveled, and under what conditions. Some bags are able to go a long route without showing any signs of fatigue, while others commence panting right at the start, and are pretty well winded by the time they reach the quarter stretch. Some are freshened by their own vitality as soon as they stop going, if properly rubbed down, while others get jaded and never recover their strength or good looks.

A great deal, you see, depends on the size, breeding and general condition of the thing. As a general rule, a yellow traveling bag can go further and at the same time look better than any other kind. In case of fatigue, what's the matter with giving it a nip of the stuff which it carries along for its owner? If this does not answer the purpose, stop writing to the newspapers and apply a little common sense to the bag. That ought to freshen it.

Whether it is a "racing event" or simply a plain case of robbery depends largely upon the financial transaction between you and the bookmaker before the line-up.

RICH MEN ARE LEARNING HOW TO GIVE MONEY AWAY.

BY REV. ROBERT COLLYER, D. D.

During the last 20 years the leading American ambition has changed from money-getting to money-giving. Our millionaires are studying the art of giving. Getting has become so easy, wealth rolls in upon so many, that a vast fortune is no longer a great achievement. To give generously and usefully has become an ambition.

Our men of wealth give freely, gladly. There is no need to squeeze money out of them; just touch them, and like a full honeycomb they freely pour forth a golden stream. They do not even wait to be asked.

They build libraries, hospitals, gymnasiums, colleges, schools, churches; every paper we pick up contains accounts of vast charities and benefactions.

Never before in the history of the world has there been such an outpouring of wealth. The only thing at all comparable with it was the giving of fortunes for the building of cathedrals in the middle ages.

But that was all along one line. Today the wealth flows out in countless channels; nor is it only the very rich who are generous. We hear of the great gifts, but much is given in smaller amounts, carrying comfort and blessing to those who are in need. A Carnegie or a Rockefeller may be likened to the great Mississippi or St. Lawrence, but the thousands of less-known givers are like the countless smaller rivers and streams that refresh and bless the whole wide land.

The fact that our men of wealth are devoting themselves more to the art of giving than to the art of getting is due to the growth of our sense of social responsibility. There is a public sentiment which declares that the man who gets without giving has not realized the responsibilities of his position. He is condemned for having fallen short of his duty.

Our moneyed men know this, and in the majority of cases are quite ready to fulfill their social obligations.

There has been within the last twenty years a new realization of human unity. It strongly manifests itself in these generous gifts. It is the arising of a new ambition, and surely a noble one.

We hear much of the "money-grabbing" of the present age, but those of us who have watched the progress of the nation during the lifetime of two generations know that the nobler ambitions are rapidly taking the place of the merely commercial ones that formerly ruled us.

OUR FIGHT FOR THE HOME

Excerpts From "The Peril and Preservation of the Home," by Jacob A. Riis, Published by George W. Jacobs & Co., Philadelphia.

THE industrial supremacy that is bought at the expense of childhood's rights tends directly to man's enslavement. It is too dearly bought. Sins against childhood are sins against the home, are cheating the world of its tomorrow. And you salve your conscience in vain with the thought that those illiterate ones are children of foreigners. You let them in, to be your Americans of the day that is coming;—you sent for them, your critics say, to underbid the labor that sought a higher wage because they wanted American homes,—and it is your business to see to it that they, or their children, at all events, fit into the state of which you have made them part. Or woe to that state!

Brethren, we shall never rescue our city, you will never rescue yours, until we understand that that is what it all harks back to, that all these things mean one and the same thing; that I am my brother's keeper for good or for evil. No man liveth unto himself alone.

One day I found two boys in a back yard—for a wonder there a back yard—practicing their writing lesson on the fence, and this is what they wrote: "Keep off the grass." I was thinking the other day when I read about Pompeii and Martinique that who knows but that some time this boasted civilization of ours may be engulfed in such a catastrophe. Then, perhaps a couple of thousand years hence, when the scientific men of that day are digging down to our buried city, they will come upon one of those signs and fetch it up; and they will put their heads together and consult and expound, and then they will turn to the waiting world and announce that "the men of that day worshiped grass;" and they will not be so far out of the way, either. I have seen, in my day, the grass held to be tremendously sacred, while no one cared about the boy.

From all alleys where "the sunlight never enters" comes that growing procession that fills our prisons; where the sunlight does not enter, deeds of darkness naturally belong. When at last we fully understood this, we began to tear down the worst of the rookeries that had murdered the home. Nearly the worst of them all was the Mott street barracks. There were some 600 Italians living in that row when it was at its worst, and it was one of the few places I have known in which the rent actually rose as you went upstairs. There was a little sunlight up there, but only darkness and dirt down below. The yard between the front and rear tenement—think of calling such a crack a yard—was 5 feet 10 inches wide. I remember that well. Theodore Roosevelt held one end of the tape line when we measured it, and I the other. By the time we had got up indignation enough to settle with the barracks, he had come into the municipal government of our city and made things go. The showing upon which we arraigned the barracks was, that during a season when we watched it, one-third of the babies there had died, killed by the house. So we tore down the rear tenements, and when we did we found that the mortgage on the property, with its awful baby death rate, was held by a cemetery corporation!

I once found a little fellow picking bones and rags under an ash dump, the only home he knew being a vile shed under that pile of rubbish. That dump was in the identical spot where now one of our new recreation piers extends into the North river. If he had been left there, to grow up as he could—and he could neither read nor write—he would have grown naturally into the tough who says that the world owes him a living, which he is bound to collect as easily as he can, especially without any work. It is a lie; the world owes no man a living. It is like a bank upon which you draw according to the amount of work put into it and no more. But the boy was not left there, and, as I said, the dump that cursed his life has been replaced by a park and a play-pier. The band comes there in the evening and the crowds from the tenements, young and old; and, on the long summer days in the vacation season, the kindergartner comes and gathers her class, and there in the open they study with one another the first lessons of the new political science that shall draw us closer together and restore to us the neighborly feeling and the lost home withit.

Did I tell you of my friend whose house stands in a garden with a sand-heap in which the children dig and romp with their cat and the kittens and the terrier dog? Of how the dog will try to smother a kitten now and then in an opportune sand-hole, with the children ever on the watch to avert the threatened catastrophe? And of how they did avert it, until one unlucky day they found a dead kitten in the sand-heap. Whereupon the little girl rushed into her mother's presence with it in her apron and cried out indignantly:

"There, mamma, a perfectly good cat spoiled!"

Just so with these children of the tenement. Perfectly good, as good as any on the avenue with the brown stone mansions, they are spoiled in the tenement house slum, and the loss is ours, an irreparable loss. The chief prop under the character of the growing boy is gone. Nothing can replace it; nothing ever does.

A PHENOMENAL MEMORY.

From the Butte Inter Mountain.

Think of a man who has so memorized a book of 20 volumes that he can instantly tell you the first word on any page you may name, can repeat exactly all the words in any particular line on any page, can repeat the whole book from beginning to end, or take any chapter at random and do the same!

Such a man is in Butte. His name is Rev. David Rosenfeld, and he is from Minsk, Russia—a Jew who finds it healthier to live in the United States than in the land of Kishneff massacres.

He came to this country five months ago, and after a short visit in Chicago went on to Seattle, where he has been visiting relatives. He is here today on the way East again. Rev. Harry Weiss, Jewish rabbi in this city, is entertaining him.

Rosenfield has one of the most wonderful memories in the world. He is of short stature, with a large head, the forehead bulging prominently over the eyes—a characteristic of all those who have performed remarkable feats of memory. His beard is long and bushy, his eyes large and of kindly expression.

Rosenfield has completely mastered the whole of the Talmud and most of his marvelous feats are performed in connection with that book. Feats such as those mentioned at the beginning of this article he does with ease and readiness.

Rabbi Weiss vouches for the authenticity of the man's work.

TEXTS THAT DID NOT FIT.

The following is a good example of inappropriate quotations: A clergyman appointed to an East End living found his parish church sadly in need of repair, and gave orders for its renovation. While this was in hand the idea occurred to him to visit the mission halls in connection with it to see what might be needed there. In one of them, which was used as a mission chapel, he found a state of indescribable filth from end to end and an accompanying effluvia. In disgust he raised his eyes toward the roof, and could hardly repress a fit of laughter on reading the text stenciled on the wall behind the pulpit, "How dreadful is this place!" Another story is of an old Presbyterian clergyman who, away on a preaching engagement, found above the bed on which he was to sleep the singular advice, "Occupy till I come."

BRIGHT IS THE RING OF WORDS.

Bright is the ring of words
  When the right man rings them,
Fair the fall of songs
  When the singer sings them.
Still they are caroled and said—
  On wings they are carried—
After the singer is dead
  And the maker buried.
Low as the singer lies
  In the field of heather,
Songs of his fashion bring
  The swains together.
And when the West is red
  With the sunset embers,
The lover lingers and sings
  And the maid remembers.

POWER OF CHARM IN WOMAN.

From the London World.

Experience teaches that charm in a woman is of even greater worth than beauty. The world's history furnishes innumerable instances of this, and in the lurid light of the ghastly Servian tragedy Queen Draga stands forth as the latest example of the wondrous power of fascination. Like the poet, unhappily, she must be born, not made, who possesses this dangerous and subtle quality. But to a certain extent it can be cultivated, and Queen Draga made a cult of charm and its twin sister, tact, from the cradle to the grave. She was not strictly beautiful, she had no ancestry, she was very much the senior of the young King who risked his throne and finally gave his life for her; but she possessed to a marvelous degree the power to sway, to fascinate and to hold those with whom she came in contact. And furthermore she understood the art of dressing almost better than any other woman in Europe. She died in a peignoir, but its beauty seems to have impressed even her assassins; and in life she is said to have never missed an effect or made an error in the details of her dress. In a greater country than that in which she rose to the highest position Queen Draga would have been a European power with whom to reckon, for no woman can dress to absolute perfection and sway men and women alike by her ineffable charm without becoming a danger. Happily the ability to do both is given only to the very few, but every woman may well be counseled to make this her ambition.

HAWK AND ROOSTER.

From the Washington Post.

"I shall never turn a wounded hawk loose among my poultry again," said Mr. E. Lyddane of Maryland, at the Ebbitt.

"A few days ago I shot a tremendously big hen hawk on my country place, but the shot was not mortal, and I carried the hurt bird to my house, after securing it so it couldn't do me any harm. After getting it to the house I released it in the back yard, and immediately the finest game rooster on the place made a vicious attack on the intruder. The rooster was as big as the hawk, and I supposed would easily vanquish his crippled enemy.

"Well, the fight was furious while it lasted, but it was over in a minute, and a very dead game cock lay stretched on the ground. The hawk killed him about the third pass, and I don't think the domestic bird got in a blow. I never knew before what a fight a hawk could put up."

HIGHER EDUCATION AND MOTHERHOOD.

Margaret Bisland in the North American Review.

By the last census the increase in divorce is estimated as two and one-half times greater than the increase in population. In the Western Reserve of Ohio there is one divorce in every 11 marriages. For so appalling a social condition as this we find no parallel save in the empire at the Romans. There "the law of divorce became more widely extended and more frequently resorted to, and nothing tended more to sap the morals of the Romans than the laxity which was thus introduced into the holiest and most delicate of all human relations."

Vain and empty have been proved the hope and faith that from the highly educated mother profound advantages must accrue to the nation in the consequently superior mental equipment of her child. The highly educated woman avoids or is incapable of maternity. The exhilaration of monetary profit in exchange for her physical and mental toil and the pursuit of her purely selfish pleasure or fortune lure her from the self-sacrifice of maternity and the restraints of wedded life. Or, when wedded, she brings forth few or no children.

Always, among our upper and middle classes, where the daughters and wives enjoy the broadest and most varied mental culture, and where their avocations are semi-masculine by choice, flourish that blight and dry rot of the race, numerical decline. On the superior vitality of the well-nigh illiterate European peasant woman do we now depend largely for the maintenance of our population. On her we shall depend more and more, as time and the pressure brought to bear upon the native American woman widen the field of her own non-domestic interests.

Great as we appear in our wealth and strength, should Europe cease to nourish us with the warm blood of her vast maternity, who can doubt that we would fall an easy prey to the constitutional fragility and consequent vice that destroyed the ill-balanced and defeminized Roman empire?

As a nation we now stand most in need of a re-elevation and rejuvenescence of the precious and powerful motherhood ideal. This, and not new incentives to the spread of education or expansion of the spheres of public activities and influence among our women, is required to produce a permanent and powerful race of our own soil; a true autochthon, a stable, homogeneous and more noble type than Europe has yet created, and which as yet we only fondly imagine we see in the American of today. Wide as is the gulf which separates us from the East, the hand of nature is still heavy upon us. Not yet, even in America, will she permit Eve to eat of the fruit of the tree of knowledge and at the same time allow the race to escape eviction from this latest Eden of mankind, this fair garden of ours, planted in the western world.

THREE PRAYERS.

From the Philadelphia Record.

Three Methodist ministers, as they were dining together yesterday, talked about short prayers. "A prayer short as it was irreverent," said the first, "was offered up by a soldier before the battle of Waterloo. It was this: 'O, God, if there be a God, save my soul, if I have a soul.'" "That prayer," said the second minister, "resembles one composed by Bishop Atterbury in the early part of the eighteenth century. It was a prayer for the soldiers about to engage in battle, and it was brief and impressive. 'O God,' it ran, 'if, in the day of battle, I forget Thee, do not Thou forget me.'" The third minister, after a moment of thought, smiled and said: "When I was a lad I one day dined with two strange aunts. They set me at the head of the table and bade me say grace. I was taken aback, for I knew no grace to say, but a text popped into my mind. I rattled it off and after it was over I realized that it was appropriate enough. It was: 'O Lord, open Thou our lips and our mouths shall show forth Thy praise.'"

WALTER BESANT'S MONUMENT.

There is now on exhibiton in the Royal Academy, London, George Frampton's monument to Sir Walter Besant, which will be erected in St. Paul's by the Society of Authors. The inscription reads: "Sir Walter Besant, novelist, historian of London, secretary of the Palestine exploration fund, originator of the people's palace and founder of the Society of Authors. This monument is erected by his grateful brethren in literature. Born 14 August, 1836. Died June, 1901." The inscription conveys some idea of the activities of the man outside his books, of which there are many. In America, alone, the Harpers published 10 of his works of fiction, including "All Sorts and Conditions of Men: an Impossible Story," which is famous for having suggested the founding of the People's Palace. The Harpers also published his "London" and "Fifty Years Ago."

SHAPELY CUBAN FEET.

From the Louisville Herald.

Jack Welsh of St. Louis travels for one of the largest shoe stores in the world, their factory turning out 14,000 pairs of shoes daily, to be sent all over the United States, South America, Cuba, Germany and the Philippines. In speaking of pedal extremities in general Mr. Welsh says: "Cuban girls have the shapeliest feet in the world. Trilby wasn't French. She must have been Cuban—but then she's been dead for years. I can express the beauty of the Cuban girl's foot no better, I think, than by telling you it is the exact opposite of the Chicago woman's foot. I mean by Cuban girls those who come from the better classes—from the Spanish aristocracy who have mingled their blood with the natives. Spanish women on their native heath are not noted for the beauty of their feet. But the Cuban senorita has the perfect instep, ankle and heel which Du Maurier raved about."

I

O, won't my heart go pit-i-pat
When we have caught the kitty cat
And locked the flat in town to be away a week or two!
O, won't the kids be full of shout,
And won't we laugh as we pull out,
And won't we be unanimous in all we seek to do!

O, won't my wife be busy then,
And won't my brain be dizzy when
At last the herd unruly is aboard the train for Dwight!
O, won't the day be beautiful,
Until, for cause inscrutable,
The sky is overcast and it begins to rain for spite!

O, won't the rain be falling grand,
When in the train will, calling, stand
A man whose whole affair it is to call the town of Dwight
O, won't my wife be busy then,
And won't my brain be dizzy when
The flock of kids and bundles will have settled down to light!

We'll have to stay in town awhile
And then be driven down a mile
And dumped, with all our luggage, down beside the Gasconade.
O, how the kids will hop and shout
And chase their frisky pop about,
And then we'll pitch the tent and ev'ry lad and lass can aid!

We'll have an awful squall with this,
And afterward I'll crawl and kiss
My crying wife to make amends for calling her a fool;
And then we'll work inside and out,
Until the thing is tied and stout,
And then sit down and rest us where the breezes stir so cool.

We'll build a fire of privet wood
And cook a meal and give it good
And plenty to the kids, now gone for hours without a bite.
I'll eat enough to gorge a bear
And often say, "By George, is there
Another cup of coffee? It is fine and stout tonight."

We'll sing and burn some cedar knots
And when at length we need our cots,
We'll find some big mosquitoes there. O, what a pity, that!
O, won't the kids be busy then
And won't my thoughts be sizzy when
I think of all the screens we have upon our city flat.

We'll have at least one child to go
Upon the river wild to row,
And he'll upset and disappear before his mother's eyes.
O, won't the camp be busy then,
O, he'll be damp and dizzy when
We pull him out and wife and I combat each other's "Why's?"

O, won't it be a jolly day
That terminates my holiday,
And won't our hearts go pit-i-pat when we can call the game!
And won't the kids be full of shout
And won't we laugh as we pull out
For home—but we enjoy it, and we're going all the same!

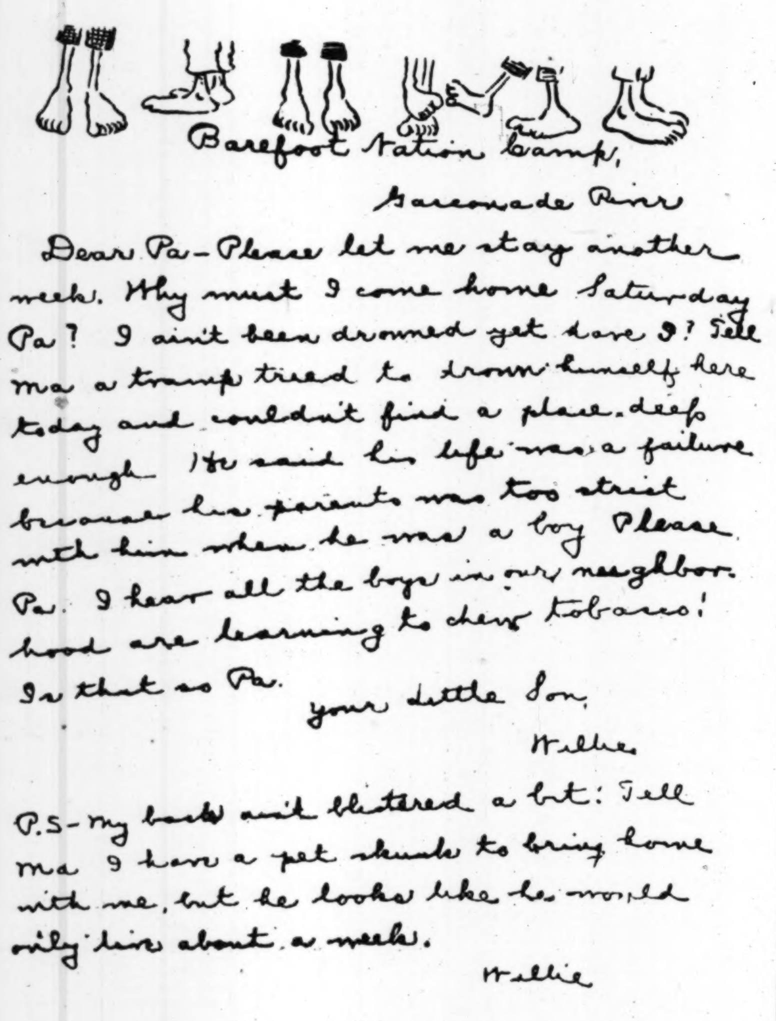
Out in the hills and beside the cool waters of Missouri many St. Louis people are tenting today on the old camp ground.

Camping is seasonable now. It is not the hunter, who awaits the season when the game is astir, but the family man who is camping today. The family man is all that the term implies. He takes the family. Go out on the Gasconade and the Meramec, up and down the banks of Big river, around the shores of the Missouri lakes, and even along the Mississippi and the Missouri. You will find him in all of these places—the summer camper who knows no greater joy than to get out in the woods when the days are hot and the nights are cool and just "potter aroun' as he durn please" for a week or two.

The St. Louis boy is a camper. Many and many are the bands of them that go out in July and August and live like Daniel Boone, with no more secure shelter than a canvas and food of their own cooking. Some of them have old tenting grounds to which they go from year to year. Others go out on one of the pretty Missouri rivers and descend it by easy stages, camping along the way. The Gasconade is one of the finest of western rivers for this sport. It carries hundreds of summer campers along with its currents every year, and it affords for all of them the sport of fishing, the enjoyment of bathing, the delectation of some of the prettiest scenery in all Missouri.

The St. Louis school teacher is another camper. Every season a colony of them go out on Big river and coast along with its flow. The annual pilgrimage of the school teachers, in which Prof. William Schuyler, assistant principal of the St. Louis High School, is one of the leaders, is an event on Big river.



Barefoot Nation Camp,
Gasconade Rivr

Dear Pa—Please let me stay another week. Why must I come home Saturday Pa? I ain't been drowned yet have I? Tell ma a tramp tried to drown himself here today and couldn't find a place deep enough. He said his life was a failure because his parents was too strict with him when he was a boy. Please Pa. I hear all the boys in our neighborhood are learning to chew tobacco! Is that so Pa.

your little Son,
Willie

P.S—My back ain't blistered a bit: Tell ma I have a pet skunk to bring home with me, but he looks like he would only live about a week.

We went out on the Frisco to Arlington. It was our plan to float down the Gasconade to the Missouri, and then on to St. Louis. We had engaged a guide. Like every other guide who is any good at all, he had no last name, but just a first name—Charlie.

We had duffle enough. When we got it down to the river bank, where the boats were to be loaded, it made a pile higher than a giraffe's ears. Charlie regarded it ominously. Guides are always stuck on taking four tons of baggage on a couple of 70-pound boats.

"I see you brung a gasoline stove," said Charlie.

"Yes, we thought we ought to have one. It is hard to have a good fire in the woods during rainy weather.

"And you fetched a few hammocks."

"Yes, hammocks will be fine out under the trees."

"What is that big table for? Goin' to open ary tailor shop on the river?"

"No, it is to eat on. We thought we would need it."

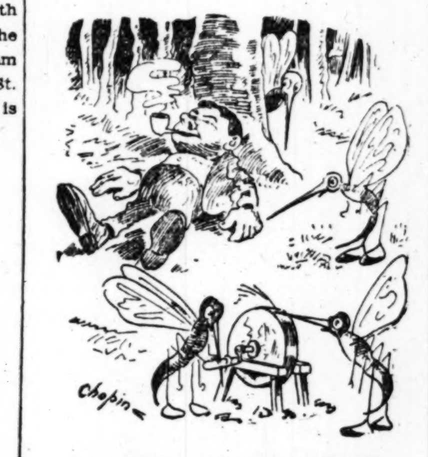
"Fiddle, eh?"

"Yes."

"Well, you'se might have saved that much of the load. The river is full o' fiddlers."

Charlie grinned as a man who has made a joke. But he still kept searching the heap of luggage with his furtive eyes, and we were beginning to feel a little sheepish about the quantity of it. Jones was wishing he hadn't insisted upon bringing the croquet set. I could see that. It was also evident that Johnson would like to have hid his case of books.



Away From the City's Grind.

Culex: They tell me the mosquitoes around Orange, N. J., have fully twice the reach that we have.

Simulum: Yes, the people are very thick-skinned around Orange.

Charlie looked like he was going to give us our coup de grace. He looked first at the heap, and then over at us. Then he said in his droll way: "I'll tell you what it is, boys. It ain't no use startin' out in any such state of unpreparedness. We've got to postpone our start until the next train gets out tomorrer."

Alarmed, we stepped forward to scrutinize the pile of luggage."

"Why can't we start? What have we

"Why, dern it, you forgot the planner."

Adolph E. Winkelmeyer is the president of the Union Biscuit Co. and one of the best-known residents of St. Louis. As a sportsman he is known throughout Missouri and Illinois. He is said to belong to something like 147 hunting and fishing clubs. One day I sat in Mr. Winkelmeyer's office while he said this:

"Speaking of camping. Why, do you know that the greatest camping ground in this big wide world is down in southeast Missouri? Nothing like it anywhere. I'll bet you that last October and November, when the ducks were in there, you could have counted 10,000 campers in Dunklin County alone. They came from every point of the compass. There were men from St. Louis, from Chicago, from New York and Boston, and from every other big city in the United States. It beats anything of the kind to be seen in any other hunting country on earth.

"You may imagine that 10,000 duck hunters camped in a single county are going to make things lively. You ought to be there at daybreak. The sun comes up with a crash of small arms that makes the earth quake. There is a rip and a roar at the first blush of the dawn. There is a deluge of deafening detonation as soon as it gets light enough to shoot at the duck himself instead of shooting at his quack. It would startle a man who never hunted in there. Actually, by the time the morning flight is over there is a smoke cloud over Dunklin County that not only obscures the sun, but darkens the earth to such an extent that the ducks, thinking it night again, all turn around and come back to roost, so that the 10,000 hunters get the morning and evening shooting there all within two hours of time and keep repeating the performance throughout the day. There are ducks down in Dunklin County. Nobody thinks of shooting at a single bird. You wait for a thousand, and then when you shoot you kill a mess with one barrel. Judging from the manner in which hunters come from all over the country, this is the only good ducking ground left in the United States. No, Grover Cleveland doesn't hunt down there. The country is too crowded with campers and hunters for a fat man like Grover to squeeze in."

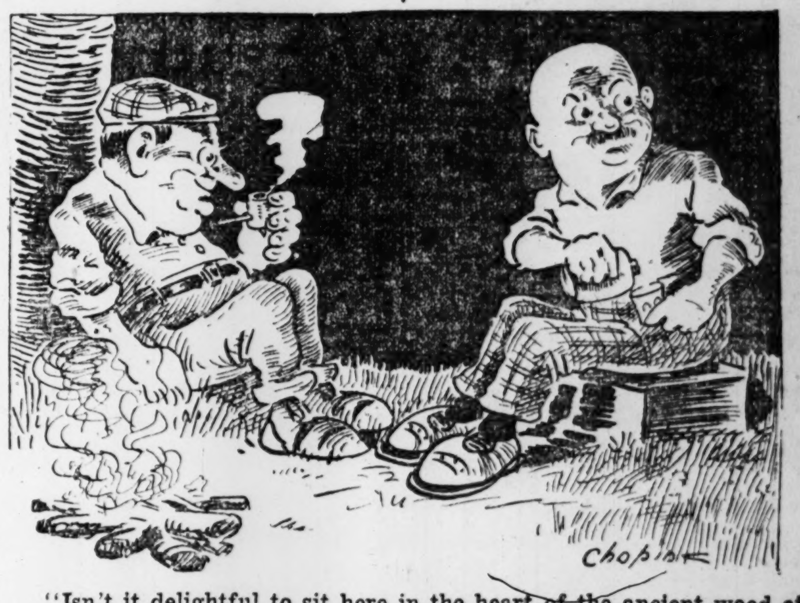
Many famous frontiersmen have camped in Missouri, even as the city people are camping today. Daniel Boone camped at Lake Marie temps Claire, in St. Charles County, Mo., and hunted there every fall after he moved from Kentucky to Femme Osage. Audubon, the naturalist, camped in Missouri in the early '40s of the last century. He had a camping experience in Missouri that he remembered all his days. The nauralist was alone in the Missouri wood watching his birds and his bugs. He came upon an Indian tepee, and asked permission to remain over night. The Indian is at best, an unsociable fellow, but Audubon was somewhat of a child of the wood himself, and he did not mind it in the least. He cooked his supper and sat around after supper writing notes of the experiences that had been his during that day. Finally he tired, and rolled up in his blanket to sleep. There was but a single room in the tepee, but Audubon was accustomed to that. He just rolled over where he thought he would be out of the way.

The nauralist judged it must be very late in the night, when, hearing whispering near, he opened one eye enough to see the Indian and his wife earnestly engaged in conversation soto voce.

It was a plain case. The Indian was going to murder his guest. He had a big bright knife. His wife was expostulating with him. But he was obdurate. He would do this deed. He had the knife, and there lay the white man, lseeping like a baby with all its teeth cut.

Audubon was no coward. He had traveled too long the wilds of the world to let anything make him shiver. He saw his finish. Resistance was useless. To fight meant to be cut to pieces, where to lay quiet meant but a single long gash in his throat. He lay perfectly quiet. The Indian almost crawled to him, thrusting the gleaming blade of the knife before. He had a horrible expression on his face—the hate of centuries concreted into a single cast of countenance. Audubon could feel the murderer's hot breath upon his face. He could see the long blade slipping up to his throat. He did not shut his eyes. He resolved to die a brave man. He braced himself for the slash, and saw the knife go beyond his throat and snip a slice of venison from a haunch that hung against that side of the tent.

It was breakfast time.



"Isn't it delightful to sit here in the heart of the ancient wood at night and feel that the eyes of many wild little creatures are slyly watching us from covert and copse?"

"Yes; I wonder if any of the women folks would see us refresh ourselves with a little booze?"

SOME THINGS CONCERNING THE "SOMEBODIES" IN ST. LOUIS

Joseph W. Folk, the Modern Ali Baba, Who Put Kibosh on the Forty Thieves.

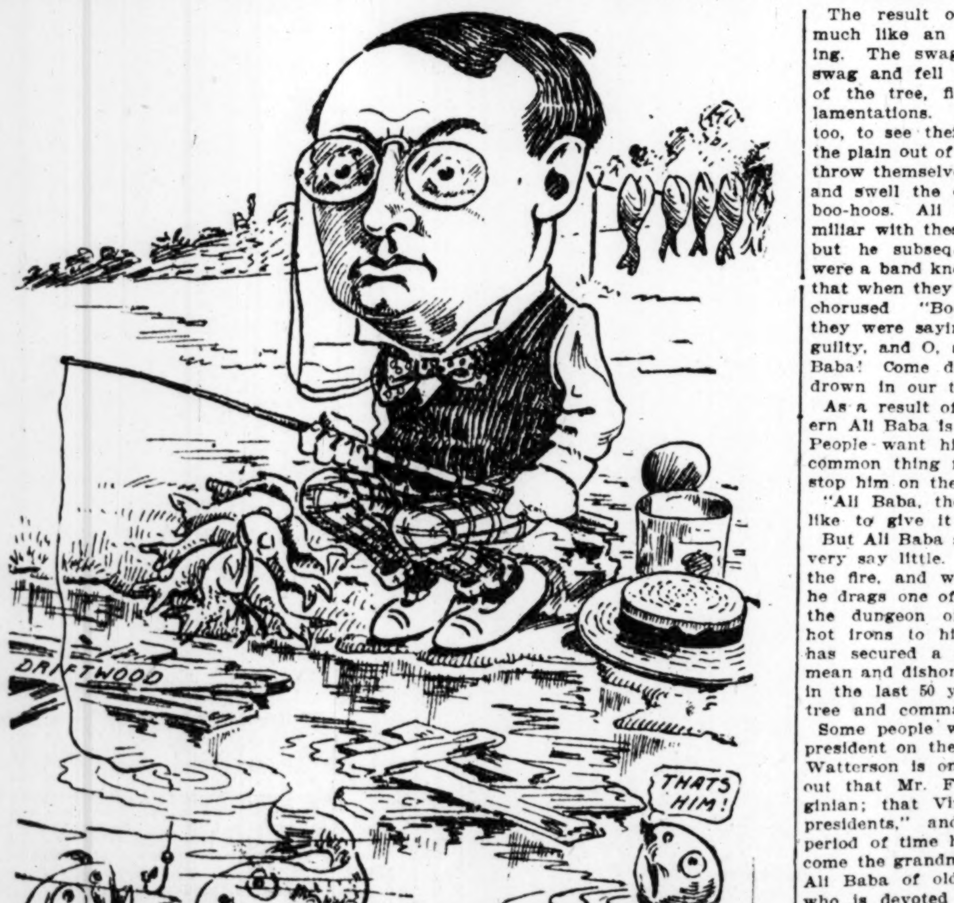
FOLK, JOSEPH W.—The modern Ali Baba. Born at Brownsville, Tenn., 34 years ago. Came to St. Louis in 1892. President of the Jefferson Club in 1898. One of the legal lights of St. Louis from 1900 to 1901, and the whole power house for the next two years.

Like the Ali Baba of old, he got his start from a high place. He was elevated to the post of circuit attorney. The elevation commanded a good view of the plain. The modern Ali Baba was young and very ambitious, and he looked carefully around him to see if there was anything doing. Directly he saw approaching a little band of what looked to be robbers. They emerged from a big Twelfth street castle wherein it was supposed there were some very bold knaves. Mr. Folk sat very still, even as the Ali Baba before him. The men approached, and, sure enough, they stopped right under him and began to talk of ill-gotten gains. Then they approached a big rock, and the leader said "Open sesame!" whereupon the rock opened and the robbers entered in. They soon came out and went their way, and Mr. Folk descended from his elevation, approached the rock and said, "Open Sesame!" even as the Ali Baba of old. The rock opened and he walked in. When he looked about him in this robbers' den he was possessed of a great wrath, and he resolved to make for the robbers quite a good deal of trouble. In fact, he would put them very much on the bum. He hid himself at the mouth of the cave, and when next the robbers returned he reached out, and, as they say in the country beyond Tipperary, he put the kibosh on them. Ali Baba took the leader of the thieves and held quite hot irons to his heels until the captive robber divulged the names of his confederates. Going in quest of these, Ali Baba rounded up the whole 40 thieves, and locked them up in his own strong Dungeon of Boo-Hoo, where he holds them as an example for all who shall follow.

Returning to his elevation, the modern Ali Baba carefully scrutinized the big highway which led to the Castle Jefferson City. This was a road much frequented by people who would steal the dots off a dead poet's I's. Ali Baba had been informed that these robbers were very bold, very swagger, and very proud, and that it really made no neverminds with them if Ali Baba, up in his tree, did see them approach. Hearing the which, Ali Baba went back into the town and secured a generous quantity of the popular wrath, which he squeezed into wads big enough and sufficiently hard to mash almost any kind of an old potato they happened to land on. Armed with these, he returned to his tree, and directly he was approached by a company of swashbuckling, swaggering fellows who were much too well-equipped to have gotten it honestly. Ali Baba permitted them to come directly beneath him, when he shouted out:

"Thief, thief,
Give me leav'?'

just as Ali Baba of old, and, without awaiting an answer, dropped a couple of his big wads of compressed popular indignation, incidentally nailing one of the leaders in the ear with a copy of the statutes of the state of Missouri.



Joseph W. Folk, from a water color by Tears.

The result of this assault was very much like an old-fashioned baby spanking. The swagger robbers dropped their swag and fell on their faces at the foot of the tree, filling the plain with their lamentations. Ali Baba was astonished, too, to see their confederates rush across the plain out of every point of the compass, throw themselves into the lamenting circle, and swell the chorus with their vigorous boo-hoos. Ali Baba was not wholly familiar with these people or their language, but he subsequently learned that they were a band known as The Blubberers, and that when they laid faces on the sand and chorused "Boo-Hoo! Boo-Hoo-o-o-o-o," they were saying "Ali Baba, we are very guilty, and O, so repentant! Kick us, Ali Baba! Come down and kick us ere we drown in our tears."

As a result of these conquests the modern Ali Baba is in honeysuckle and clover. People want him to be Caliph. It is a common thing for some rich merchant to stop him on the street and say to him: "Ali Baba, there is my house. I would like to give it to you."

But Ali Baba shakes his head. He keeps very say little. He still has his irons on the fire, and when nothing else is doing he drags one of the Forty Thieves out of the dungeon of Boo-Hoo and puts the hot irons to his heels. In this way he has secured a complete recital of every mean and dishonest thing done in Missouri in the last 50 years. He still sits in his tree and commands the highways.

Some people want to run Mr. Folk for president on the Democratic ticket. Henry Watterson is one of these. It is pointed out that Mr. Folk's mother was a Virginian; that Virginia is "the mother of presidents," and that now an adequate period of time has elapsed for her to become the grandmother of a president. Like Ali Baba of old, Mr. Folk has a wife who is devoted to him and aids him in all he does.

The tales of this modern Ali Baba have not yet gone to the publisher. They will be entitled:

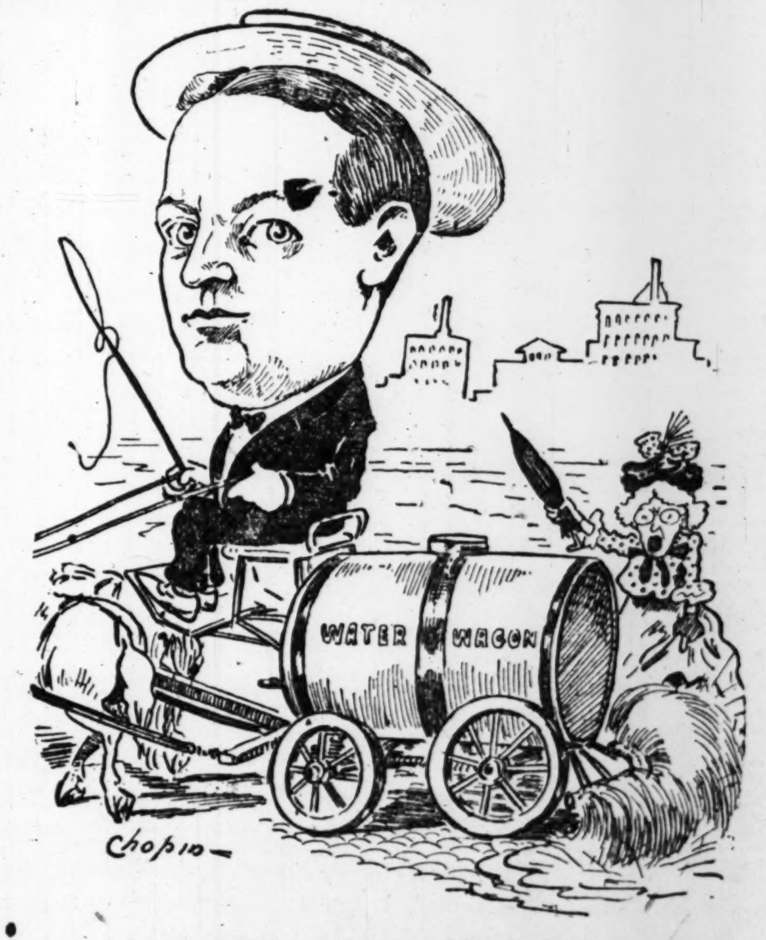
"The Prize Paradox of Prosecution, or Loosening a Boodler's Tongue by Putting the Screws to Him."

"My Colony in Mexico, or the Ghosts of Kratzenjammer Ranch."

"Confessions of a Cuss."

"How to Make a Man Talk, a Sequel to 'How to Make a Woman Shut Up.'"

"A Complete Classification of All the Wicked, Criminal, Mean, Little and Contemptible Things Done in Missouri from 1840 to 1903, as Confessed to Me Personally."



Ben C. Adkins, from an old wet plate.

Benjamin C. Adkins, Official Driver of the Water Wagon in the City of St. Louis.

ADKINS, BENJAMIN [illegible] Water Commissioner of St. Louis. Official driver of the St. Louis water wagon. Little, but O, my!

Ben Adkins is a real pocket edition of a great man. He came out of that obscurity which is the 600,000 people of St. Louis, and landed on top of the St. Louis water department, which, next to the brewing of beer, is the largest current business in St. Louis.

Mr. Adkins is smooth-shaven, dapper, wears a whole lot prettier and daintier shoe than Cinderella, and doesn't look a minute over 35. He had been in the water 20 years when Mayor Wells fished him out in his recent batch of appointments. That is, he had been in the water department. He was chief engineer there under Commissioner Flad.

He is a bachelor. He has thrown cold water on every attempt to ensnare his heart. Judging from appearances, Cupid is no amphibian, nor even a sailor. But then he is a very watchful beach comber, and he may find a comb for Bachelor Adkins ere long.

Mr. Adkins' recent appointment to the responsible post of water commissioner of the fourth city in the new world is said to have been due to merit. He knows the water business. He has been raised in the water, and you can't sink him on anything pertaining to the science of hydraulics.

"What he don't know
Of H-2-O—
That little fellow Ben;
Is H-O-T
A-I-R—See?
Among less knowing men!"

is the way they sing it up at the Chain of Rocks.

Hydraulics is a deep study. Anyone is more likely to be submerged in it than float into any such delightful harbor as that in which Mr. Adkins is moored to a $4000 salary this very minute. He's the whole splash. During the recent high water he simply chained himself to the responsibilities of his position, spending days and nights at the Chain of Rocks. He is a graduate in hydraulic engineering, and his long association with the water department enables him to act with a quick intelligence where a man less posted would plug along and accomplish but little. Mr. Adkins has gone through the whole maelstrom of the St. Louis water question, and has carefully investigated all the suggestions seeking clear water for St. Louis. He is expected to separate the pipe stories from the practical suggestions and tell us whether we ought to use Missouri river water, filtered; whether we should continue using M[illegible]sippi-Missouri water and filter it; wh[illegible] we might get clear water by the gravity plan from the Meramec spri[illegible], or whether we ought to dig each one of us a cistern and pray every morning for rain.

Mr. Adkins' spec[illegible] gravity isn't anything to brag of. He weighs about 115 pounds, but he is a heavy thinker, and this is an age in which the heft of a man's thoughts is of vastly greater importance than the thickness of his thighs.

He is one of the owners of the St. Louis Browns, and that he hasn't killed them in the last thirty days is proof enough that he has a forgiving nature. Ben Adkins has a great many friends, is right in the swim, has drowned all his enemies, and is plenty cool and clear-headed enough to give St. Louis cool, clear water during the Fair.

Never within the memory of the "oldest inhabitant" have things social been at the low tide they are just now and there is not even the ghost of a sign of things changing for weeks.

The topic that has taken precedence over everything else has been the Blair's juvenile lawn party on Tuesday evening.

Tuesday evening there was something doing both in town and in the suburbs. The question put to all the members of the smart set all week was: "Did you go to the St. Louis Club lawn party? No? O, you went to Mrs. Blair's then."

There is nothing absolutely new about these juvenile parties. There were any number of them given in fashionable circles last winter and the winter before that, too, for that matter.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hoyt gave one of these affairs as far back as 1900, making them positively ancient history.

Mr. Hoyt on this occasion was "Little Boy Blue" and Mrs. Hoyt "Bo Peep." Mr. and Mrs. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson, Mr. and Mrs. Annen and Mr. and Mrs. Buckner were much in evidence.

"Jack Horner," "Red Riding Hood," "Little Miss Muffett," "Jack Sprat," "Cinderella" and all the little folk of the nursery were "among those present."

Miss Sturges, who was Miss Marie Hayes, gave a function the winter before she married and it took the form of a children's party. One of the handsomest children on this occasion was Eugene Abadie who represented "Little Lord Fauntleroy" with black velvet "knicks" and wide lace trimmed collar and blond wig, which was wonderfully becoming to his clear complexion and black eyes.

The first of the monthly lawn parties at the St. Louis Club brought out all of society still in town. The lawn, with its festoons of many hued lights strung from the Lindell and Olive entrances and from trees and shrubbery made a pretty setting for the costumes of the ladies.

Mrs. Asby Chouteau had her guest Miss Pangbounie of Baltimore with her. Mrs. Chouteau was as beautiful as she ever was as Miss Cora Baker, when she was one of the reigning beauties in St. Louis. Her gown was of shirred white mull with a suggestion of pale blue about it and her pink rose hat gave the tout ensemble a decidedly Frenchy appearance. Miss Pangbounie wore a gown of cafe a lait cerepe and Gainsborough hat of white lace and feathers.

In the party were Mrs. Diaz, Albertini and Mr. George Neidringhaus. Mr. Lewis June sauntered in late, after a board meeting, looking his usual congenial, cheeerful, well satisfied self.

Gen. Fitzhugh Lee was one of the guests of honor. Several of the Chinese Imperial World's Fair commission were present. Mr. Tong Suh Yu, Mr. Ma Kang Yu, Mr. Chong Yu Tong and Mr. Ow Yang Kee mingled with the crowd and enjoyed the popular airs played by the band.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Luyties were with friends. Mrs. Luyties looked stunningly pretty in her white crepe gown, lace coat and white hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gardiner, who have lately returned from a yachting trip on the Gulf, were in a party composed of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Braer and Mr. and Mrs. Will Gardiner. The Leland Booghers, Howard Boogher, Tom Haleys and Mrs. Leonard of Louisville were seated at a large table.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Limburg and Mrs. Gillman and R. Park von Wedelstaedt came together. Mrs. Lineburg was in white crepe and Mrs. Gillman in pale pink with Arabian lace coat and white hat.

[illegible]h interest has been shown in the [illegible]gement of Miss Josephine Walsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Walsh, and Capt. John Savage Bates of Annapolis. Miss Walsh is related to most of the families socially prominent in St. Louis today, and there [illegible] probably none of the younger girls in [illegible] here who has greater family pres[illegible] and position.

She was one of the debutantes of the past winter. Her first formal bow was made at the V. P. ball when she served Mrs. Clark Street (Miss Maud Wells) as maid of honor. Her marriage will be one of the ultra-fashionable affairs of January.

The engagement was announced this week of Miss Belle Evens Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Taylor, and Mr. J. Thorpe Blythe of Ottawa, Can.

The wedding will be quietly celebrated August 11 at the Taylor home on West Morgan street, and the bride and bridegroom depart immediately for their Canadian home. Miss Thompson is a charming young girl and regrets are heard on all sides that she will make her home away from St. Louis.

Miss Clyde Arbuckle, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. James Arbuckle, and Miss Gibson of Dallas, Tex., will join the St. Louis coterie at French Lick Springs the latter part of this month.

Miss Arbuckle is one of our handsome girls, an excellent horsewoman and whip and she has most charming and gracious manners. It was Miss Arbuckle who last summer entered a sewing contest in the East, Boston, I believe, and won the prize for the best made shirtwaist, made in the shortest time. She will go from French Lick Springs to Chicago, where she will be the guest of her brother, Mr. Macklyn Arbuckle, and his bride.

MARY MANNERING.

WEDDINGS.

Miss Anna Chichester Galvan, the beautiful daughter of Mrs. John D. Galvan, was quietly married to Mr. Will Albert Thomas at St. Theresa's Church Thursday, July 16. The bride was attended by her pretty sister, Lulu T. Galvan, and the bridegroom by Kier Galvan. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas left immediately for a tour of the Northern states. They will be at home on Thursdays after August 26, at 4358 Swan avenue.

OUTING PARTIES.

The Montreal Club held their first outing at Carondelet Park in honor of Miss Lillian A. Lewis of De Soto, Mo. Boating and various outdoor games were indulged in, after which a luncheon was served by the young ladies. Among those present were:

Misses—
Lillian N. Lewis,

The engagement of Mr. Whitelaw Sanders to Miss Le Gare of Washington and the visit here of Mr. Jack Le Gare has brought about some enjoyable parties, at which the honored guest was Baron Karl von Lowenthal. Mr. Sanders was host. The first affair was a musical given Monday evening at the home of Mr. Sanders, 4393 West Pine boulevard. A number of artists assisted at this affair, which was thoroughly informal. Tuesday a breakfast was given at the St. Nicholas. Covers were laid for eight and it was a lavish spread. A box party was given the same evening at Koerner's, to see the "Merchant of Venice." The guests were:

Messrs—
Baron Von Loewenthal,
Leslie Norman,
George W. Walsh, Jr.,
Herr Von Mueller of the Austrian embassy.

Messrs—
Harry Burkhardt,
Jack De Gare of Washington,
Humphrey Camp,
Whitelaw Sanders.

Mr. Ralph Orthwein will early this week give a coaching party on his tallyho out into St. Louis county. A long trip will be made by easy stages, making the circuit of the country club. The affair is to be given in honor of Mr. Lawrence Hanley. The party wil take luncheon enroute and return in time for the evening performance at Koerner's, where the trip will windup with a box party.

A pleasant lawn party was given by the Yale Club Saturday evening at 4829 Hammett place. The lawn was beautifully decorated with Chinese lanterns, and dancing was indulged in until a late hour. Among those present were:

Misses—
Ida Feist,
Alma Grote,
Olive Landzettle,
Neoma Beckham,
Nell Robards,
Marion Robards,
Nell Shea,
Mona Robards,

Misses—

BIRTHDAY PARTIES.

An enjoyable little party was given Tuesday at the home of Mrs. T. A. Arnold, 2324 Adams street, to celebrate the sixth birthday of Vera Krein. Music and recitations by the children were enjoyed after which dainty refreshments were served.

Among the little folks were:

Vera Krein,
Mazie Geiger,
Lillie Bosley,
Gertrude Hartman,
Ella Custard,

Edna Wall,
Hellen Wall,
Lorena Werner,
Howard Werner,
Elmer Krein.

A surprise party was given to Mrs. Mrs. Dave Sabine of Cottage avenue, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Cochran, entertained Sunday in honor of her daughter Annunciata's birthday. During the afternoon games were played and refreshments served. Those present were:

Misses—
Alline Rossi,
Pauline Cafferata,
Clara Rossi,
Neta Solari,
Nellie O'Rourke,

Francis Kelly,
Elva Cunningham,
Ethel Smith,
Elva Stires.

One of the pleasantest events of the week was the hay ride given as a birthday surprise to Miss Anna Plitt of 4739 Kennerly avenue, by a party of friends. The guests met at Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Brooks' home, 4545 Lucky street, from where the wagon, well filled with hay and decorated with Japanese lanterns, started shortly after 8 o'clock, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Shaffer. The gentlmen wore the garb of western ranchmen, while the ladies were more timidly costumed as the modern country maids, though not forgetting the red handkerchief as a scarf. The party arrived at Miss Plitt's about 8:30 and then drove out over the Olive street road to Clayton.

Those participating were:

Messrs.—
George Bewig,
Leonard D. Groves,
Howard Shipley,
Clem Benthrop,

Messrs.—
Eugene Burton,
Harry Landvogt,
George Morris,
Lee Brinkman.

Misses—

MARCONI COMING WITH NEW IDEA

Will Revolutionize the Wireless System After His Arrival Here Next Month.

GREAT TOWERS TO BE RAZED

Not Only Will System of Transmission Be Simplified, But the Service Will Be Improved.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Marconi will return to this country next month to revolutionize wireless telegraphy.

It is said at the office of the Marconi company today that, until the arrival of the inventor, the details of the new system could not be made public.

It is known that the changes will be most radical and it is expected that the tall towers, the most cumbrous part of the present system, will be dispensed with and that the visible means of communication will be so reduced that the wonder will be greater than ever.

"We do not like to talk about these things in the absence of Mr. Marconi," said one of the New York managers. "As it does not look well to shout before the thing is an acknowledged fact. The Post-Dispatch can say that the new system will be a remarkable improvement over the old, and, for such a short period since the discovery of wireless telegraphy, it will make a new record in the advancement of an invention.

"The contract with London Times will be carried out with the tall towers now in use at Cape Cod, Mass.; Cape Breton, N. S., and Poldhu, Wales, but, after that, the new style will be introduced, and Mr. Marconi's return to this country is for the purpose of carrying it out.

It Will Not Be Done in Two Weeks.

"It will not be done in two weeks, as printed, nor will it consist of a current skipping from wave to wave, as also published. Other than that, I cannot give any details at this time but the removal of the tall towers is most probable."

In speaking of the publication of newspapers aboard ships, Marconi's associates say the only practical plan now possible is the transmission of news from either shore to an approaching or departing ship not more than 250 miles from the shore station.

This is because the instruments on stamships are not powerful enough to keep in touch with the main land for any longer distance.

"Before long," said the New York representatives, "this will be changed so that in time a vessel will be intouch either with the western or eastern shore during the entire passage. We expect that rapid strides will be made and Mr. Marconi's reappearance is awaited with deep interest.

"He is the shining light of the wireless world and we simply reflect the light when it is turned this way."

Electricians, generally, are pleased with the report that the clumsy tower system is to be abandoned, as it has been regarded as a temporary makeshift, the pictures of which would be laughed at in a few years. As a resut of the new discovery, the Marconi plants at Cape Breton, Cape Cod and at Poldhu will be remodeled before the close of the year and the tall masts and suspended wires will be things of the past.

Before the change is made, the transmission of commercial messages across the Atlantic will be resumed, in connection with the business contracted for between the Marconi company and the London Times.

A "Wireless Bridge" across the Atlantic was maintained by the Campania, which brought to her pier this morning. She was in daily "touch" with shore and through a chain of other ships and stations. The different ships with which she talked being so many "links" and "supports."

"No other steamship company in the world has so large a fleet of steamships equipped with the Marconi wireless system as the Cunard," said Mr. Graham, the purser, yesterday, "and, to this number of floating stations, the complete wireless bridge is due.

In the event of any accident, the system, combined with the number of ships supplied with the wireless telegraph, would be invaluable."

YATES BACK FROM TOUR OF EUROPE

Says He Can't Proceed Against the Lynchers, but Would Never Pardon Them.

HAD A GOOD TIME ON TRIP

Declares He Is for Roosevelt's Nomination and That He Has No Designs on the Presidency.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Gov. Richard Yates of Illinois returned on the Campania today, accompanied by Mrs. Yates, Miss Margaret Strong, daughter of Col. Strong of the governor's staff, and Dr. L. C. Taylor, assistant surgeon of the Illinois national guard. They went abroad two months ago.

When he went away the governor said that Illinois was not, as a state, affected by the negro question.

He was told that two or three days after he departed a negro was lynched at Belleville, in his state.

"I deplore lynching," said he.

"The punishment of the lynchers belongs to another branch of the state government, but I can assure you that, if any are sent ot prison for such an act, I will take good care that they don't get out."

The governor will remain in New York a few days. He will go to Washington and possibly to Oyster Bay.

The governor has been having a good time on the continent, and went as far south as Rome.

While away he refused to read the newspapers.

"When I go away for a vacation," said he, "I go away for nothing but rest and pleasure. That is one thing I like about the President. When he works he works hard, and when he goes to play he plays hard."

Gov. Yates said that he had no presidential or vice-presidential aspirations, and that he was heart and soul for President Roosevelt's nomination.

When he had said that there was only one office higher than the governorship of Illinois, and that was the presidency, he had not meant that he himself was after the presidency.

"I have been for Roosevelt for some years, and I repeat now, as I did when I sailed, that we in my state are in favor of President Roosevelt."

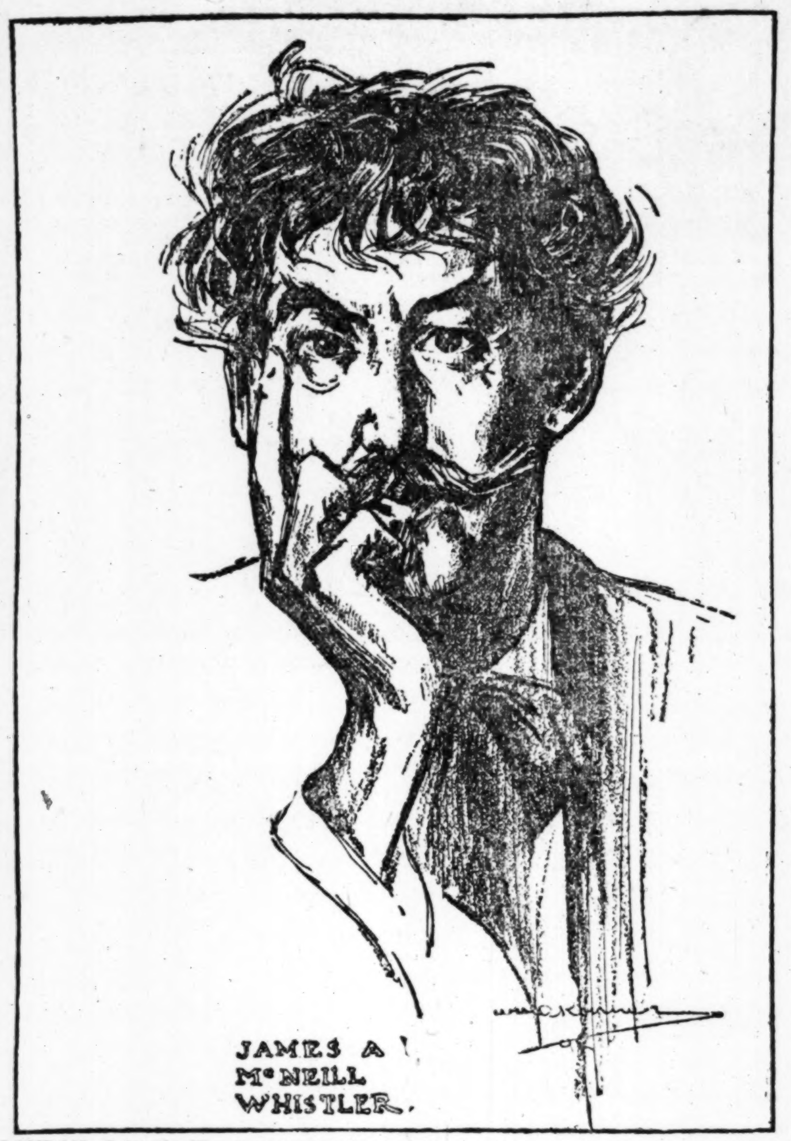
WHISTLER ORDERED THAT NOT EVEN FRIENDS BE TOLD OF HIS DEATH

Eccentric Artist Told Attendants Just Before End That He Did Not Wish Anybody to Know the Particulars of His Illness and Demise.



JAMES A McNEILL WHISTLER.

LONDON, July 18.—The last instruction given by James McNeil Whistler, eminent American artist, who had long resided in London, prior to his death yesterday, were quite characteristic of the man.

When the Associated Press representative called at the house today, he was informed that the artist had left stringent instructions that no information whatever regarding his illness or death should be given either to his friends or the newspapers.

It has been nearly a year since Mr. Whistler shut up his beautiful studio in the Rue du Bac, Paris, and came to live in London.

During the interval he seldom returned to Paris.

He lived in an old house which he formerly occupied in Cheyenewalk, Chelesa. It is a picturesque building facing the Thames and is overgrown with creepers. The studio is at the back of the house.

Whistler's friends could not imagine why he returned to London, as he disliked the place, its climate and despised English art. Whistler had been in bad health ever since he returned to England. He suffered from some internal complaint. He went occasionally to dinner parties with friends, but gradually led a more and more secluded life.

The exact nature of his complaint is not known. He grew rapidly worse a few days ago and died quite suddenly yesterday.

Famous for His Eccentricities.

Whistler was as famous for his eccentricities as for his art. He was born at Lowell, Mass., in 1834, and after a good education went to West Point. Military discipline did not suit him, however, and he became an employe of an etching firm in Boston. On his first day there, being asked to etch a map, he performed the task that was given him with great credit and then proceeded to draw caricatures on the edge of the plate with the etching needle, including one of the proprietor of the establishment. These he intended to blot out, but forgot to do so, and when the plate came to be printed all the caricatures appeared on the margin. Whistler immediately was dismissed.

Just as Whistler was leaving the office he passed through the proprietor's room, and his eye was caught by a huge magnifying glass that lay on the chief's desk. This glass was no ordinary one, but was used on the most solemn occasions only, and was held in sacred awe by his employes.

Whistler, full of bitter thoughts, stooped over the desk for a moment and painted a sprightly little red demon right in the center of the sacred magnifying glass, and passed on his way with a smile. The next day, when the great man solemnly lifted his glass to inspect something, he saw nothing but a horrid little grinning demon, and dropped it on the table with a howl, thinking that he had gone out of his mind.

Whistler's early days in Paris, whither he went ofter his Boston experiences, were not of the most pleasant character and soon after his arrival he nearly starved. Finally he got a commission to copy a picture in the Louvre, but he had no money to buy either canvas, palette or colors.

Used Another's Painting Materials.

Accordingly he went early to the Louvre and when the door was opened to the room where the painters' supplies were stored he selected a suitable canvas and palette, never inquiring as to the ownership, posted himself before the picture he was to do and studied it carefully while the other artists were setting up their easels. Then he sauntered jauntily to a neighbor and fell into conversation with him, meanwhile helping himself to what colors he needed from the palette of the man before him. The bull had been taken so boldly by the horns than the despoiled only grinned and said nothing.

He was one of the most extraordinary men in appearance on the street that London and Paris ever saw and his hair was the most amazing part of his get-up. It was all arranged in separate curls artistically put together. All were dyed black with the exception of one, which remained quite white, and which on grand occasions was tied up with a small ribbon.

He always got himself up very elaborately in a way sure to arouse attention. He wore a very long black overcoat rather like one of the little men in the Noah's ark, and a French top hat with the brim standing straight out. In his hand he always carried a kind of wand of bamboo about four feet long and very thin, which was caricatured by Du Maurier in "Trilby."

Whistler's excessive vanity was exhibited in all shades, from that which showed his contempt for ignorant pretension to that which seemed no deeper than an extravagant delight in flaunting the cap and bells. How he replied that "Nature was creeping up" to his pictures and the famous retort, "Why drag in Velasquez?" are well known, but allied with them is the less-known, or perhaps unknown reply he made to one of the royal princesses who met him at the Royal Academy and expressed her surprise at seeting him in a place where he was reported never to enter.

"Well," returned Whistler, "one must do something to add interest to the show, so here I am."

Wrote Two Charming Books.

His famous lawsuits have furnished the subjects for two unique and charming books, "The Gentle Art of Making Enemies" and "The Baronet and the Butterfly—A Valentine With a Verdict." The former is a forcibly original compilation of the criticism directed against him by John Ruskin, on the one hand, and on the other the answers provoked from him by those criticisms.

"The Baronet and the Butterfly," is, if possible, "a more original presentment of the pros and cons of the famous suit of Sir William Eden against Whistler for the possession of an almost finished painting of Sir William's beautiful wife.

The Whistler pictures are good illustrations of values, arising from atmospheric effects. They are the most delicate and refined studies in values in the whole range of modern art. His figure pieces are usually designed as studies in grays, pinks, yellows, whites, blues, reds, browns or whatever color he selects. This color is carried through the whole picture.

One must have technique to appreciate Whistler. He was an artist's artist. Those unacquainted with technique will look for something he does not give. He never had any intention to tell a story or express a sentiment. He was elusive. He restrained his note and never forced it. His work had the pictorial charm of mystery and suggestiveness and the technical effect of light, air and space.

Foreign residence has developed in him a distaste for his own country. His visits to his native land were brief and infrequent, though his travels about the continent of Europe occupied a considerable share of his time.

Sensitive to the slightest criticism of himself or his work, he was not always too considerate of the feelings of others. His passion for making persons uncomfortable was proverbial. On one occasion [illegible] a young artist in London, his furniture was seized for debt. So completely did the bailiffs loot his studio that nothing was left with the exception of a few of his pictures, the beauties of which were unintelligible to the artist's unwelcome visitors.

The absence of furniture did not in the least disconcert the young American, who promptly proceeded to paint a beautiful set about the walls of his room. A short time later, on receiving a call from several distinguished Londoners, he invited one of them to be seated, an attempt which proved a signal failure, much to the embarrassment of the victim and to Whistler's supreme delight.

WOMAN ATTACKED BY NEGROES

Military Scouring Country for Men Who Assaulted Miss Mullen and Escort.

POST-DISPATCH BUREAU,
1345 Pennsylvania Avenue.

RICHMOND, Va., July 18.—In front of the Hermitage Golf Club grounds, in the western end of the city, James V. Shelton, former member of the House of Delegates from Louisa County, was knocked senseless and dangerously hurt by three negroes. The men then attacked Miss Patty Mullen, a probationary nurse at the Old Dominion Hospital, in this city. The military are scouring the country for the negroes.

When Mr. Shelton recovered consciousness he hailed the nearest car and the motorman and passengers ran in the direction where Miss Mullen had been attacked. They met her staggering back. She was in a semiconscious condition from fright and hysteria.

Miss Mullen is a pretty girl of 22 years and had only been at the hospital two weeks. It was at Mr. Shelton's solicitation that she was taken as a pupil nurse, she being his cousin and from the same county. Mr. Shelton is dangerously hurt.

TO BE GIVEN SPECIAL FLAG.

Assistant Secretary of War Will Be Honored.

POST-DISPATCH BUREOU,
1345 Pennsylvania Avenue.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Juluy 18.—The Assistant Secretary of War is to be raised to the dignity of having a flag designed for his exclusive use when he goes out to look over a camp of the regular army or decides to go aboard a warship. Heretofore the President and the Secretary of War have been the only ones entitled to have a special flag flown in honor of their presence at a post or camp.

Ordinarily the Assistant Secretary has charge of such peaceable work as dredging the rivers of the country and selecting the clerks who are to keep the record of the warlike doings of his superior.

WIDE WATER, Va., July 18.—Like the ark, Prof. Langley's airship, which may be seen in St. Louis next year, is perched on a little elevation, surrounded on all sides by miles of flowing waters.

For the first time since the invention that may revolutionize transportation was brought here, last Tuesday, the skies are overcast, and at intervals rain falls in a deluge.

Beaten for hours by the strong southeast gale, the houseboat containing the airship slipped her morings this morning and traveled two miles up the Potomac.

The vessel dragged with her one of the two large buoys between which she was first anchored. She remained in her new position throughout the morning, but it is believed that Prof. Langley will have her towed back. He is said to have been on board during the drifting. A temporary interruption of the plans was the chief damage.

The atmospheric conditions are such in any event as to render any experiments today unlikely, if not impossible.

It is intended to first test the model and, afterward, the airship itself. Such changes may be suggested by the flight of the model as to require days or even weeks of reconstruction in the big aerodrome.

Prof. Langley maintains his own counsel. He gives no intimation as to his plans. The experiments may be tomorrow, or may be a month hence. He may remove the houseboat to a more secluded spot, although one so favorable cannot be found. Secrecy is desired above all things.

Secrecy About All Operations.

Work is being prosecuted with unfailing diligence. Men are burning the midnight oil. The glare of forge fires spreads out at night over the widening waters of the river. The sound of the hammer is heard. But the precise character of the operations being conducted are known only to Prof. Langley and his corps of assistants.

As the government is paying $70,000 for the experiments, Congress having appropriated money for the specific purpose, the war department is assisting Prof. Langley to preserve all possible secrecy.

A regular soldier, armed with a Krag-Jorgensen rifle, guards the houseboat. He warns trespassers not to come within a certain radius.

It is not known whether Prof. Langley himself or one of his assistants will be in the airship when it takes its initial flight.

The aerodrome, unlike the inventions of M. Santos-Dumont and other aerial navigators, is an actual flying machine. It is literally a machine without gas to support it, in no way resembling a balloon.

The aerodrome, from words signifying the "air runner" was chosen as a name for it by Prof. Langley to indicate the principle of its action.

Hendreds of Times Heavier Than Air.

The aerodrome is hundreds of times heavier than the air.

The balloon in a calm remains indefinitely suspended over one spot.

The aerodrome, built almost entirely of steel, is far heavier in relation to the air than a ship of solid lead would be in relation to the water and could not remain in the air if still.

The essence of its action is, then, its rapid motion, without which it could not remain suspended. It is moved rapidly by a steam engine, carrying its own fuel and water supply, by which it can be kept up indefinitely, while it is also—and by the necessity of its own action—rapidly advancing.

The problem of aerial navigation has engaged the attention of Prof. Langley for the last twenty years. The present machine is the development of his experiments conducted through these years. At intervals during this time models have been successfully used, and it is the expectation of the professor's many friends that the vessel will come up to the anticipations of the inventor.

The temporary resting place of the aerodrome is an ordinary houseboat, about 30 feet wide and 50 feet long, flat bottomed and drawing probably not more than a foot of water. The interior is fitted up as a workship, with machinery and benches.

To Get Start by a Preliminary Run.

Upon the roof is built a massive framework, forming a large turntable, on which is built a broad platform with wide railings around it, and through the center of which, and projecting over the water some distance, is built a section of track upon which the airship is to be given its initial momentum, and from which it is to be launched.

It is believed by the inventor that well-grooved tracks, together with the powerful motors, will make it possible to obtain a fairly high rate of speed before the machine leaves the car.

Whether Prof. Langley, in starting the machine, intends to rely upon the ability of its silken wings to sail a short distance, aided by the stationary power of the car, and a clever arrangement of plans, or whether the wings will be set in motion as soon as the machine is hurled into the air, remains to be seen.

It is probable, however, that the wings will be started simultaneously with the departure of the machine from the car, in order to maintain its advantage of thirty feet or more above the water. The pilot must then set his course toward higher air. The response will mark the success or failure of the airship.

The question of successfully launching into the air a machine that weighs in the neighbood of 1200 pounds is a serious one.

It is noticeable that all large birds when about to fly, run a short distance and rise into the air with a prodigious flopping of wings. When once well launched on their flight they find it possible to sail easily with outstretched wings. This may be the case with the aerodrome.

REGATTA Entries Promise Great Contests — CARDINALS Fight Against Lack of Harmony — ATHLETICS Womans' Meet for World's Fair Year — RACING

MANY ENTRIES TO ROWING REGATTA

Southwestern Rowing Association's Annual Races Will Be Rowed July 25 and 26.

TO BE HELD AT CREVE COEUR

Frank J. Snite of Chicago and John Joachim of the Westerns Meet in Single Sculls.

Rowing interest in St. Louis for the present season will reach its climax with the opening of the annual regatta of the Southwestern Rowing Association at Creve Coeur Lake next Saturday.

Two days of contests are scheduled and eight clubs, representing a total membership of several thousand, will take part in the affair.

Saturday will be "Junior Day," and seven events in the junior class will be decided as follows, starting at 3 p. m.:

Junior Four, Junior Singles, Junior Gig, Junior Pair, Junior Doubles, one-quarter mile dash for singles and the Junior Barge.

The last named event will be the feature of the day and seven crews are announced to start, including all the St. Louis members of the S. W. R. A. and the South Side Club of Quincy.

The most spirited match on the junior list will undoubtedly be the one-quarter mile dash for singles, open to all. Nine entries are announced for this event, including John Joachim of the Westerns, Fred Agne of the Centrals, C. Guenther and F. Formanack of the Mound City, Hermann Kirtman and G. Rapp of the North Ends and Richard Mirtschings, Ernest Hess and Otto Thieme of the Centuries.

Sunday will be the big day, when the Senior events are scheduled to be contested. In the program for the occasion the events are announced:

Senior Four, Senior Single, Consolation Barge, Senior Gig, one-half mile dash for fours, Senior Doubles, Senior Pairs, Gregg cup, and Senior Barge.

The event which is attracting preliminary speculation among the oarsmen, and which promises a hard struggle is the senior singles. This is more attractive than ordinarily, as it is expected to result in a duel between Frank J. Snite of the Chicago Yacht Club, who contests by special invitation, and John Joachim of the Western Rowing Club.

Joachim to Row Frank Smith Again.

This race will be three-quarters of a mile, with a turn, and the five announced to start are Joachim, Snite, Fred Agne of the Centrals, Ernest Ness of the Centuries and Richard Mirtschings of the Centuries.

Snite was invited here especially to meet Joachim, but as the race was an open one, the contest could not be limited to these two.

On past performances the other entries are not believed to have a chance to win. Snite and Joachim rowed a match race in Chicago, and the Windy City man won. Joachim has always believed he could beat his conquerer if they ever met again, and the match of next Sunday was the result of his insistence on this point.

For pure enthusiasm commend the rowing rooters to the Senior barge event. This loses something in attractiveness this year, however, from the fact that only three entries are announced—the Westerns, the St. Louis Club and the winners of the junior barge.

The race will undobutedly be fast for barges, and the winning junior crew this year looks to have a chance to beat the veterans.

Racing on both days will start at 3 p. m. Especial arrangements have been made with railroads and street car companies for transportation facilities and the banner crowd in the history of St. Louis Rowing is expected. The officials for the races are announced as follows:

Jul. F. Mueller, umpire; Frank Kiefer, starter. Judges—South Side Boat Club (Quincy), A. B. Weisenburger and Leo Spetnagle; St. Louis Rowing Club, Geo. H. Klubescheidt and Emil E. Hein; Western Rowing Club, Wm. H. Lemp and Eugene Habenicht; Mound City Rowing Club, John Eschbracher and M. Lee Godfrey; Central Rowing Club, L. Lambrechts and M. Gondolf; North End Rowing Club, Ed B. Woodward and Fred Howarth; timekeepers, G. Wm. Senn and Louis Herman.

Following are the positions of crews, counting from eastern shore of lake in all races:

Entries.	Colors.
1—Central Rowing Club	Blue
2—Chicago Athletic Club	U. S. flag
3—North End Rowing Club	Black
4—Western Rowing Club	White
5—South Side Boat Club, Quincy	Purple
6—St. Louis Rowing Club	Red
7—Century Boat Club	Green
8—Mound City Rowing Club	Orange

CRANIAL TROUBLES HAMPER CARDINALS

Peculiar Occiputal Trouble Makes Two Well-Paid Players Indifferent.

THEIR IDENTITY A MYSTERY

But Barclay Makes Unkind Remarks and Brain Is Occupying a Passive Position on Bench.

Cranial elephantiasis has interfered with the success of several baseball clubs in the records of history. It is threatening the peace of the Cardinals now, and interfering with a very good chance for that team to rise a peg in the League race.

This unfortunate affliction resulted in the quarantining of Mr. Otto Williams, to the hospital of Chicago, where steps will be taken to cure his cephalic disease. The Chicago club is immune to microbes of all description and can safely be relied upon to suffer no bad consequences from association with Williams.

Williams has shown marked improvement since his transfer.

There is no such hope for two members of the Cardinals who are at present suffering from the same trouble. Both have had cases and are reported chronic.

The symptoms in both cases are the same: Ability to play excellent ball, accompanied by a disinclination to use this talent. One has been holding down a bench job, and the other would like to do the same, only the management insists that he take a lay-off only at his own expenses.

Between the two, Donovan is having a hard time. While he is not around airing his grievances, when the name of either player is mentioned Donovan's face assumes a stolid look as if he would say: "Get anything out of me now, if you can."

Nevertheless it is positively known that one of the two players would be benched without pay, and the other fired, if Donovan had his way in the matter.

The positions played by these men are important. Both are really players of merit but dissatisfied, they are useless to the club. No manager can make seven men of a team do hard work all the time, when two are taking things comfortably.

Don't Care Whether School Keeps or Not.

Prof. George Barclay, who can bat at over .300 and run with the best, is not worrying himself over the dwindling batting average of the present year. Barclay is reported to have said in the presence of several hearers that he didn't care if he ever made a hit for the Cardinals. He will not make much of a hit with the fans.

David Brain's leg for a long time, and notwithstanding rest, grew singularly worse. More peculiar still, the seat of his disorder, which was originally in the ankle, unexpectedly mounted to his knee in a day or two, when Brain was telling about it and not stopping to think closely of where the pain really was. Perhaps he forgot the real location. Brain ought to be a disappointed man. According to advices from Stallings, who was formerly mentor for Brain, and from whose Buffalo club the Cardinals' fast shortstop was secured, Brain was to have received a part of the money paid Stallings for his release.

In the newspapers this has been variously estimated at from $3000 to $5000, which may or may not be a figure of hyperbole.

Brain thinks it quite likely he was worth that much, and more likely that Stallings received it. Yet David, alas, has not cashed. Peacefully he has rested upon the bench at the rate of $600 per month, expecting Frank de Hass Robinson to come over from Cleveland and tell him how much he really was worth to Buffalo.

It seems a shame to tell the truth and disappoint him.

With Barclay not doing his best and Brain on the bench, the Cardinals miss the services of two players who can do work with the best in the business. It is part of [illegible] hard luck that comes with baseball tha[illegible]ch things happen.

Do[illegible] should think on M[illegible] and then he can smile.

Otto Williams, by the way, did what looks to be a very foolish thing, but which may prove a wise one after all, if he is really as good as he thinks he is.

Williams, after the announcement of his release by the Cardinals was perhaps the most sought-after man in the business among the minor leagues. At least six clubs wanted him, but the banner offer came from Indianapolis. Over in that city it is stated—and on good authority—that Williams was offered $900 a month to finish out the year with that club and that he turned it down to accept an inferior offer from Chicago. Williams may be doing the right thing after all, as he will get away from his minor league reputation. His work for the Chicago club in his initial appearance for that aggregation was superb.

American League fans have quit apologizing for the Browns. The work of that aggregation is one dull, monotonous gray of mediocrity, and neither praise nor blame, but just apathetic indifference greeted the daily accounts of defeat experienced in the East.

There is nothing to be said about the Browns except that they can't do anything at the bat.

With hitting, the fielding work of the team would stand out like a jewel in a rich [illegible]ing. Fair pitching and good defen[illegible]k, guarantee t[illegible] club at least a c[illegible] all its contests. The [illegible]mthing that can[illegible]ied as belonging [illegible]ood, as far as re[illegible] of the players enable the student of baseball to characterize it as senile.

The attendance figures at week day games in St. Louis is appalling. The figures given out, always above the correct ones, are fearful to contemplate when one thinks what amount of capital is expected to yield a paying interest on the investments.

It is safe to say that without the four spring games, which put both clubs in good shape at the outset, and without an occasional good trip through the East, the clubs would both be heavily in debt.

It is probable that too much baseball and the low position of both clubs in the race is responsible for the present condition of affairs.

Reports are rife to the effect that only one club will be doing business next year in this city. In view of the prospective 11 league war this is more than a conjecture.

Too much of one thing was always good for nothing, anyhow.

WHERE ST. LOUIS CLUBS WILL PLAY THIS WEEK.

Friday—Cardinals at Pittsburg; Browns at Cleveland.

Saturday—Cardinals at Pittsburg; Browns at Cleveland.

ATHLETIC WOMEN IN WORLD'S FAIR MEET

James E. Sullivan Considers Plan to Hold Open Running and Field Competition Between the Fleet and Strong Among the Fair Sex.

Outdoor girls, attention!

If you golf, play basket ball, tool a coach, speed an automobile, can run, swim, jump, row and do other things supposedly under monopoly, for the most part, to the sterner sex, you should see Mr. James Sullivan, athletic director of the World's Fair of 1904, and talk to him.

Mr. Sullivan is arranging a program of athletics for the World's Fair season in St. Louis, and is considering the advisability of holding athletic contests for women—an innovation so far as open meetings are concerned.

The matter was submitted to Mr. Sullivan before his recent departure from St. Louis, and will be considered in the making up of the program of athletics which will be completed by the World's Fair management about the middle of August.

The growth of athletics at the various women's colleges in the country and the success of several of the strictly college meetings held, led to the idea of holding an open competition to college girl athletes, to take place at the World's Fair.

Vassar, Wellesley, Smith and other seats of feminine learning, all have track and field teams which hold annual athletics. These meetings are not for the eyes of the public, however, and mere man can only witness the contests by special dispensation.

This is the one objection to the feature Mr. Sullivan raised when the subject was presented to him.

"The idea is an excellent one," said Mr. Sullivan. "Our girl athletes of the country are not only becoming more numerous yearly, but the records made at some of the college meetings for girls are really surprisingly good, for women athletes.

"Whether the prejudice against the publicity of such a meeting, on the part of the women, can be overcome remains to be seen. My experience has been that the collegiate institutions are disinclined to any outside notoriety in connection with the meetings and that the heads of the institutions would enter objections to their pupils competing either as teams or individuals, save in very few sports.

"I anticipate we will have several women's basket-ball games, and possibly may arrange a woman's championship golf match.

"If the objections can be overcome, we will have a girl's athletic meeting, too. It would be a great thing for girls' sport, and I believe would prove a drawing card at the Fair.

"While I am in the East I expect to take the matter up and will be able to state positively whether the meeting can be arranged or not. As I said before, women will be represented in certain athletic contests and in physical culture exercises. I would like to see a complete series of athletics arranged for them, embracing everything from golf to swimming.

Prejudice against feminine competition is justifiable sometimes, but rarely. In the present instance, if all the colleges can be induced to recognize the women's field day, it would tend to eliminate any false embarrassment."

Plans of Mr. Sullivan for athletics at the World's Fair are the greatest that have ever been conceived. The Olympic games are, of course, the feature, but the National A. A. U. championship will also be held here, and national and international contests in all branches of sport are being scheduled for 1904 in this city.

The complete program will be out early in August. Mr. Sullivan will then take a trip abroad to arrange for foreign entries for the World's Fair events.

AMATEUR BASEBALL

The La Salles have open dates for next Sunday. They would like to arrange a game with teams in the 13 and 14 year old class. Address R. McBriarty, 2729 Hickory street.

The Nordens defeated the Hamiltons 9 to 0 and the Roblings 14 to 11. The feature of the latter game was the batting of O'Keefe of the Nordens.

The Mound Street Sluggers can be accommodated with a game on July 19 by addressing a challenge to the Majestic baseball club. Jamie O'Connell, 1802 Dolman street.

The Clark's China baseball club was defeated at Litchfield last Sunday by a score of 10 to 12. The Chinas play the Gittens next Sunday at Gittens' Park, corner Tamm and Manchester avenues. Chinas have open dates Aug. 9 and 16. Address W. C. Wunderlich, 307 North Second street.

The Blue Diamonds, who play in the 14-year-old class, would like to sign three good all round players. For particulars address August J. Kruse, 1219 Clinton street.

A pitcher would like to be given a trial with some first-class team playing in and out-of-town games. Twenty-third Street Exchanges preferred. Address Arthur Mueller, 1819 Park avenue.

The Henning Juniors will line up against the 1904s Saturday, July 18, 1903. For games with the Hennings address M. J. Murphy, 2317 Biddle street.

Jim Scully, formerly of the Lindemanns, will play center field for the St. Charles the rest of the season.

The Parks will cr[illegible]bats with the Eads Juniors at Hospital G[illegible]ourteenth and Lafayette avenue, Sunda[illegible]. The Monitor baseball team has organized and would like to hear from any teams in the 13 and 14 year old class. For games address Robert Schwegel, 2403 North Fifteenth street.

MAGNATES MEET IN WAR COUNCIL

National League Club Owners to Determine Fate of Peace Agreement.

NEW YORK, July 16.—The money barrel and the red ax will again figure in baseball meetings, beginning here tomorrow when the magnates of the National League will assemble to discuss the war and rumors of war that are being bandied about and incidentally to determine the fate of the peace pact

From all accounts the assembly of Monday will be a stormy one, with the West and the East banded in two cliques. The fight is practically whether the peace agreement is to be thrown over, though the Davis-Elberfeld affair is the immediate subject of discussion. On this question the league is broken in half.

The East, led by John T. Brush of the New Yorks and President Ebbetts of the Brooklyns, are in open revolt against the American League for the action of the latter in transferring Elberfeld to New York. The West, with Hart of Chicago, Robison of St. Louis and Hermann of Cincinnati, assert that the Elberfeld matter is no breach of the peace pact and that they will uphold Johnson, or rather the peace agreement, as against Pullam and Brush.

Barney Dreyfuss has gone over to the enemy's camp, according to recent reports, leaving the West in the minority.

The affair is surely a crisis for the National, as one way it means internal strife and the other war with the American League. Brush will recognize nothing that does not mean reprisal on the American with intent to annihilate that organization.

Ebbetts has said he would welcome war.

That the predictions of one league for next year are not without foundation is evident when both sides say that war means extermination of one or the other organization.

Five Will Oppose Peace Agreement.

It has leaked out that five clubs of the National League held a meeting over two weeks ago and entered into a nagreement to stick together to the end and to start the campaign against the enemy at once. The meeting is said to have been held at the Hoffman House about two weeks ago and President Harry Pulliam was present, and so were Harry Von der Horst and Ned Hanlon of Brooklyn, President Potter of Philadelphia, Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburg, John T. Brush of New York and Messrs. Soden and Billings of Boston, it is said. The other members of the League, Hart, Hermann and Robison, the absentees, had already expressed themselves as determined to stand by the terms of the peac agreement made last winter at the Cincinnati meeting.

The men who attended the meeting are represented as being in favor of President Pulliam's action in allowing Brush to play George Davis.

Into this bubbling cauldron the Players' Union will cast its little mite to add to the general potpourri. It will hold a meeting one week from today, to take action on the action that will be taken at the National League gathering tomorrow. It doesn't have to be stated that the players are first, last and all the time for war. War means competition and competition means salaries. What the players can do to foment trouble will be done, in all probabilitiy.

There is a prevailing feeling among baseball men here that the National is biting off a hard chunk to swallow. To embark in a war with three dissenting members may easily mean the sell-out of the League to the American.

Hermann is notoriously in sympathy with Johnson, and one or the other of the St. Louis clubs would be willing to go out of business for a price. That would break Mr. Brush.

I CURE MEN

MY BEST REFERENCE IS, NOT A DOLLAR NEED BE PAID UNTIL CURED.

DR. NATHANIEL K. KING,
522 PINE ST., ST. LOUIS.

VARICOCELE. I cure this disease without operation or ligature, and under my treatment, the congested condition (within 10 days) disappears. The parts are restored to their natural condition, vigor and strength and circulation re-established.

STRICTURE. I cure stricture without the knife or instrument, by an application which acts directly on the parts affected, dissolving the stricture completely by my galvanic-electrical and medical treatment. My treatment is painless and in nowise interferes with your business duties.

LOSS OF MANLY VIGOR. You may be lacking in the power of manhood. If so, I will restore to you what you have lost—the snap, vim and vigor of vitality, which may be the result of losses, drains, excesses or indiscretions.

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON. It may be in its primary stage, or it may have been hereditary or contracted in early days, thereby being constitutional. I cure all its complications; I stop its progress, eradicate every vestige of poison from the system, and this without the use of mercury or potash.

ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES. I cure all acute or chronic ulcers without burning pastes or salves. Skin diseases, such as pimples, eruptions and eczema, quickly disappear under my special electro-medical sprays and treatment.

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND PROSTATIC DISEASES. I cure all irritation, frequent desire or stoppage, brick-dust sediment, pain in back and catarrhal condition.

PRIVATE DISEASES. Newly contracted and chronic cases cured. All burning and itching, inflammation and unnatural discharges stopped in 24 hours; cures effected in 7 days.

Cures deafness permanently by applying it to the ears. A mild current is passed through the ears, reducing all inflammation, relieving all thickened, shrunken conditions of ear drums. It also acts as a great nerve tonic, restoring and reviving every nerve fiber to a healthy condition.

$3.00 WILL CURE MANY.
NONE WILL EXCEED $5.00.

UNDER THIS SPECIAL OFFER YOU ONLY PAY FOR THE MEDICINES ACTUALLY USED. Many will be cured for $3.00. The most stubborn and complicated cases of chronic disease will not exceed $5.00 for one whole month.

If you have catarrh, if you are deaf, if you suffer from asthma, or lung trouble, if you have stomach, liver or kidney disease, or any other chronic ailment, this is your opportunity to obtain skilled medical treatment practically free.

WHY EXPERIMENT? WHY SPEND MONEY ON "FAKE PATENT MEDICINES," WHICH OFTEN CONTAIN COCAINE, OPIUM OR SOME OTHER DANGEROUS NARCOTIC, when you can get expert medical treatment practically free? THIS GRAND SPECIAL OFFER GOES INTO EFFECT AT ONCE AND HOLDS GOOD TO ALL WHO APPLY THIS MONTH. DO NOT DELAY. CALL OR WRITE AT ONCE. CONSULTATION, INCLUDING X-RAY EXAMINATION, FREE TO ALL.

This is the most liberal offer ever made by an American specialist. It is a genuine bona fide free test.

The doctors' great success lies in the fact that they are able to correctly diagnose each case, and will not accept money from an incurable case. If your case is incurable you will be told so free of charge.

Proper [illegible] to Treat — In the summer nature helps the doctor. She offers no Obstacles. One month of summer tre[illegible]t for Catarrh is worth two months of the most careful winter treatment. I[illegible] who suffer from catarrh were wise enough to devote a little time to tre[illegible]t now, there would soon be few cases of catarrh to treat; cases of deafness [illegible] become rare; head noises a curiosity, and chronic coughs and consumption [illegible]ld be reduced to a minimum.

[illegible] FEW MARVELOUS CURES.

Mr. Joh[illegible] Crites, 3115 S. 7th St., was cured of catarrh and stomach trouble. In speakin[illegible] his case said: "My trouble began about ten years ago, in a bad cold which [illegible]lted in a stubborn case of Catarrh; gradually the poison of the disease, as [illegible], spread through my system, my blood became thin and impoverished, m[illegible]plexion turned a yellow saffron; I lost flesh like a galloping consumptive [illegible] found myself wearing away with Catarrh of the Stomach. My nerves became deranged. I was a physical wreck [illegible] went to the Powell Medical Institute; I was very much discouraged; it seemed that nothing would stop my de[illegible]e. Under their splendid treatment, however, I began to mend and pick up in a way that was really astonishing, and I [illegible] on improving till I got well, as well as I ever was in my life."

Mrs. John Kutzman, 604 Summit av., East St. Lo[illegible]s, was cured of a bad case of Catarrh of the nose, throat and stomach. Mr. John Brennan, 3921 Folsom av., was [illegible] of deafness and head noises. Mr. Fritz Winkleman, Venice, Ill., was cured of catarrh and ringing in the ears. M[illegible] [illegible]ertha Hopman, 3440 Illinois av., was cured of lung trouble. Mr. Fred Goss, 1935 Wyoming st., was cured of deafness. Mrs. George Hill, 3109 Lawton av., was cured of stomach trouble.

KING CRESCEUS MAY SOON BE DETHRONED

Lou Dillon, Queen of Trotters, Has Good Chance to Lower Harness Records in Cleveland Trials, Horsemen Say—Will Be Driven by an Amateur Reinsman.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Lou Dillon is the coming trotting wonder of the country, according to many experts who have seen the mare work and in the opinion of her millionaire owner, C. G. K. Billings.

That she is faster than The Abbott and Cresceus were at their best it will be the object of Mr. Billings to demonstrate during the present season. The new trotting queen will be sent after all records during the season. The first attempt will be made at the Cleveland meeting of the Grand Circuit races.

Lou Dillon's recent performance in winning the record for mares in 2:03½ encourages followers of the game to believe there is a great future for the Billings thoroughbred.

Lou Dillon has proved a profitable investment to her owner, who recently refused an offer of $50,000 for his performer. Billings bought the mare at sale in the face of advice from his friends. He had seen her work out for half a mile and was convinced she was a trotter of speed and stamina.

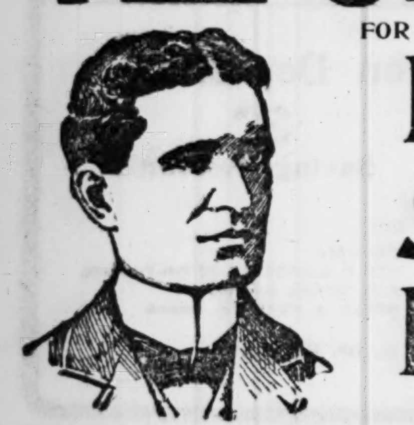
"Did you have your mind made up to buy her when you entered the sale ring," Mr. Billings was asked in an interview at Brighton Beach recently.

"Yes, I did. After I saw her trot that fast half mile I decided she was a mare possessed of wonderful stamina as well as speed and gait. After coming across the mountains and showing such speed, I believed that she was what I wanted, but had I listened to the advice of my friends I would have let her go to another. Even Tanner, who was bidding for me, refused to go higher than $10,000, remarking, 'That is more than she is worth.'

"I look for her to go a mile in about 2:03, and before the end of the season I hope to own the fastest trotter in the world. If she does not win the world's record this year, I see no reason why she should not next season be a much faster mare, for she has never been hurt, and this is really the first year that she has ever been asked to go as fast as she could."

"Are you going to drive her any yourself this year?"

"Yes, I hope to drive her a mile faster than 2:04¾, which is the record held by her to wagon."



TRUE SPECIALISTS

FOR

NERVOUS, SEXUAL AND BLOOD

DISEASES OF MEN.

WE CURE VARICOCELE IN 5 DAYS

Neglected Varicocele undermines the physical strength, deranges the mental faculties, racks the nervous system and produces a complete loss of sexual power. We guarantee to cure the most aggravated case of Varicocele in five days, without pain, suffering or inconvenience. Not only do we give you internal constitutional remedies, but we also employ a local treatment direct to the weakened parts; a healthy circulation of blood is quickly re-established; the wasted glands are enlarged and permanent strength and power are given to the erectile tissues of the generative organs. Every trace of weakness disappears; the spermatic cords resume their normal size; losses and drains of vigor cease, the weakened seminal ducts are strengthened; you become stronger and better in every way and will soon possess the sense of well-being which accompanies good health and robust manhood. Don't experiment; this is a delicate disease. We have cured thousands of the worst cases without a failure or recurrence. What you want is the quickest, safest and surest cure obtainable, and this we are prepared to give you.

NERVO-SEXUAL DEBILITY—Abuse, excesses and dissipation have wrecked many promising men. Have you transgressed Nature's laws? Is your weakened system crying out for help? You are nervous, irritable and despondent; you are growing weaker and weaker sexually; your manhood is on the decline and will soon be lost unless you do something for yourself. Our long experience has rendered us thoroughly familiar with all the causes and effects of Nervo-Sexual Debility, and we have lifted up enough fallen men to make an army. Our treatment will remove all the ill effects of your former folly, check every drain on your vitality, invigorate the wasted sexual organs, clear up the clouded brain, and quickly restore you to what nature intended—a healthy and happy man, with physical, mental and sexual powers complete. Avoid free prescriptions and temporary stimulants. Seek a lasting cure. We guarantee a permanent restoration in from 30 to 90 days.

STRICTURE—Our cure for Stricture and Gleet is safe, painless and permanent and free from surgery in any form. Every obstruction to the urethra is forever removed, all discharges soon cease, inflammation and soreness are allayed, the prostate gland and bladder are healed, and the entire genito-urinary tract is quickly restored to its normal, healthy condition. Avoid cutting and dilation operations; they leave you in a worse condition than before. Neglected Stricture results in serious bladder and kidney complications. We cure you in from 10 to 20 days.

BLOOD POISON—If you have sore throat, mucous patches, pimples, copper-colored spots, sores and ulcers, bone pains, falling hair or any symptom of this disease in either primary, secondary or tertiary stages, come to us and be forever rid of it. Our treatment quickly destroys the virus, clears the skin, purifies the blood and thoroughly cleanses and eradicates all traces of poison from the system. All danger of transmission or recurrence is removed. Don't rely on patent medicines or intrust your health to incompetent druggists or physicians. Why take mercury and potash for years, when we can guarantee you a permanent cure in from 30 to 90 days, without the use of these injurious remedies? Consult us at once.

CERTAINTY OF CURE—We want to talk or write to every sufferer from any of the above maladies or any of the allied weaknesses or diseases peculiar to men. Have you become a weakling through the debilitating effects and vicious ravages of these chronic, treacherous afflictions? Don't delay; remember these maldies never cure themselves. They are constantly growing worse, and if neglected will surely wreck your health and vitality and fill your future with suffering and unhappiness. Come to us and learn how different and better our modern methods of treatment are than the old-time systems still employed by unprogressive doctors. Avoid the many mushroom medical concerns, who make great claims but who really possess no curative power. We are true specialists, honest men, and have been thoroughly fitted and trained in the art of curing special diseases. We are doing an immense practice, are permanently established, and it does not require offers of free treatment, no pay until cured and other false misrepresentations to fill our offices with afflicted patients.

We prefer to have you investigate fully our reputation for skill, honesty and success before commencing treatment with us. Knowing that we have cured thousands of others, you will have implicit confidence and believe we can do as much for you. We treat all patients personally; you see no substitutes. We understand thoroughly the diseases which constitute our specialty, and you can depend upon it we will treat you honestly and fairly, just as we would want to be treated if our positions were reversed. Don't stand idly by and see your health and manhood slipping away, when we will guarantee you a permanent and lasting cure or fee refunded. Cast aside your modesty. Call and be examined free.

WRITE us for a full description of your case if unable to call. Our perfect system of Home Treatment is always successful. Hours, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. Consultation and Examination Free.

JEFFERIES AS HE APPEARS TODAY

BIG COUP PLANNED FOR JEFFERIES FIGHT

Corbett Followers, With Wads of Money, Ready to Back Former Champion at Juicy Odds--Say He Is a 7 to 5 Shot Instead of 3 to 1.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 18.—There is every prospect that a big coup will be made on the coming Jeffries-Corbett fight for the championship of the world.

There is no suspicion of "fake" attached to the operations of those concerned, but from indications a big plunge will be made on Jim Corbett to beat James J. Jeffries.

In view of the fact that Corbett is considered a "has been" by a majority of persons interested in fights, and that Jeffries is quoted at as good as 3 to 1 in the betting, that Corbett is to be made the medium of the plunge is considered astonishing.

It is precisely these odds that will bring about the plunge. Harry Corbett is the reputed head of the delegation which is laying by shekels and biding the time when there shall be plenty of Jeffries money at long odds.

Harry Corbett says nothing of his intentions, but a bookmaker who is near to him, states that the former champion's brother is more than impressed with Jim's chances, and thinks him nearer an even money shot than a 3 to 1 contender.

Beaten Champion to Be Well Backed.

It is certain that when Corbett and Jeffries go into the ring, the former champion will carry a great deal more money than a beaten champion ever carried before.

Fight followers here have confidence that Eddie Graney will give a decision on the merits of the battle solely. It has been stated that no referee would take away the championship from Jeffries on points but would call the affair a draw and save the title. Out here where Graney is known his friends say he will consider the men as two fighters only, and no championship consideration will influence his decision.

This being the case, the Corbett faction are confident of winning from Jeffries.

Corbett is in fine physical condition and is certain he can stay the 20 rounds.

So good a judge as Tommy Ryan says that odds of 3 to 1 on Jeffries are absurd and that it is 7 to 5 that Corbett will stay the distance. If he stays he will get the verdict, according to those who know Graney and the correct odds on Corbett are therefore under 2 to 1.

It is this feature that will make the former "Pompadour Jim" the medium of a plunge.

Talk of Corbett's changing his style is laughed at by those who know him. Corbett cannot change his method of fighting, which provides a sure retreat before a lead is made. No mixing will be done by Corbett, for that is what Jeffries wants. Jeffries' style in fighting is to have his opponent carry the battle to him. Should Corbett attempt this it would tickle the champion immensely.

Talk of Knocking Out Jeff Is Premature.

What Corbett is doing is developing muscle so that his jabs and chop blows will have more worriment to them. He hopes to wear the big fellow down with them, and then put him out. Corbett hit Jeffries countless times when he met the big fellow before. He worried him as a cat does a mouse, and the knockout blow was as a bolt out of a blue sky.

Corbett's talk of knocking out Jeffries is hardly serious. When the pair meet in the ring there will be a discrepancy in weight of at least 35 pounds.

In rugged strength and endurance there will be no comparison between them. Corbett might pound Jeffries all day. It is believed he will tire the big fellow more than in their former meeting, however.

One of the interesting features in connection with Corbett's training is the interest taken by his wife in everything pertaining to the coming fight. Every morsel of food the champion eats is cooked by his better half.

Mrs. Corbett is confident Jim will win, and thinks he will capture the championship in the thirteenth round. Recently she had a dream, and saw Jim winning in the thirteenth round.

She will have a bet down that her husband turns the trick within that period.

STRENUOUS HOUR FOR T. SULLIVAN

His Life's Busiest Moments Will Be Spent With "Young Corbett" July 30.

Less than two weeks from today Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan will lead the most strenuous moments of his life—already full of strenuous efforts.

On July 30, in the evening, in this city, he will climb into one corner of a ring, while Champion Young Corbett swings into the other corner, and later both will meet in the middle.

It is at this point that the story halts and the imagination acts in a morbid manner in throwing up images of the result on the mental retina.

One would like to see a fair prospect there, in which the red crown of Sullivan could be seen bobbing victoriously about, while his conquering gloves played a tattoo on the short ribs and long jaw of the champion.

Being St. Louisans, and interested in Thomas, we would like to be able to picture mentally just how it was going to happen that Tommy could be seen in the end, triumphant, expanding (as to chest), and transfigured, standing with gloved hand held up by Referee Harry Sharpe—winner and champion of the world of featherweights.

Somehow or another the thing won't work out that way to the mind, and instead an unhealthy series of views showing Young Corbett sinking his glove into the abdominal regions of Sullivan clear to the wrist, or batting a mighty right into Sullivan's receptive jaw, oppress the hopes for Sullivan.

The fight will be for ten rounds, if accidents do not happen before the limit is reached, and at catch weights. This means that Corbett will be carrying about six pounds more material than Sullivan if he is in strict training.

This will probably not be entirely the case, though, realizing that he has harder game than mere Jack O'Keefe of East St. Louis. Corbett has already started in doing something toward getting off the layers of adipose tissue that have accompanied him into the ring during his later battles.

Ten rounds is the limit Sullivan is best adapted to. He can fight cleverly and with skill and strength at this distance against most fighters. Corbett is different. He is a machine. Calculations and blows seem to fail in disturbing him. He bores in to the one end of knocking his opponent out and generally succeeds.

As the issue, it depends on how Thomas the Red will or will not take chances against Corbett. If he goes in to fight Corbett he will probably suffer. If he plays to stay away, he will probably suffer, too, but not so badly.

The affair will be much more of a real battle than any that Corbett has fought for some time.

Sullivan and Frank Hart, the man with the imposing chest, have parted company as manager and fighter. Hart was a fine looking manager, but, according to President Charles Haughton of the West End Club appearances are frequently deceitful. Sullivan will hereafter deal directly with the West End Club or whomsoever he may have business with.

ORIENT TO MEET MISS CRAWFORD

Fastest Fillies of Local Fame to Meet in the Belle Stakes Next Thursday.

HOMEBRED STAKES SATURDAY

Best Example of Missouri-Bred Runners Will Contest in Latter Event at Delmar.

BY R. D. WALSH.

The Homebred and Belle stakes will be the racing fixtures of the coming week at Delmar. The Belle, which is for 2-year-old fillies, will be run next Thursday. It will be the first juvenile stake of the Delmar summer meeting.

It will probably settle the 2-year-old filly championship of the local tracks, as both Orient and Miss Crawford are eligible to start, and the indications are that these two speed wonders will surely face the starter. W. W. Darden is expected down from Chicago with his entire stable today.

Last week he wired for his old stalls, and declared his intention of returning to St. Louis at the conclusion of the Washington Park meeting, which ended yesterday.

Orient is the star 2-year-old filly of the Hayes stable. She belongs jointly to T. P. Hayes and her breeder, Hal. P. Headley. Mr. Headley is a veteran in the business, having bred such equine stars as May Hempstead, Ornament and other good ones. Orient first attracted attention when she captured the rich Debutante stakes at the Fair Grounds last spring. Miss Crawford failed to start in this stake.

Neither Miss Crawford nor Orient ran to their best form at Washington Park. Orient started at Delmar for the first time last week, and ran third to Forehand and Major Pelham, winner of the Kindergarten stakes at the Fair Grounds last spring.

That Orient is a high-class filly there can be no doubt whatever, but whether she is good enough to trim Miss Crawford, winner of four straight races at the Fair Grounds, remains to be seen. The question will probably be settled when the pair meet in the Belle stake this week.

Besides Miss Crawford and Orient there are a number of other high-class fillies eligible to start in the Belle stake. Perla, winner of the Native Nursery stake, is engaged, and will surely face the starter. This filly belongs to her breeder, Jas. G. Ghio, who thinks she is one of the smartest of her age in training. Mag Nolin, the Tammany-Tampette filly, that has run so many good races on the local tracks, is another likely candidate for the Belle stakes.

Pink Marsh,

Native Bred Horses in Saturday Feature.

Like the Fair Grounds Association, the Delmar Jockey Club is also out with a stake for Missouri-bred horses exclusively. Delmar's Missouri-bred event is known as the Homebred stake. It has $1000 added, and is for 3-year-olds and upward at the popular distance of six furlongs.

Barney Schreiber heads the list of nominators to this stake. It was won last year by Martin and Patton's crack filly Ethylene, daughter of Freeman-Ethel Gray.

As an illustration how these stakes enhance the value of Missouri-bred horses it might be mentioned that Ethylene was sold for $5000 after she had captured this event.

Ethylene is among the eligibles to this year's Homebred. She was bred by Martin and Patton of Sturgeon, Mo.

William Mulkey, the Kansas City millionaire turfman and breeder, is among the other nominators to the Homebred. He has Bas d'Or and Croix d'Or in the stake. Bas looks like he would come pretty near capturing it. Among the Schreiber nominations to the stake is Geheimniss, winner of the Native Nursery stake of 1902. Otis, winner of the St. Louis Derby of 1902, is also in the Homebred. A list of the eligibles to this stake follows:

Ethylene,
Orineta,
Percival,
Belle of Westport,
Budweiser,
Actine,
Zirl,
Howling Dervish,
Light Opera,
Don Ernesto,
Croix d'Or,

Schorrs to Sell Some Fast Ones.

John W. Schorr, the Memphis turfman, is to have a weeding out sale shortly. He will dispose of Rightful, Pentaur, Monet, Escobar and other good ones. The Schorr stable has not been successful in the East this season. Last spring his 2-year-olds gave wonderful promise, but they turned out to be morning glories.

The return of the Darden stable to the local tracks will materially add to the class of horses now here. Jockey Booker (A. W.) will also return with the Darden horses. He was the premier jockey here last spring. Among the Darden horses are, Miss Crawford, Brulare, A. D. Gibson, King Daly, Kunja and Nannie Hodge. The latter is the star of the string.

Barney Schreiber made a "killing" at Washington Park a few days ago with his 2-year-old Blumenthal, which won a maiden race in the mud with Jimmy Boland in the saddle. Schreiber is said to have won $30,000 on his colt's victory. Blumenthal's odds was 15 and 20 to 1.

It is now generally conceded by turf followers that Africander is the best horse of the year so far. He has broken records, has carried big weight, and can travel on any kind of a track. He has beaten all the good 3-year-olds, except The Picket and Claude.

There is no doubt in my mind that he can easily defeat these also. It may be of local interest to state that Africander is entered in the World's Fair Handicap, which will be run at the Fair Grounds next June, and that if he continues to train he will be a formidable candidate.

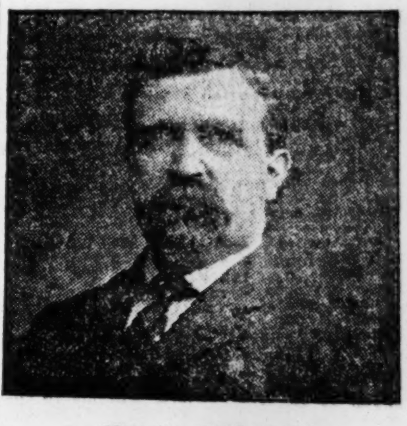
SARATOGA A MECCA FOR HORSE OWNERS

Stables From All Over Country Arriving for Coming Opening of the "Spa."

SARATOGA, N. Y., July 18.—The advance guard of racing men and their charges which will do battle next month for the rich stakes and purses offered by the Saratoga Racing Association has been greatly augmented in the last three days by the arrivals from New York, and the course will be the scene of much activity from now until the opening of the meeting, which is just three weeks away.

The horses of J. E. Seagram, W. C. Whitney, Westbury stable, J. E. Madden, Oneck stable; R. Wilson, Jr., Goughacio stables; Mr. Chamblet, J. R. and F. P. Keene, P. Meany, W. M. Hogan, F. R. Hitchcock, a part of the stables of S. S. Brown and John A. Drake are already on the ground, and many stalls are booked for occupancy during the current week.

When the new stables now being built are finished there will be room for about 2200 horses, and the applications for stable room indicate that few of them will remain vacant after the meeting has begun. The prospects for a brilliant season of the sport here were never brighter than for this season, and more horses will participate in the races than ever before.



Chas. A. Duff, M. D.

RELIABLE CURES BY A TRUE SPECIALIST.

Dr. Duff's Pelvic Methods are your only hope for a complete cure, if you are afflicted with either BLOOD POISON, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS AND SEXUAL DECLINE, PILES, RUPTURE or any affection of the Kidneys, Bladder and Prostate Gland. You are wasting money and endangering your health in treating with ordinary doctors and specialists. My systems of treatment have established their reliability by permanently curing cases that had been unsuccessfully treated by dozens of other physicians.

A SURE CURE

Is what I will give you beyond a doubt if your case is curable; if not, I will not accept your money and promise to do anything for you. I accept only curable cases, and all my patients receive a written contract binding me to effect a permanent cure or refund money and to insure those who deal with me against fraud I have deposited $1000 in a trust company to secure any man holding my contract and promise that I do not fulfill.

NERVOUS AND SEXUAL DECLINE,

Or "Lost Manhood" and Its Positive Restoration.

There is not a man in existence who is troubled with Sexual Weakness that I cannot rebuild and strengthen so as to accomplish the greatest desire and experience the keenest satisfaction, and after I have cured a case of this kind there will never again be a sign of "Weakness," except brought on by Imprudence.

Nervous Decline, Vital Debility, Failing Power, Lost Manhood and many other familiar terms are used to designate the one condition of an endless number of young and middle-aged men who are nervous wrecks and invariably affected with the same symptoms, originating from a source brought about by such a train of evils as youthful abuse, resulting in undevelopment of the private organs, Pelvic and Private diseases, which weaken the nervous system and impair both body and brain. The man who has disregarded health by early folly and later overindulgence in sexual practice, excessive use of alcoholic liquors, continued exposure, or even close confinement, overwork and worry may have one or more of such detrimental symptoms as Night Emissions, Day Drains, Loss in Urine, Permature Discharge, Impotency, No Desire, Poor Memory, Nervous and Restless at night, no Physical Endurance, noticed by Shortness of Breath and Exhaustion during ordinary exercise, Weak Back and many other like indications of failing health and an untimely end.

There is only one course to pursue for those whose lives are being overshadowed by the penalties of nature, and this is by resorting to medical science through a skilled Pelvic specialist. The young man laboring in hope that he is not in a serious condition from his boyhood folly and neglects to have himself rescued is committing a worse deed in allowing himself to follow a path that leads to destruction. If he is still practicing the error that his weakened system cannot resist he should by all means place himself in the care of a scientific specialist who can administer a thorough course of treatment that will remove the degenerating effects that induce continuances, making the mind and body sound and healthy and the faculties complete.

My Pelvic method is a thorough and scientific course of treatment which acts at once upon the nerve forces, stopping the drains, emissions, all the bad effects of indiscretion and replacing the wornout and run-down tissues. It increases the weight with sound healthy flesh and muscles that give strength and fill the brain and nerves with fresh vitality, building up the entire system and transforming the sufferer into a type of perfect manhood. Of the many "weaklings" who come to me with sunken eyes, weight greatly reduced from loss of flesh and muscle, presenting the appearance of a man with one foot in the grave, I find no trouble in curing them, and when they leave my care they go on their journey of life full of hopes for a bright future.

THE ORIGIN, STAGES, DEATH-DEALING COURSE AND ONLY CERTAIN CURE FOR SYPHILIS

My Serum Toxin Specific Treatment for Syphilis is the only remedy known to absolutely cure the disease, removing every trace of the Syphilitic taint, and rebuilding the entire system from the damaging effects of Mercury and Potash, leaving the patient with new flesh, new blood, new bones and in perfect health.

I will deposit in bank $10,000, to be forfeited in case of failure to cure any case of Syphilis in three months, so that not a sign will ever reappear.—Chas. A. Duff, M. D.

My charges are high compared with the prices of quacks and the many cheap offers advertised by "fakers," but I render services that are worth a thousand times what I charge for a cure.

Responsible people may pay me when satisfied that they are perfectly cured, which may be determined by scientific investigation; poor men having families, who have exhausted their means in treating with frauds, I will cure without charge.

SYPHILIS is a disease that originates either by contagion (catching) in sexual connection, exposing any mucous membrane to syphilitic virus (matter) in kissing, by the use of towels, bed clothing and water closets and many similar ways; or inherited from father or mother, and even distant relation by blood. Contracted syphilis is characterized by three stages, known as primary, secondary and tertiary, though acquired by inheritance the disease lacks these manifestations and appears in the form of chronic sores, pimples, scrofula, eczema rheumatic pains in the bones and joints, and many ugly skin diseases and deformities. Contracted syphilis is first noticed by a chancre (a peculiar sore or ulcer) which is the primary stage, and soon the poisoned virus is disseminated through the whole body, first affecting the delicate mucous membranes and causing ulcers in the mouth and throat; small ulcerated patches on the head, face and any part of the body. Syphilis thus passes to tertiary, which is its last and dangerous deathdealing stage when the entire human organism is contaminated and decay of the flesh and bones sets in. Ulcers eaten to the bone, loss of hair and eyebrows, swollen tonsils, ulcerated throat and mouth, skin eruptions and pimples, spots on the skin, locomotor ataxia, bone pains, loss of flesh and strength, and many other typical symptoms, are all indications that forebode an early end to life.

NO CURE BY MERCURY, POTASH OR VEGETABLE COMPOUNDS AND THEIR INJURY.

For ages it was thought that there was nothing that would check the course of syphilis except its treatment with mercury and potash, and, while it was conceded by the best medical authority that it would not cure this dragon of diseases, it was the only medicine that would drive the disease into the flesh and bones and apparently benefit. Mercury and potash were never administered as a cure for syphilis except by quack doctors, and there is not a case on record where syphilitic poison has been completely eradicated from the system by mercury, potash, so-called vegetable compounds or any hot springs baths. There are few who are not aware of the destruction of mercury and potash to human organism and will not knowingly dose with them, because it means assisting the disease in torturing and ending life much earlier. There is not one physician in a hundred who does not give their syphilitic patients mercury and potash, although they claim they are not, and all vegetable preparations are nothing but mixtures with potash. If you are treating for syphilis with doctors in general practice, quacks and advertised patent medicines, you had just as well abandon such a course, for you had as well attempt to reach the sun on a bicycle as to be cured in this way. I invite every one taking treatment for syphilis to send me a sample of the medicine, which I will have analyzed and reported to them, free of charge.

ANTI-TOXIN SERUM, THE ONLY CURE, ITS USE AND INFALLIBLE RESULTS.

My method of curing syphilis is by Anti-Toxin Serum that I introduce into the blood by subcutaneous injection (hypodermic) and internally, and by its antagonism to the syphilitic virus the taint is ejected from the body as well as the counteraction and removal of mercury and potash poisoning. My serum treatment reorganizes the corpuscles of the blood, disorganizes, neutralizes and expels all poison from the system through the same ducts that carry off all effete matter. The corpuscles are renewed with fresh, pure blood, which supplies the tissues that rebuild the entire human organism so that the whole body is restored to its normal size, strength and soundness. This treatment for syphilis was perfected by me, with the assistance of one of the most scientific men of modern times, and was tested by experimentation and found to be absolutely infallible. I can offer no better evidence of the reliability that I claim for Anti-Toxin Serum than the many thousands I have cured, many of them bedfast, body a shield of syphilitic sores, loss of eyesight, hair and eyebrows, or some vital organ, locomotor ataxia, and apparently doomed; and within three months after beginning my course of treatment they are entirely cured, robust and healthy, without a symptom ever recurring at any time. The positive effects of Anti-Toxin Serum are noticeable immediately, as the hair resumes its growth, all manifestations of the disease disappear, the patient begins to increase in weight by the addition of sound, healthy flesh; the skin gets clear and rosy by being supplied by poisonless blood, and in ordinary cases in one month after commencing the victim feels that his burden of disease is lifted. My Anti-Toxin Serum is the only known remedy that will absolutely cure syphilis and rebuild the system from the damaging effects of mercury and potash. It drives the poison out of the bones, so that all aches and pains are no more. I invite all syphilitics to call or write to me, when I will give such information as will satisfy them of the infallibility of my treatment. Correspondence and calls are invited from physicians and specialists having cases of syphilis under their care.

CONSULTATION FREE, CONFIDENTIAL AND INVITED.

I charge nothing for consultation either by mail or in person, and every man suffering from any of the diseases I treat is at liberty to call or write, when he will receive courteous attention. Those living at a distance are requested to write, giving symptoms, duration and origin of their disease, and particular pains will be taken in promptly and privately answering. Everyone who writes to me may feel assured that they will receive no mail from me except in answer to theirs, which will be personal, and in a plain sealed envelope, as I positively do not send out question blanks and second-class mail matter, which characterizes the many unreliable medical institutions. My treatment is administered by mail with the same success that I make at my office, and my charges are always so reasonable as to be within reach of everyone. Do not treat elsewhere until you have investigated my methods and terms. Office hours: 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. Sundays, 9 to 1. Address or call on

FIGHTING THE BULL MARKET

Elevator People in Chicago and the Northwest Trying to Down St. Louis.

HEAVY SALES IN THIS MARKET

BY GEORGE D. L. KELLEY.

The feature of the speculative situation in wheat is the strenuous efforts that have been made to knock out the St. Louis bull market. During the week just ended a world of wheat has been sold in this market. The big elevator interests of Chicago and the Northwest sold heavily every day, and the board of trade houses that cater to these interests or are bearishly inclined have followed suit. It is even stated that the great milling companies of the Northwest have been in on this selling movement. The reasons for this combined attack upon the speculative market of St. Louis are easily understood. The elevator people and the milling people are anxious to purchase the actual wheat as cheaply as possible, as they usually do during the first movement of wheat from the farms. Last year the price of cash wheat was forced down to 65½c in St. Louis and to 71½c in Chicago during July, and as low as 66c in St. Louis and 68¼c in Chicago during August, but that year the enormous movement of new wheat to market—5,900,000 bu for July and 6,200,000 bu for August at St. Louis and 3,800,000 bu for July and 7,650,000 bu for August at Chicago—made it an easy matter. The chief reason why Chicago Board of Trade houses join the bear movement is the soreness they feel because St. Louis has run the bull movement and controlled most the speculation thus developed.

It has not been altogether bearish operations that at time adversely affected the market and brought about declines. The breaks in price forced out a large amount of longs, either by hitting stop loss limits, exhausting margins or scaring bulls out of their holdings, and that is just what these bearish operations are for. If the principal lines of long wheat held here could be forced out and thrown upon the market the bears would be on easy street. So far they haven't struck that route. Last Monday the market broke 2c, and since then there have been numerous drives at the market that brought about sharp declines, but never were the big bull lines disturbed, and the support that always came on these declines always rallied the market as sharply as it had declined. The legitimate situation locally was entirely too strong to cause the true believer in that side to have his faith shaken. The legitimate situation the whole country over is nearly as strong as it is locally, as recent developments have shown. There may come temporary periods of depression through overwhelming bear speculation or shake outs, but 75c in the St. Louis market looks low to me and much higher figures will be seen eventually.

As yet there is nothing in the supply and demand situation at this market to make any change in the bullish statements I have made regarding September wheat generally and the St. Louis market primarily. So far as the former is concerned, the returns from the threshing from Kansas to the Atlantic seaboard show that the yield of soft winter wheat is one of if not the most disappointing this country has ever experienced. In 1885 the average yield per acre was reported as 10.4. At that rate and estimating the area under soft winter as about 25,500,000 acres, the yield would be 265,000,000 bu. Adding to that a crop of 120,000,000 bu hard winter, estimating the area at 8,000,000 acres and the average yield at 15 bu per acre, the total winter wheat crop would be indicated as 385,000,000 bu. Now that the threshing returns on hard winter are beginning to be heard from it looks as though the yield of that description might prove to be disappointing, perhaps not so much so as soft winter, but considerably below the high expectations that had been excited by the statements of wonderful prospects that came from Kansas and Nebraska. If hard winter sections come into the short-yield column the above estimate is too high and present prices in the markets entirely too low.

So far as the St. Louis market is concerned, the bullish conditions are so accentuated that no one can disregard them. Although this market is holding out the inducements of the highest prices for soft winter of any market in the world, yet the receipts of both soft and hard winter, including a considerable percentage of old hard winter, are the smallest in many years, and far below the average for season of the year. The total received this past week showed no great increase over the 462,000 bu that came in the week before, and fell 1,000,000 bu below those for corresponding week last year. Sacked receipts by boat were extraordinarily small—not 1 per cent of the amount that came in during same week last year—and the proportion of soft winter car lots but 67 per cent of the total received, where a year ago it was 97. The condition of the new wheat was first-class, as evidenced by the inspection, 51 per cent of the cars and 60 per cent of the sacked lots grading No. 2 red.

Besides the exceptionally small receipts, there was a milling demand and a basis of cash prices paid that was just as strong evidence of a short crop. When mills in southeast Missouri, southern Illinois and Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee and even North Carolina send buying orders to St. Louis in order to secure supplies, they must be shy supplies at home. That is what has been seen in the home market for two weeks past. Between their purchases and that of city millers premiums of 3½@4½c over July and September and 2½@3½c over December have been easily realized for car lots of No. 2 red delivered, the No. 3 red ranging 2c to 4c below the No. 2. Little new hard winter came in, but that little was of exceptionally fine quality and sold within 1@2c of the top rates of No. 2 soft. Old hard winter sold well, but at much lower prices, as the offerings run poor as a rule. Another unusual event for the month of July has been the decreases in public stocks, due to withdrawals for shipment to outside mills. These decreases have been small, but during same week last year the stock increased 650,000 bu.

All the bullish conditions do not center in soft winter wheat and in the St. Louis market. As indicated above, there is a prospect that hard winter will come into line as a short crop and the spring wheat crop is not secured by a long shot, nor are its conditions anywhere near so brilliant as the people who are short attempt to make out. The last weekly crop bulletins of the weather bureau say of spring wheat: "North Dakota, no improvement, wheat weedy, thin and mostly headed short. South Dakota, wheat heads generally good size except in north; some rust and lodging. Minnesota, more rain needed in north; wheat thin in north, heading short; rank and lodging in south." Speculation did not dictate that report. The usually optimistic Will Edgar says in the latest Northwestern Miller: "From Manitoba today come reports of deterioration of wheat crop and a considerable reduction in estimates of probable yield. Wheat is said to be heading out poorly and yield to be no more than 18 bushels to acre." Col. Edgar abhors option trading, looking upon it as one of the many devices of Satan to ensnare men's souls and bank rolls. Across the water short yields are conceded for western Europe, where the weather has turned stormy, threatening a wet harvest. Their available supplies on July 1 were 2,000,000 bu larger than on same date last year, but since then a good decrease has been made in "ocean wheat" and from the outlook for world's shipments further decreases appear only too probable. More than that, visible supplies in America are decreasing, and with primary receipts only half what they were last year, these decreases may be seen all July. During that month last year they increased over 2,100,000 bu and during July for three years preceding 1902 there were no decreases. And another argument to advance: If the domestic consumptive requirements are as large during 1903-04 as they were for 1902-03 they indicated then as 410,000,000 bu, the seeding the same, say 77,000,000 bu, and the exports in flour and wheat the same, or 201,000,000 bu, a total crop of 635,000,000 bu would be squeezed pretty close even with 78,000,000 bu carried over on the farms and in available supplies on July 1 to add to it.

Secretary Wilson of the agricultural department has set the seal of his official position upon the statement that the corn crop will be a short one, as also upon the generally accepted belief that it will take continued favorable weather to produce a yield that can be classed as an average. Every farmer in the land, including those who sow wind in the grain pits and raise crops of profits and losses and frequently raise—well, you know—were all assured of this fact that the secretary so sagely enunciated, but then it sounds stronger coming from him. But what I was coming to was this—that so far since the crop got out of the bad season that it was planted in it has been pretty well treated by Dame Nature, and certainly has done as well as could be expected after the bad start it had in life, but the backward and irregular growth for which the crop is famous is hardly calculated to bring forth a yield anywhere near an average, no matter how favorable the weather is. And the weather has been good so long that like a small boy it is liable to go wrong at any moment.

With all the favoring weather speculation has found it a difficult task to work the price down materially. It is claimed there is plenty of corn back in the country, but so far it does not come forward to any great extent, though the markets are paying mighty good prices for the tail end of a two and a half billion crop. For one thing speculation is inclined to strongly favor the buying side, believing the chances of the future, whether in the shape of weather or supply and demand conditions, will work for that side. Locally the cash situation has not been favorable for some time past, the domestic requirements not coming at all strong, but it is notable that elevator people and exporters pick up all the cash they can at around 49c.

Stood off by the prospective new crop movement, which just beginning to show at the markets, and by the complete fall down in the southern demands, which due to the new crop filling their requirements cheaper than the markets, because of these conditions, speculation has practically cut out oats. There was more effort made to sell than to buy and the result was an easing off in price. In this grain there are not now any features of particular interest.

WOLVES BECOMING BOLD AT WATERLOO

They Cross From Missouri and Multiply in Caves of Duck Hollow.

William Pryor, a prominent farmer of near Waterloo, Ill., while plowing land near Duck Hollow, yesterday, saw a large gray wolf coming toward his house. He ran to the house, got his shotgun and shot and killed the wolf.

It was four feet long from tip to tip, and two feet high, and weighed 50 pounds. Mr. Pryor took it to County Clerk Albert Gauen and received the $5 bounty which is paid for each wolf killed in Illinois.

Duck Hollow is a dense wilderness which has many rocky caves. It is two miles wide and over eight miles long. It is only five miles from the Mississippi river, and in winter the wolves come across the river from Missouri when it is frozen.

Over 20 wolves have been seen there in a herd, and they attack and devour young hogs and lambs, and also attack cattle.

Several hunting expeditions have been made after them, but the wilderness is so dense that they are hard to find.

Dr. A. F. Schellschmidt was returning through the Duck Hollow at night recently after having attended a patient when the wolves attacked his horses, and it was with great difficulty that he got away from them. They are increasing so rapidly it is becoming unsafe for children to go out alone.

LACE WORTH $6000 MISSING

Six Yards of Rare Fabric, Valued at $1000 a Yard, Disappears in Transit.

POST-DISPATCH BUREAU,
1345 Pennsylvania Avenue.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Officials of the Adams Express Co. are trying to find six yards of lace, valued at $6000. It is the property of Mrs. Bates, wife of former Paymaster-General Bates of the army.

The lost lace, worth $1000 a yard, is part of a set valued at $30,000, and the missing package was intrusted to the express company in New York, April 6, for delivery in this city.

Mrs. Bates is now in Europe with her daughter, who, it is said, is to be married this fall.

One who has been boarding for any length of time is generally very happy to stay in a boarding house that they are entirely satisfied with, providing they can find such a place. A. PARKER CAN COME HOME.

Man He Knocked Down in a Fight Will Not Molest Him.

Immediately after a fight in which he knocked his antagonist down, two months ago last Tuesday, 17-year-old Albert Parker of 1924 Mackland avenue ran to his home, bade his father and mother goodby and has not been seen since.

He is an only son and the parents are both ill from anxiety over his absence. They have not heard from him since he left them.

They believe the boy went away because he was afraid of the man with whom he fought. This man has promised them, however, that he will not harm their son if he retuns home.

Young Parker was employed in the Evens-Howard brickyard and the fight took place there as the result of prolonged trouble he had had with another employe. His father is Tobias Parker.

MARKET UNSETTLED BY BANK RETURN

First Up, Then Down, the Prices Went After the Report Was Issued.

STATEMENT UNSATISFACTORY

New York Post's Review Says It Is Fast Becoming an Absurdity Under Present Conditions.

NEW YORK, July 18.—In its Wall street review today the Evening Post says:

Our weekly bank statement, under present conditions, is fast becoming an absurdity. The result of this vicious system is a weekly statement which, on July 11, reported $3,200,000 loss in cash, where none was really lost, and on July 18, a gain of $6,000,000 where $3,000,000 was the autual limit. The loan account—upon which after the first astonishment over cash changes had evaporated, attention was converged, showed decrease of only $2,513,000. This is hardly satisfactory.

The stock market seemed to be somewhat bewildered over the bank return. It had opened irregular, then had declined a fraction, with a one-point break in New York Central.

On the bank statement's publication prices recovered sharply, some stocks nearly returning to the best prices of the day. This movement did not continue long; selling pressure began again and much of the late advance was lost.

The day's net changes were very irregular. Since all the business done on the stock exchange came from professional operators, it is impossible to guess whether "traders" sold because the cash showing was good or because the return was not. Generally, the word had been passed around that "profits would be taken" if the statement should be encouraging.

Street Men Relied on the Europeans.

Wall street had a comfortable saying, when prices of stocks were in the clouds, but the balloon was beginning to get a little unmanageable, that, if home buyers should unexpectedly become satiated Europe would help us out.

Europe had always taken our securities when we grew tired of holding them, and why should she be any different now from what she used to be?

To hasten the sluggish foreigner, our bankers occasionally hired some agents of our own to rush into Chapel Court and pretend that they were Europeans. It deceived a few hangers-on of the Wall street curb; but the honest Briton did not even suspect that an imposition was being attempted. He returned to his office and told his partner that New York was buying crazily on the London stock exchange, and, between them, they managed to find some American stocks to sell to the eager bidder.

The truth is, the European investor has done practically nothing with our securities since the days, as far back as 1899, when American share certificates with the dust of the London strongbox hardly off them and the names of well-known English investors written on their backs, were delivered in Wall street from the steamer mail.

This little episode of the past is what lends particular interest to the episode of the present week.

English Bankers Buying Stocks.

English bankers have bought some stocks from us; it now remains to see what they will do with them. Stocks they have bought cautiously. They have, however, betrayed the utmost eagerness for investing at 6 per cent in our railway corporation notes, secured by prime mortgage collateral, the money which they can borrow in Lombard street for 2½.

This is unodubtedly a form of foreign investment in our market, but it is somehow a form which does not appeal to discriminating watchers. The sooner we get ourselves free from that sort of international dealing the better for us.

What is to get us out? It is a little difficult to say. We shall be helped in the process by our agricultural exports, but the difficulty, even there, is that our import trade continues to rise rather faster than our exports. Excess of merchandise exports during June was much the smallest for that month, since 1897.

While exports increased $5,800,000, imports ran nearly $9,000,000 beyond last year. At present prices it would require a monthly increase of 10,500,000 bushels in our wheat exports to offset this gain in imports, and just now our shipments of wheat are considerably less than in either of the two past years.

Shipments of corn, though of course above 1902, are still below the normal, and our "cotton clique" has taken charge of such part of that product as otherwise go forward at profitable prices.

WALL STREET REVIEW BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK, July 18.—Trading in today's stock market was dull and professional. The tone of the narrow speculation showed sentiment very doubtful and hesitating. Stocks were sold early in the day on the assumption that yesterday's upward movement had discounted a favorable bank statement so that no further rise could be expected after its publication. There was a momentary rally when the statement appeared, but the selling was renewed and prices receded to a level substantially below last night, closing dull and heavy without any rally.

The gain in cash was almost twice as much as had been anticipated, but the small loan contraction was a disappointment in view of the heavy liquidation in the stock market. It was hoped that the large portion of the week's railroad corporation loans which were abroad and the fact that the Pennsylvania company has begun the repayment of its six months' notes would result in a substantial contraction of loan obligations.

The fact that the decrease only amounts to $2,513,500 gave rise to a supposition that the banks have been putting out some renewed loans on a large scale to private individuals with the proceeds of the week's liquidation.

Pressure upon Amalgamated Copper was renewed and its decline of nearly 2 points, the weakness of St. Paul and a 3-point drop in Consolidated Gas caused a bad impression on sentiment. Rock Island was again forced down to yesterday's low level. New York Central was supported and recovered a one-point decline. The Toledo, St. Louis & Western stocks made sharp rallies from yesterday's violent breaks.

There were large belated declines in some of the inactive stocks which had not yet been traded in during the late period of reaction. The encouraged views of the business situation expressed by the weekly commercial reviews and the large percentage of increase in gross earnings of railroads according to latest reports were ignored in the trading.

Heavy liquidation in the stock market has been in progress during the week, without any developments in the general business and industrial situation to adequately account for it.

The weakness which developed last week in New York Central on the assumption that its needs for funds must be met by some new capital issues, with the danger of a repetition of the experience met in the floatation of the new Pennsylvania stock issue—spread generally throughout the list as it became known that various railroad corporations had similar needs for funds, which they were supplying by temporary loans, being high rates of interest rather than attempt to sell securities at a sacrifice in the present unfavorable market.

This was not a strictly new situation, as it has been known for some time that the roads sharing in the new control of Hocking Valley had given their notes on a 6 per cent basis.

The extension of a maturing service bond of the Burlington for two years on a 4 per cent basis was also a plain symptom of the disinclination of railroad corporations to attempt any large new issues at this time. The violent decline in Pennsylvania shares in connection with the new issue of stock was a conclusive demonstration of the unfit condition of the market to absorb new issues even of high grade, and the congestion of newer industrial issues in the market had been notorious for months.

Nevertheless, acute uneasiness over the money situation of the present and prospective was caused by the announcement that the Burlington had borrowed $5,000,000 until next March and the Union Pacific $10,000,000 for a year and a half on a 6 per cent basis. Many rumors thereupon became current of large prospective borrowings by various railroads, and of the consequent heavy inroads to be made upon money supplies.

The market took on a tone of demoralization on Wednesday and grave fears began to be felt of the consequences of the shrinkage of values. On that day the influential bankers in the clearing house association took council among themselves and allowed it to become known that careful investigation had assured them of the soundness of the banking situation, and the safety of the position of all city bank and trust companies so far as they could ascertain.

The bankers were averse to making formal announcement of the fact until the result of such an investigation was known on the ground that unfavorable inferences might be drawn from its being thought necessary to take such steps.

But the ground for confidence resulting from the canvass was commonly known in the financial district and had a notable effect in reassuring sentiment. Another fact that had a strong effect in restoring confidence was the sharp response of the foreign exchange market to the rise in the domestic money market. The strength, which has been maintained in the exchange market and the sustained outward movement of gold, in view of the disparity in interest rates here and abroad, were indications of distrust on the part of foreign capital, which gave small hope of relief for domestic money needs from that source. But on Thursday there was a precipitate break in foreign exchange, which transferred the situation from one of apprehension of further gold exports to a prospect that gold could be brought in on occasion of need. Foreign banking houses offered large sums of money in the New York market. It was learned that a large proportion of the Union Pacific and the Burlington had been taken by foreign capitalists. The buying of stocks in the New York market for foreign account was also said to be on liberal scale, although this movement was more obscure, as the decline in prices here had been so much more rapid than in London, as to afford profit in large transactions, sales in London being covered here at the decline.

The rally in the stock market, which resulted in the latter part of the week, wiped out a large portion of the earlier losses and some of the active stocks were lifted above last Saturday's level. Some of the most startling movements of the week were in high grade investment stocks, which are seldom traded in.

Some of these broke scores of points on a few or on single transactions. Such operations may be accounted as showing some urgent necessity for funds. But the limited amount of the sales and the quick recovery in such stocks on the purchase of equally small amounts precludes the idea of any general liquidation going on in these properties or any unfavorable developments regarding the properties themselves.

The marking down of market prices of the high grade investment stocks and of mortgage bonds is a clear intimation of the general tendency to adjust prices to the new interest basis. With the prospect of 6 per cent interest rates for an indefinite period there is little inducement to hold securities on a 3½ or 4 per cent basis. That there has been liquidation of securities by financial institutions with a view to employing funds in the open money market is commonly assumed in Wall street.

The needs of individual capitalists to meet obligations on underwritings and to protect property interests in need of working capital are obvious in some conspicuous cases, are commonly inferred in others and are rumored with all degrees of reliability and unreliability in others.

Wall street professes some anxiety over the outcome of the corn crop on account of its lateness and the settlement of the basis for the coming year's business in iron and steel is eagerly studied. But there is little of the week's settlement in the stock market to be traced to influences from the outside business world.

Reports of railroad earnings and of current railroad traffic are considered a favorable feature. The pressure for loans and the rise in interest rates with the resulting liquidation of marketable securities are accepted as evidence of the undue expansion of credits in enterprises, some of them unsound, some of them overcapitalized, some of them in too rapid anticipation of future growth and some of them for necessary improvements and betterments to accommodate present business, but the capital needs for which had not been sufficiently allowed for.

The bond market was also weak, with some recovery in sympathy with stocks. United States bonds were all unchanged, as compared with the closing of last week.

NEGRO MOB LYNCHED NEGRO

Then tI Cut His Body in Shreds Because He Assaulted a Negro Woman.

LAKE BUTLER, Fla., July 18.—A negro tramp of the name of Adams, who assaulted a negro woman near this place recently, was captured last night by a mob of negroes and lynched.

His body was cut into shreds by the mob and severely disfigured.

PLAGUE OF RATS IN PARIS.

Driven From Earth They Go to the Theaters.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

PARIS, July 18.—Statisticians estimate that there are 40,000,000 rats in France. The tunnelling for the Metropolitan Railroad has made them much in evidence.

Being apparently driven from their holes, they have taken to attending the theaters. At the free matinee performance in celebration of th "Fourteenth," a dozen rats scared the audience.

At the Porte St. Martin Theater, several women fainted while the employes drove out the rats, which, some persons in the audience declared afterward, were as big as cats.

JUDGES DIVIDE THEIR WORK.

Judges Charles T. Moore of Washington County, Benjamin Burroughs of Madison County and Holder of St. Clair County have announced their program for the fall work in the circuit court of the third judicial district of Illinois. Judge Burroughs will preside in St. Clair County and will open the session there Sept. 14. Judge Holder will preside in Randolph, Perry, Monroe and Washington counties, and will open the court sessions in these counties respectively on Sept. 1, Nov. 2, Sept. 28 and Oct. 12. Judge Moore will preside in Bond and Madison, opening court in the former county on Sept. 14, and will convene the Madison County court on Oct. 19.

As the St. Clair County court convenes one week earlier than the court of Bond County, a double court will be in session in Belleville, with Judge Moore of Nashville as the second Judge. This plan will greatly aid in alleviating the congested conditions of the St. Clair County dockets.

NEW YORK PRICES AFFECT ST. LOUIS

The Decline in Local Securities May Be Attributed to Eastern Prices.

NO. AMERICAN AFTER TRANSIT

Many Circumstances Point Towards a Deal to Absorb Traction Interests With Lighting Companies.

BY ROBERT N. PEARSON.

The dealings on the St. Louis Stock Exchange during the past week reflected closely the fluctuations of the New York market. Giltedged stocks in New York were sacrificed to protect New York holdings and the same class of securities in St. Louis were sold at low record prices to get funds to pay for New York stocks which had declined beyond the margin point. It is a fact that St. Louis operators hold today more listed New York stocks, bought and paid for, than at any past period.

The using of local funds to take up outside issues probably had a large influence on the St. Louis market.

Traction securities, being the most popular local speculative stocks, were the first to feel the pressure. Then came the high-priced bank and trust company issues. Declines in the tractions always come in fractions, but a drop in the high-priced stocks means points and not fractions.

Transit opened the week with sales Monday at $21.25. A slight advance the next day cut but little figure and from then there were but slight halts until the low mark of $20.12½ was reached on Thursday. From that point there was some reaction and the close for the week was $20.26¼.

For some time it has appeared as though the interests which had consolidated the lighting interests of St. Louis were figuring to absorb the transportation companies. The announcement of a contract between the Union Electric Light and Power Co. looks like another step in the progress of the North American company to acquire a hold in St. Louis, not only on the lighting interests, but on the street railway franchises, which will place it in full control of the public necessities of the city.

The amount of compensation from the transit company to the Union company has not been anounced, but it is understood to be considerably below what the transit company, with the most modern appliances, could supply. The transit company recently made arrangements to operate a power plant on the East side, where coal could be obtained without paying the bridge arbitrary. Options for the necessary ground were obtained and it looked as though St. Louis would get its electric power from the other side.

After the North American company obtained control of the Laclede Gas and Missouri-Edison companies it found that it had a possible competitor in the field in the shape of the transit company. The signing of a contract by the Union company with the transit company at a price below what the transit company can supply its power can only be construed to mean that the North American company wished to place the transit company beyond the pale of a competitor. Well-informed people say that as soon as monetary conditions are more settled, the North American will make a systematic effort to obtain full control of the traction companies and unite them with the power and lighting interests.

In the trust company section throughout the week Mississippi Valley showed the most weakness. This stock is considered a staple and its lower price undoubtedly was caused by a desire on the part of small investors to get their money where it was money and not stock. Early in the week the price was $412 and from that figure the quotation dropped to sales at $410 on Saturday, with more offered at the same figure.

Other trust stocks were not active. Commonwealth was in evidence from $362.50 down to $362, with only nominal trading. Lincoln Trust suffered less from the general drop than the rest of the list. For two months this stock has had a supporter who took all offerings from $247 to $251 and in a quiet way has accumulated a large line. The buyers are extremely noncommittal as to their motives and their object is purely a matter of conjecture. Missouri Trust had a little flurry, but the range was small and no reason was apparent for the activity.

With the exception of National Bank of Commerce there was little of interest in the banking list. Bank of Commerce, as the highest priced bank issue, followed the lead of other "gilt edges" and sold down during the week; $334 as high and $332 as low covered the range of prices, with more sales of this stock than for any week for a long time. Mechanics' National slipped off during the week, but found an active supporter at marked concessions. Third National did not feel the selling pressure at all and went through the week at $300.

In the industrials National Candy Co. and Central Coal & Coke did all of the business. First preferred shares of Candy Co. sold at [illegible] early in the week with little change in bids and offers during the week. The common stock had some inside support around $19, but was not a considerable factor in the week's dealings.

Central Coal & Coke maintained its reputation as a decidedly erratic stock by going through the week with early bids and offers widely divergent from earlier quotations. The bulk of the sales during the week were around [illegible]. Other industrials figured on the list simply on bids and offers.

Mining stocks were noticeable only because of their absence from the record sheet.

General monetary conditions in St. Louis seem to be in a satisfactory condition. Manufacturing interests appear to be prosperous and the banks say that they have plenty of money to supply legitimate demands.

Many of the St. Louis stock speculators have taken up the stock they bought in New York on margins and have either paid for it outright or are carrying it on margin in the local banks. The amount of this interest is hard to determine and the banks are reticent in giving information, but if there should be any shortage in loanable funds it may well be attributed to the fact that St. Louis is carrying stocks that have hitherto been carried in New York.

AMERICAN COUNTESS SUES FOR DIVOECE

Miriam Celli Declares Her Husband Spent Her Money on Other Women.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 18.—The Countess Miriam Celli, through her attorney, former Mayor S. G. Heiskell, today began secret divorce roceedings against Count Augustino Celli, now in Venice.

Despite the efforts of her attorney to keep the fact a secret, it became known and has caused quite a stir here, where the relatives of Mme. Celli are among the most prominent citizens. She has relatives in Montgomery, Ala., and other places in the South.

She is the daughter of Col. James Williams, United States minister to Turkey under President Buchanan. While abroad Col. Williams married an Italian of great beauty.

In the early '90s the daughter, while traveling through Europe, met Count Celli, prominent and wealthy, and possessed of a large estate near Venice.

After a brief courtship they were married. They lived happily for five years, when the count began to absent himself from home and make merry in Venice.

The countess learned that he was bestowing his afections on others.

He freqeutly borrowed money from her. He finally took her jewels and pawned them and the countess learned that he had eloped to Milan with an acrtess.

She decided to bring her oldest child with her to America, deserting the count. She returned to her relatives in this city with Alphonso, aged 7, and has been earning her living by teaching the Italian, French and German languages.

In her prayer for divorce, she seeks the custody of her three children, the two younger, Ferdinand and Marguerite, being with her relatives in Venice. Her petition declares that the count is a spendthrift and neglects his family, preferring to spend his time in riotous living.

TWO MEN FIRE ON POLICEMAN

Philip Cramer, an East St. Louis policeman, was fired upon while patroling his beat in Lansdowne, a suburb of East St. Louis, about 11 o'clock Friday night. The bullet passed through his hat an inch above his head and the powder burned his face.

In the darkness Cramer could not discern his assailants. They were two men whom he noticed loitering about the street. He asked them where they were going and they replied that they were employes of the Meyer Packing Co., on their way to Collinsville.

At the same instant one of the men drew the revolver and fired straight at Cramer's head. Both of them escaped and took a car for Edwardsville, where they boarded a northbound Wabash train.

Chief of Police Purdy of East St. Louis went to Edwardsville yesterday and began a search for them there.

THERE'S SYSTEM IN FREE ICE DELIVERY

Distribution This Summer in the Hands of King's Daughters and Sons.

ALL CASES ARE INVESTIGATED.

But on Every Application the First Ice Is Sent Without Question Because Delay Might Be Fatal.

The Free Ice Circle of the King's Daughters and Sons will have charge of the distribution of the ice purchased with the funds of the Post-Dispatch Free Ice Fund this summer.

The society has managed the distribution of free ice in St. Louis for almost ten years and has reduced the ice charity to a practical, working system.

Its leader is Mrs. Alvin H. Sippy of 4151 Morgan street.

When the circle began its work ice was given to sick persons only. Later the scope of the work enlarged and the worthy poor were supplied. In the hot summer of 1901 when the Post-Dispatch took up the work of giving out free ice, the members of the circle worked in conjunction with the Post-Dispatch. In 1902 they did likewise.

Their plan of work was found to be so good that the work of 1903 was given into their hands entirely.

As soon as names of persons in need of free ice are reported to the officer of the circle an order is telephoned to the ice company to deliver ice to the person named. The person to whom the ice is delivered is given a card by the ice man, who keeps a duplicate card.

On this card is recorded the amount of ice delivered each day. Some time after the first delivery the visitor of the circle, Miss Louise Hill, investigates the case and determines if it is a worthy one.

If so the ice delivery continues. The visitor instructs the beneficiaries to carefully keep the card issued by the ice man, as it serves as part of the bookkeeping of the circle.

She tells them when the ice is not delivered to notify the officers of the circle and for that purpose provides them with postal cards already addressed.

Sickness Makes a Difference.

The usual amount delivered to each family is 15 pounds daily. Should there be sickness in the family the allowance is made greater.

The circle makes it a point to always send the first ice without investigation, believing that ice sometimes saves life, and its delivery should not be delayed, no matter how unworthy the recipient.

The circle will be glad to receive names from any source telling of persons in need of ice.

Miss Hill has found many pathetic cases in her rounds. In one place she found a boy aged 15 raving with fever. He could eat nothing. By means of the free ice his mother made an ice pack for his head. When his food had been cooled by ice he was able to eat a portion of it. Her monthly report is full of such incidents. She speaks of the great need of ice in homes where babies are teething.

In one home she found an old man who was injured by a Transit car. For years previous to his injury his wife was unable to leave her bed. When they brought him home injured she arose from her bed and became the breadwinner of the family. Her small earnings are not large enough to purchase ice to keep her old husband supplied with cool drinks during the day. With the Free Ice Fund it is possible for him to have this much of luxury.

Considerable funds are needed to complete the work. During the present hot season the demands for ice increases daily. Funds for the work will be received at the Post-Dispatch office, 212 North Broadway, or by Miss Edith Kent Childs, treasurer of the circle, 5207 Ridge avenue.

Contributions have been received from the following:

Mildred Ware Kotany	$2 00
E. L. Burdick	1 00
Miss Kate Roth	8 00
A. B. Judson	1 00

$1,500,000 WEDDING PRESENT

Bridegroom Will Receive a Million From His Parents and Bride $500,000 From Hers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 18.—A local newspaper prints the following:

"The bridegroom of an early wedding will receive $1,000,000 on his wedding day and the bride $500,000."

The bride is Miss Helen Dalziel, a native of San Francisco, and the bridegroom is Rene Nagelmackers of Paris. The wedding will take place in September at the London home of Mr. and Mrs. Davidson Dalziel, parents of the bride.

A few years ago the Dalziels came to San Francisco from Australia and were identified with local newspaper and theatrical affairs. The father prospered in Chicago and New York. His Paris partner is the father of the young bridegroom.

MME. LOUBET WAS VERY WISE.

Didn't Bite at a Bride-Elect's "Con" Game.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.

PARIS, July 18.—An ambitious young woman of Senones who was about to be married wanted a brilliant wedding, but her family could not afford to give her one. So she wrote to Mme. Loubet, the French President's wife, representing that her family was almost in rags and asking for $60 that she might be able to get an appropriate trousseau.

No response coming, the maiden wrote again and even a third time.

Finally she was summoned to the City Hall to see the mayor. She went joyfully, seeing her $60 in perspective and an array of bridal finery quite to her taste.

Instead of money she received a severe admonition from the mayor for misrepresenting her family's state.

Mme. Loubet had written inquiring into her condition, and the mayor's investigation exposed the fraud.

IT WAS TOO HOT TO LIVE.

Therefore, Wealthy Danish Student Ended His Life.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

PARIS, July 18.—The flippancy with which persons commit suicide is about to become a matter of scientific investigation. Here is the latest case:

A Danish student of means, stopping at a hotel on Place Vendome, in Paris, shot himself, leaving this laconic note:

"Life disgusts me. The weather is too hot."

He was only 23 years old. His father and mother are living in Denmark.

Lost Power Restored

To Men of All Ages.

Dr. Meyers' Staff of Physicians.

There is not a man in existence who is suffering from impotency that we cannot rebuild and strengthen so as to accomplish the greatest desire and experience the keenest satisfaction, and after we have cured a case of this kind there will never again be a sign of weakness, except brought on by imprudence.

OUR GUARANTEE IS NOT A DOLLAR NEED BE PAID
UNTIL CURED.

OUR SUMMER OFFER.

In view of there being so many afflicted with private and chronic pelvic diseases, who are treating with quack specialists and inexperienced physicians without receiving any benefit, we have decided to make a special offer to charge only one-half of our regular fee for curing those who are now undergoing treatment elsewhere and are dissatisfied, provided they come to us before Aug. 1, 1903. For instance, if you are afflicted with either Piles, Rupture, Varicocele, Hydrocele, Stricture or Nervous Decline, our charge for curing either of which, without any complication, is $25.00, we will cure you for $12.50, and accept the money in any way you may wish to pay. We will also cure Contagious Blood Poison for $25.00, which is just half our regular fee. This liberal offer is made to enable those to be cured who have spent their money in doctoring without relief, and to show the many who have treated with dozens of physicians without benefit that we have the only methods that produce a lifelong cure.

About three-fourths of the male population from 20 to 60 years of age are troubled with an abnormally weak condition of the organs of procreation, and during this period, by all means and at all times this function should afford pleasure of the highest degree, with no impediment whatever to the satisfaction of the disposition. The only obstacle to the enjoyment of Nature's most treasured gift to man is disease which is invariably brought on by the youth in his teens or the many excesses to which man is apt to be addicted. Varicocele, emissions, drains, premature discharge, small organs, weak back, all are symptoms of rapid decline.

OUR CURE is a thorough and scientific course of treatment, which acts at once upon the nerve forces, stopping the drain, and replacing the worn-out and run-down tissues. It increases the weight in sound, healthy flesh and muscles that give strength and fills the brain and nerves with fresh vitality, building up the entire system and transforming the sufferer into a type of perfect manhood.

CONSULTATION FREE AND INVITED. Full information and treatment will be given by mail in case you cannot visit our office. Every man can take our treatment, because our charges are moderate, and never any more than one can conveniently pay. Do not treat elsewhere until you have investigated our methods and terms. Office hours: 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; 7 p. m. to 8 p. m. Sundays, 9 to 1. Address or call on

KNOW YE THIS

The nose may make or mar the beauty of any face. If homely or deformed it cannot be hidden or atoned for by any other featural attraction, but when well molded and symmetrical, it lends beauty and distinction to the whole countenance.

I straighten a humped or crooked nose, build up a flat or dished nose, shorten a long nose and narrow a broad nose. I set back outstanding or lopped ears, correct baggy, puffy eyelids, flat, flabby neck and throat, eradicate wrinkles, frowns, lines, furrows—in fact, all imperfections of the features are painlessly, safely and satisfactorily corrected and made to conform artistically and harmoniously with their surroundings.

I permanently cure skin and scalp diseases, stop hair falling, fading, splitting and restore both the hair and scalp to a healthy natural state.

I painlessly remove moles, warts, wens, cysts, scars—tattoo, powder or birth marks, liver spots, freckles—blotches, superfluous hairs and all unsightly blemishes on, in or under the skin.

My experience of 30 years is of great value to you. Consultation is free, and the strictest privacy assured. Call or write personally to Free Cure For Consumption.

It Has Been Tried and Tested by State Officials and Great Medical Men Who Pronounce It the Grandest Discovery of the Age.

A Large Trial Package Sent Free by Return Mail to All Who Send Their Name and Address.

I have made the most marvelous discovery in the realms of medicine. I have produced a mysterious compound unknown to other chemists or to medical science, and it has proven the most wonderful cure for consumption, coughs, throat and lung troubles ever discovered.

I Cure Consumption, Coughs, Throat and Lung Troubles—Dr. Yonkerman.

I have taken consumptives who were gasping upon their death-beds, given up by their own home physicians to die in a day or two, and I have cured them completely. Time and again I have restored health to consumptives who were in the very jaws of death. My marvelous and mysterious compound, of which I alone hold the secret, will cure any case of consumption, coughs, throat and lung troubles, no matter how far advanced. Where there is life there is hope, for my marvelous compound will cure consumption in every stage. I furnish proof in thousands of instances. The leading men in nearly every civilized community have carefully investigated my wonderful discovery and all have been compelled by the stories of those I have cured of the deadly consumption to acknowledge that my work is little short of miraculous, and that I positively do cure consumption, no matter how many remedies or doctors have failed.

The Rev. Edward Collins of Detroit, Mich., one of the most noted pulpit orators in the west.

Hon. E. A. Moriarity, secretary of the Division of Health, Department of Public Safety, Columbus, Ohio.

Hon. A. T. Park, Duluth, Minn., county superintendent of schools and one of the foremost educators in the United States.

Senator Henry J. Gjertsen of Minneapolis, Inspector-General of the State of Minnesota, and member of Gov. Van Sant's staff.

Hon. Harry L. Fisher of Greater New York, one of the best known business men in New York, and a famous political leader.

Hon. W. B. Hennessy, managing editor of the St. Paul (Minn.) Globe, and prominent member of the Minnesota Legislature.

Hon. J. M. Brenton, mayor of Des Moines, the capital city of Iowa, and one of the noted orators in the west.

Hon. W. H. Hinrichsen, former Secretary of State of Illinois, and ex-member of Congress.

Hon. L. P. McCormack, State Labor Commissioner of Indiana, and one of the most popular men in his state.

Hon. S. M. Fries, Lincoln, Neb., member of the Nebraska State Legislature.

Hon. Richard E. Burke, Chicago, Democratic leader in the Illinois House of Representatives and noted lawyer.

Hon. Ralph S. Gregory of Muncie, Ind., one of the most noted criminal lawyers in the United States.

Judge W. O. Cardwell Kansas City, one of the best known jurists and public men of the State of Missouri.

Hon. D. J. O'Brien, Omaha, who is popularly known as "The Delmonico of Omaha" and the west.

I do not ask any consumptive to take my word for this, I want every person sick and suffering from consumption to write me. Address me personally, Dr. Derk P. Yonkerman, 2643 Shakspeare bldg., Kalamazoo, Mich., and I will gladly send them, by return mail, a large trial package absolutely free, all charges prepaid, and I guarantee that no matter how sick or discouraged you are this trial treatment will convince you and do you more good than all changes of climate or other remedies.

THESE BABIES ARE CRYING FOR MILK

They Cannot Be Satisfied Until Salvation Army Nursery Gets a Cow.

PUBLIC IS ASKED TO HELP

Unless Cow Is Obtained at Once Some of Them Will Not Live Through the Hot Season.

Wanted—One cow, by 12 babies at the Salvation Army Nursery, Old Orchard.

Have you a cow you want to give away? Not a tin cow or a purple cow, but a good cow that likes to give milk for babies?

If you haven't a cow, a penny or a nickel or a dime or a quarter or even a dollar, will do to help buy the cow. The cow has to be bought at once, too. The babies are starving. Their nurses are willing to buy milk for them, but they cannot get milk in Old Orchard.

This is how the babies happen to be at Old Orchard. About one year ago Adjutant Stewart of the Salvation Army started a creche at 1721 South Broadway. There she and her fellow workers cared for the babies of mothers who were employed during the day. They charged $1 a week for the care given each baby. Accounts ran on, and at the end of the season some of the parents went away and left their babies in the charge of the nursery, failing to leave their addresses.

The babies were kept all winter. When summer came Adjutant Stewart realized that the third story of a tenement house was no place in which to care for a number of small children. Measles broke out. The quarters were too small to care for children without causing the contagion to spread. Other troubles came; principally the heat. One of the children, the one the adjutant had cared for the most tenderly because it was weak, died.

Adjutant Stewart and her workers decided to take the babies to the country. They went to Old Orchard, where rented a house at $16 a month. There they took the babies.

The fresh air did them much good, but the food problem arose in all its might. Cow's milk could not be bought in Old Orchard. The revenue of the nursery amounted to but $4 a week, only a few of the mothers paying the board of their children. Adjutant Stewart's helpers could no longer help her by selling War Crys. They were compelled to give all their time to the children.

All they want now is a cow. If a cow is forthcoming a separator will be purchased and the babies fed scientifically, and their health thus improved.

The children at the nursery range in age from 8 months to 2 years. Most of their parents are women from the South Side, who must earn their living by working during the day.

The Post-Dispatch will receive contributions for the Salvation Army nursery cow fund and publish a list of the donors.

Meanwhile, remember that the babies are hungry and crying for milk.

The following letters and contributions have been received:

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Please find inclosed 25 cents to help buy a cow for the Salvation Army babies. I will watch the fund grow and send again if it is needed.

TO EXPEL KISHINEFF REFUGEES

Russia Will Not Permit Them to Live in Villages to Which They Fled.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 18.—The police commissary of the Kishineff district has transmitted to the police commissioners in his juridiction the following circular:

"As a result of the disturbances at Kishineff April 10 and 20, and in consequence, also, of the alarming reports in circulation and the possibility of fresh disorders, may Jewish families have left Kishineff and settled in villages of the district contrary to the law of May, 1882.

"Consequently, with a view to avoiding the very disagreeable result to which this might lead, I herewith instruct commissaries to take vigorous measures for the expulsion of such Jews from localities where they have no right to live.

"I think it my duty to add that, if commissaries fail to carry out these instructions, I will deem myself obliged to inform the governor thereof."

The free cooking demonstrations given at Bowen and Michigan avenues by Miss Mary Lamson Clark under the auspices of the Laclede Gas Co. have attracted so much attention and been such a success in every way that the management of the gas company have made arrangements to have Miss Clark spend another week in Carondelet that all the people of that vicinity may have the opportunity of hearing this well-known lecturer on such an important subject. The location, however, will be changed to 7526 Michigan avenue, so that those living in the extreme southern section who were unable to attend the first week's demonstration on account of the distance can more conveniently attend those given next week.

Beginning Tuesday, July 21, until Saturday, July 25, two demonstrations will be given daily—afternoon from 3 to 5 and evening from 7:45 to 9 o'clock.

FOR IRRITATIONS OF THE SKIN, RASHES, HEAT, Perspiration, Lameness, and Soreness incidental to Canoeing, Riding, Cycling, Tennis, or any Athletics, no other application so soothing, cooling, and refreshing as a bath with CUTICURA SOAP, followed by gentle anointings with CUTICURA, the Great Skin Cure.

Millions of Women use CUTICURA SOAP for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations of women, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odours. Nothing can induce those who have once used these great skin purifiers and beautifiers to use any others.

Complete external and internal treatment for every humour, consisting of CUTICURA SOAP, to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle; CUTICURA OINTMENT, to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal; and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, and scaly skin, scalp, and blood humours, with loss of hair, when all else fails.

BE A MAN!

Arouse Yourself. Feel the Spark of Life in Your Nerves. Recover the Vigor You Have Lost.

WOULD YOU NOT LIKE TO HAVE YOUR friends point to you as they used to do and say, "There goes a strong man"? Do you not wish your eye to be so bright, your step so firm and your form so erect that men and women will admire you and remark at your manly bearing? These are the thoughts uppermost in the minds of modern men—physical and mental perfection, strength and power.

Who does not like to be strong, to feel that he is equal in strength to any man of his age? You can be if you will obey the appeal here made to you.

Drugs have been tried and have failed. You know that, but Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt cannot fail; it is Electricity, and "Electricity is Life." It gives you the oil with which to set the machinery of your body in motion, and a few months' use of it will assure you health and happiness for the rest of your life. "It is worth its weight in gold to me," says a recent letter. "I would not sell it for all the gold in this state," writes another grateful patient. It will cure all nervous and Organic Weakness, Rheumatism, Lame Back, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all ailments following the effects of dissipation. It will prove of great value to any man who suffers from these ailments.

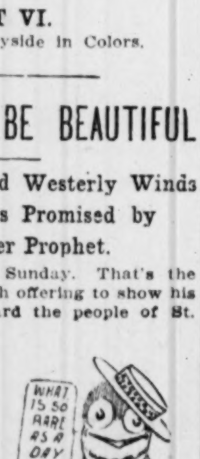
SUNDAY WILL BE BEAUTIFUL

Fair Weather and Westerly Winds Are the Things Promised by the Weather Prophet.

A beautiful, bright Sunday. That's the weather man's Sabbath offering to show his good disposition toward the people of St. Louis. The weather bird will chirp cheerily on this day of rest, for his feathers are fluffy and his heart is light because of the good weather.



WHAT IS SO RARE AS A DAY IN JULY? HA HA!

When the official bureau was last heard from, Saturday night, this was what he said about the prospect. "Fair tonight and Sunday. Westerly winds."

West of the Mississippi nearly all sections are rejoicing in cool weather. In the Ohio valley, on the other hand, a warm wave is reported. The atmospheric disturbances which caused the electrical storms in this city last Friday and Satday, have moved rapidly eastward. Across the northern part of the country, from th[illegible] ley to the Atlantic coast, [illegible] eavy rains and high [illegible] d blustering weather [illegible] Illinois, Northeast- [illegible] ichigan.

COLLINS TRIES TO SHOW POSSE FIRED FIRST

OLD MAN RUDOLPH TELLS OF FIGHT AT HIS CABIN

State Has Closed Its Side of Murder Case and Defense Will Continue Monday in Effort to Break Down Evidence Against Prisoner.

From a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

UNION Mo., July 18.—The state abruptly rested the case against George Collins for the murder of Charles J. Schumacher at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Before court adjourned at 7 o'clock the defense examined four witnesses, two with the purpose of contradicting members of the posse who were with Schumacher when he was shot. The defense made no outline of its case.

The state has submitted evidence that Schumacher was first shot with his hands in the air. Schumacher attempted no resistance. The wound inflicted while he was standing broke his hip bone. He spoke after that.

Schumacher's necessarily fatal wound was downward and forward through the top of his head. Schumacher could not have spoken after that wound. Schumacher fell on his face and his body was moved and robbed.

Other evidence is that implicating Collins in the bank robbery and establishing his confessions as to how it was done. The state undertook to show that Collins shared Rudolph's belief that Schumacher was following them to arrest them, and that he uttered threats against Schumacher.

Emanuel Cromer testified that Collins shot Schumacher as he lay groaning in the snow.

The defense brought witnesses to impeach two members of the posse with Schumacher and Mrs. Rudolph, who testified that the shooting commenced before Collins and Rudolph went out of the house.

Clarence P. Winn of St. Louis, a Pinkerton detective, identified Schumacher's clothing by the many bullet holes and blood stains. The clothing was then offered as evidence over the strong objection of the defense. Peter Thurmas of Stanton identified Schumacher's cap.

Geo. S. Dougherty of New York, a detective, told of the arrest of Collins at 167 State street, Hartford, Conn., in company with his two stepbrothers.

Statements of Posse Retold.

At Collins' room, 32 Allen avenue, his trunk was opened. Here was found over $6000 and two large pearl-handled revolvers. The revolvers were offered as evidence. Dougherty saw this money turned over to Cashier Hoffman of the Bank of Union.

A. W. Hoffman, cashier of the Bank of Union, told of the trip to Hartford, Conn., to receive from the chief of police there the $8600 recovered from Collins' trunk and from Rudolph's person. He identified several pieces of the money by peculiar marks. He also told of finding $500 in silver in the cistern at the Rudolph home. The $500 was identified by odd and mutilated coins.

Hoffman also told of a confession Collins made to him as to the bank robbery.

Herman Zehrt of Union, abarber, who shaved Collins yesterday, testified that Collins told him: "There would have been nothing to it had Schumacher run away like the others."

Josiah Armstead, a farmer of Meramec township, saw Collins and Rudolph the night of the shooting at his place. Rudolph threw George Leffman's loaded shotgun in his stable, and Armstead took it to Leffman after a Mr. Brown discharged both barrels. Leffman, a merchant at Stanton, loaned his shotgun to Charles J. Schumacher, and it was returned to him by Josiah Armstead.

Armstead was recalled and testified: "Rudolph and Collins rode off on my horses. They told me they had to have the horses, and Collins paid me $200. I saw their revolvers before they took the horses." Sergel Armstead was called and did not answer and the state rested its case at 5 o'clock. Twenty-eight witnesses had been examined.

Jerry Campbell of Stanton was the first witness for the defense. He testified that Emanuel Cromer told him just after the shooting Collins snapped an unloaded revolver at Schumacher, but it did not go off and he, Cromer, ran. Cromer was excited and said he lost his revolver as he ran away.

Cromer's Story Is Contradicted.

This was directly opposed to Cromer's story, told as a witness, when he said Collins shot Schumacher as he lay groaning on the ground.

By consent William Meyersick was recalled for the state and testified that Collins told him, "after Schumacher was shot, Cromer stood there with his hands up and I went out, took his gun and kicked him off the place."

Frank Rudolph, step-father of Bill Rudolph, was brought from the county jail to testify. Frank Rudolph is indicted as accessory after the fact to the bank robbery.

Rudolph testified: "Harmes came to the blacksmith shop about 10 o'clock. I heard the shooting and saw Trehenor shoot around the corner of the house. Bill Rudolph came out and called to Trehenor to

POPE'S STRENGTH IS WEARING OUT

Feeble Pulse Shows Loss of Ground, Though Breathing Is Easier.

DOCTORS ANGERED BY RUMORS

Reports That Patient Has Cancer and That He Was Photographed Vigorously Denied by Them.

ROME, July 19, 3:05 a. m.—The Pontiff has dropped off into a sleep which seems half coma. When he wakes Dr. Lapponi will insist that he shall take stimulants and nourishment.

ROME, July 19, 1:35 a. m.—The Pope is agitated and nervous from his long stay in bed and he calls very frequently for his attendants.

ROME, July 18, 9:10 p. m.—The following bulletin has just been issued:

"His holiness has rested only a little during the day. His breathing is tranquil. Respiration, 34; pulse, small and feeble, 92; temperature, 36.8 centigrade. His general condition is depressed.
"LAPPONI."
"MAZZONI."

ROME, July 18.—The Pope is reported in this evening's bulletin to be "somewhat better," and breathing easier.

He is greatly depressed and a feeble and quickened pulse indicates that his forces are slowly wearing out.

Nobody, except his doctors and nurses has been admitted to the room today.

The World and Post-Dispatch correspondent interviewed Prof. Mazzoni this afternoon about the report that he had photographed the dying Pope.

The professor authorized the correspondent to express his indignation at such a hoax, one calculated to injure his professional reputation.

Another correspondent asked Dr. Rossini if it was true, as reported to be on his authority, that the Pope has cancer of the pleura and that mortification has set in.

The doctor answered with the following written statement:

"Any such news is absolutely false.—Prof. Eugene Rossini."

During the morning the pontiff remained comparatively quiet, getting some sleep.

For three days the official bulletins have been practically unchanged, showing the patient's condition to be almost stationary.

An Italian proverb says: "When the patient does not get worse he improves greatly," but, in Leo's case, after 15 days, everybody has ceased making predictions.

The heat is beginning to increase. The shutters of the Pope's bedroom are almost closed, the window is open and the curtains are drawn back. It is reported that an electric fan will be put in the room.

WANT BOY'S BODY RECOVERED.

Parents of Joseph Burrichter Offer a Reward of $50.

The body of Joseph Burrichter, aged 17, who was drowned in the river on July 11, has not yet been found and the parents of the boy have offered a reward of $50 for its recovery.

Burrichter was swimming in the river about three miles north of Baden when he was drowned. The steamer Spread Eagle passed up the river at the time and the waves caused by the boat washed the mud banks, making them very slippery. A companion of the drowned boy scrambled out of the water with difficulty, while Burrichter sank as though he had been seized with cramps. Burrichter was dressed only in a pair of yellow bathing trunks. He was thin, about 5 feet 5 inches tall, and had black hair. His body could be identified by a mole on the left shoulder.

CAPT. EWEN PREPARES FOR DEATH MONDAY AT HANDS OF ASSASSINS

Kentuckian, Believing He Will Be Killed on His Arrival in Jackson, Makes Will and Transfers Bank Deposits to His Wife.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 18.—Capt. B. J. Ewen has resigned himself to his fate, firmly believing that he will be assassinated on Monday.

Ewen says the half has never been told regarding the plots to assassinate men in Jackson, and that the men behind the assassination there know he is in possession of knowledge which will hang them.

He firmly believes he will be killed when he alights from the train in Jackson.

Capt. Ewen has made every preparation, even to making his will and to having the money placed in the various banks here by the newspapers transferred to the name of his wife, Mrs. Elsie R. Ewen.

He has taken a friend into his confidence, divulging to him the facts connecting the men at Jackson with the assassinations, stating that it is for those things that have not come out that he fears assassination more than for what has been told regarding Jetts killing Marcum.

Capt. Ewen will go before the special grandjury and tell everything connected with the attempt to bribe him to alter his sworn testimony before the former grandjury and the assassination of some of the men killed previous to Dr. Cox.

Ewen has been an exile since the court adjourned in Jackson when the trial of Jett and White, the alleged assassins of J. B. Marcum, miscarried.

He says, despite the warning of friends and the protests of his wife and daughters, he proposes to answer the summons to appear before the grandjury.

WANTS A WIFE WITH GLASS EYE

Man, Similarly Afflicted, Seeks Bride With Same Deformity, So She'll Never Taunt Him.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 18.—This advertisement was published today:

"Young man, moderate circumstances, and who has glass eye, would like to form the acquaintance of young girl who also has a glass eye or some other deformity not more severe; girl must be respectable; money unnecessary; object matrimony."

The man, who inserted it, received a large number of answers before noon. He is tall and handsome, and no one can suspect the visual defect from a casual glance at him. When a reporter asked him about the strange advertisement, he said:

"I am an inspector for the Interurban Railway. I was a machinist ten years ago, and a piece of iron flew up and struck my right eye, destroying the sight, and making it necessary for me to wear a glass eye.

"I earn $20 a week and wish to marry. But I think it wiser of me to marry a girl who has some personal defect so that she will not be so apt to fling up my deformity should we ever be so unfortunate as to quarrel.

"I know many splendid girls who have no deformity or defect, but I fear to ask any of them to be my wife because the human temper is uncertain, and I should not wish to be taunted by her with having a glass eye. A wife with some physical blemish—not too pronounced, of course, would be more suited to me, I think."

"I think I can find my bride from one of these," he said, holding up the letters.

SHOT BY ST. LOUIS WOMAN

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 18.—Richard Hudson of Orlando, Fla., was shot tonight while in the room of Mrs. Madge Redd Warren of St. Louis, at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Hudson said he shot himself, but after the families of the two had been summoned it was ascertained that the shot had been fired by Mrs. Warren. It was alleged that she was examining a pistol which had been given to her by Hudson and that it was accidentally discharged.

A physician was summoned. After examining the wounded man he said that while the wound was in a dangerous place it was not necessarily fatal, unless blood poison should set in.

Mrs. Warren has been in the city several weeks visiting the family of her father, Captain Oliver Redd, and went to the hospital about a week ago to take the rest cure.

Hudson is wealthy and was returning from a visit to his old home in Connecticut.

COACHMAN SUES FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

Claims His Mistress, a Wealthy Woman, Asked Him to Become Her Husband.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 18.—A petition for breach of promise has been filed by Mitchell Irwin, a coachman, against Mrs. George B. Sennett, a wealthy woman of this city. Irwin, who has been employed by Mrs. Sennett for some time, claims she promised to marry him.

George B. Sennett owned a plant at Meadville, Pa., for the manufacture of oil well supplies, and he was one of the wealthiest and most respected residents of the city. Mrs. Sennett, the first wife, moved, with her daughters, in the highest society. When the woman who became the present Mrs. Sennett appeared on the scene there was a divorce. He married again and a short time afterward moved to this city, bringing with him the plant. When they arrived here one of the finest mansions on Wick avenue was erected for them.

When Sennett died there was a contest over his will, but it was settled, the second Mrs. Sennett giving the first wife and her daughters a considerable sum. Since that time she has lived alone, but has operated the large factory of the George Sennett company.

Recently Irwin threatened to bring suit for breach of promise. Mrs. Sennett became ill. Irwin was still at the house. While Mrs. Sennett was ill her attorneys, in the presence of a city detective, discharged the man.

The suit for $5000 followed. He claims that the agreement was entered into, that he was to obtain the ownership of the horses, carriages, etc., as soon as they were married, and that he is now willing to carry out his part of the contract.

RUSSIA STILL SILENT

Says Manchurian Question in Too Premature Shape for Definite Assurances.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 18—The foreign office states that the Manchurian question has not yet reached a stage justifying a formal statement at this time. It points out that the pour parlers are continuing, that the ports to be opened have not been selected nor the details arranged.

Nothing has yet appeared in any Russian paper on either side of these questions.

At first glance, the above dispatch appears to contradict the official announcement made in Washington Thursday of the receipt of China's promise to open several ports in Manchuria to the world's trade and Russia's "formal assurance of her assent." This, however, is not the case. The Washington dispatch did not say that the negotiations had been concluded or that the ports had been spec[illegible]ed.

"It is gathered," said the dispatch, "from the communication received (at Washington) that they (the ports to be opened) [illegible] Moukden and Ta Tung Kap."

RUDOLPH SUSPECT HIDING IN SWAMP

Man Answering Description of Jail-Breaker Surrounded at Tamms, Ill.

MEMBERS OF POSSE GUARDING

As Soon as Bloodhounds Arrive the Chase of the Fugitive Will Be Taken Up Again.

TAMMS, Ill., July 18.—A man answering the description of William Rudolph, who escaped from the St. Louis jail recently, and who was identified as Rudolph by several men, was run to cover this afternoon in a cane break in Cache bottoms, a swamp district near here.

The cane-brake is being guarded tonight while bloodhounds are being procured, and an attempt to capture the fugitive will be made tomorrow.

During the day the suspect was seen near Sandusky, Ill., and later was traced to the vicinity of Tamms. A posse was formed, and after a search he was discovered. Upon the order to "Halt," the suspect took to his heels. Many shots were fired at him with no effect, and the fugitive finally gained the swamp and ran into a dense canebrake.

Members of the posse were left on guard, and as soon as bloodhounds arrive the chase will be taken up, and every effort made to capture the fugitive.

AFTER EVANSVILLE RIOTERS

Eighty-Eight Persons, Over Half of Whom Are Negroes, Indicted for Race Disturbances.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., July 18.—Eighty-eight persons, charged with taking part in the recent riot, the looting of hardware stores, the charge upon the jail and the attack upon the soldiers have been indicted by the grandjury.

It is said that more than half those indicted are negroes.

Four of the indictments are for burglary and eight for assault and battery with intent to kill. The names have not been made public.

HILL ON THE STOCK MARKET

Says Indigestible, Not Undigested, Securities Are the Cause of Present Unsettled Conditions.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 18.—President James J. Hill returned to St. Paul today after an absence of five weeks. Mr. Hill, with a party of friends, has been taking a summer outing in eastern waters. Asked to express his opinion concerning present financial and industrial conditions, Mr. Hill said:

"The eastern market is, as everybody knows, in a disturbed condition. The railroads of that section have, within a short time, expended vast sums of money in improvements. Industrials have been thrown upon the market in enormous quantities and the public has stopped buying.

"The trouble has been ascribed to 'undigested securities,' but, perhaps we would better call them 'indigestible securities.' These are local features and raise problems having their own peculiar interest and importance to people of the eastern centers. They have not affected the business of the country as a whole, which is in good condition.

"Out here we are not worried, nor do we need to worry about any of these movements that are the cause of some anxiety between Eastern people. We in the Northwest are not dealers in industrials; our people have not invested their money in them. We are cultivating the soil, providing food and shelter, supplying the great fundamental wants of the country.

Confidant of Late Capitalist Did Not Get the Impression That He Considered Himself Husband of Lillie Belle Pierce, Claimant of Estate.

CALLED HER HIS "BABY" AND "LITTLE SWEETHEART"

Acquaintances Were Invited to Accompany Him to Pierce Home, but None Suspected That Any Sort of Marriage Had Taken Place.

Two lifelong friends and business associates of the late Luther E. Imboden told what they knew of the acquaintance between him and Lillie Belle Pierce, who says she is his common law wife, at the hearing in Attorney Wheless' office yesterday afternoon.

They spoke of him in terms of close familiarity and told how they had been with him on pleasure trips and in business deals, but neither of them had supposed that Miss Pierce was his wife.

They said they thought he was "her best friend," and they had heard him call her "Baby" and "Sweetheart." He had never mentioned marriage to them.

The two witnesses were Morris S. Hecht of 5203 Minerva avenue, a retired business man, and a former partner of Imboden, and Louis Lyon of 3843 Olive street.

Lyon closed his testimony by repeating a remark Imboden had made a short time before his death.

"He told me," said Lyon, "that his daughter was going to be married soon and he was going to take a trip East and didn't know how long he would be gone.

"He said it in connection with a business deal he wanted held up until he got back.

"I asked him if he was going east with the bridal party. 'No,' he replied. 'I'm going to take my little sweetheart with me.' I never had met Miss Pierce and didn't know her name, but I had seen her at the office of the safe deposit company. I asked him whom he meant and he said, 'That little blacy-eyed lady you saw with me at the safe deposit company's.'"

Lyon was asked on cross-examination if he thought Imboden was joking when he spoke about the trip.

"Oh, yes," he replied. "I joked him about it and he laughed and said, 'Well, that's all right.' He sort of poked me in the ribs when he said it. I was sure it was a joke."

Introduced Her to His Friends.

Lyon said he knew Imboden for 30 years and sold him goods when he was in business in Arkansas. Lyon was in the wholesales business then. He is now an insurance man, also a mining expert.

He said he had seen Miss Pierce with Imboden three or four times at the office of the safe deposit company, he said, and also at theaters.

Morris S. Hecht knew Miss Pierce well. Imboden, he said, had introduced him to her. He said he was Imboden's most intimate friend up to the time of his death.

"But I didn't know anything about this," said he. "Mr. Imboden was a very reserved man. He didn't talk about his affairs unless he had occasion to in business."

Hecht spoke of Miss Pierce as "Miss Lillie" and said he had heard Imboden call her that and "Baby."

"The first time I remember Imboden's speaking of her," said Hecht, "was when he told me he had met a fine young lady who was an elocutionist and very good at reciting the Declaration of Independence.

"I asked him if it was Miss Pierce and he said 'Yes, how did you know?' I told him I had read about her recitations in the newspapers and just guessed she was the one."

Hecht said he had been at the Pierce home eight or ten times with Imboden. They usually went between 7 and 8 in the evening, and left between 10 and 11.

He remembered taking a meal there once two years ago with Imboden, Dr. Morgan, Mrs. Pierce and "Miss Lillie."

Miss Pierce and her mother, he said, presided at the table and served the meal. Imboden sat next to him.

On another occasion, he said, Imboden had invited him and a woman friend to take dinner at the Pierce home. He said he understood that the invitation was really from Miss Pierce, and he did not remember that Imboden had said who was to pay for the dinner.

Neither he nor his friend accepted the invitation, he said.

He carried messages for Imboden to Miss Pierce, he testified, when the former was ill.

Attentive to No Other Woman.

"Imboden asked me to go to [illegible] and tell her how matters w[illegible] with him," Hecht said. "[illegible] once I delivered a no[illegible]

Hecht sa[illegible] "very re[illegible] He did [illegible] said Hecht. "I called three times while he was gone, perhaps four or five times; I don't remember but three."

Hecht said he was out in public with Imboden and Miss Pierce often. He was at hotels to dinner with them five or six times and went on a picnic to Meramec Highlands in 1901.

Hecht said he first heard of Imboden's death by telephone early in the morning, and at once went to the house. A little while later a note came from Miss Pierce asking him to come and see her. He went to her house about an hour after.

There were two other women beside Miss Pierce there, he said, and they were talking about Imboden. Miss Pierce wanted to hear about his death.

"She acted," he said, "as if she had lost her best friend."

He offered to do anything he could for her, he testified, and she told him she would like to see Imboden's body.

Reconsidered His Promise.

"Just offhand," said Hecht, "I told her that I'd take her there, and she told me to call for her at 5 o'clock that afternoon. When I went for her there were several women there and I didn't say anything until we got on the street.

"Then I told Miss Lillie that under the circumstances I did not believe it was my province to take her there, that Miss Imboden was now the head of the family and I did not want to interfere. I then escorted her back to her house."

Mrs. Parrish, daughter of Mr. Imboden and defendant in the suit, was not present at the hearing yesterday afternoon. She and her husband, Dr. J. G. Parrish, Jr., left last night for New York, whence they will sail for Europe to spend the remainder of the summer, returning in time for the trial in September.

Miss Pierce was in court and assisted her attorney in questioning the witnesses, taking a more active part in the hearing than at any previous time.

There will be no further taking of depositions in St. Louis, as the defense will introduce its evidence in open court. Depositions for the plaintiff will be taken in French Lick Springs, Ind., Wednesday regarding the story of Imboden and Miss Pierce there. According to Miss Pierce, they registered and were known as Mr. and Mrs. L. Pierce.

Depositions for the plaintiff will also probably be taken later at Hot Springs, which they visited together, Miss Pierce appearing as the niece of Imboden.

The Imboden estate, valued at $500,000, was bequeathed by Luther E. Imboden to his daughter, Etelka, now Mrs. D. G. Parrish, Jr. The will was drawn Jan. 10, 1900. In it no mention is made of Miss Pierce, who declares she was the common law wife of Imboden. Imboden died in June.

Seeks Quarter of a Million.

Miss Pierce, through her attorney, has filed a motion in the probate court for a widow's share of the estate, amounting to $250,000, under the law which prohibits a husband willing his property without making provision for his widow.

She alleges that she and Imboden entered into a verbal marriage contract, July 2., 1898, and that Imboden told her this arrangement was legal and binding.

The contract, or marriage, as Miss Pierce regards it, was kept secret, she says, because Imboden had made a promise to his former wife not to take a stepmother into the home over the daughter.

She says that this fall they were to have made their marriage public through a ceremony by a minister or a justice of the peace, the daughter, Etelka, having been married in June. Her father was preparing for her wedding when he died.

Imboden, she said in her testimony, supported her after the contract was made and paid for the provision for the home at which she and her father and mother lived.

She says he spent all his spare time with her, staying days and nights at her house. They also took two trips together, she says, once registering as husband and wife. The other time she was known as his niece.

Her father and mother, she says, were the only sharers of their secret.

A diary plays an important part in the testimony, covering the time from the date of the contract to the present. The only written evidence of the contract is the word "contract" written in pencil in this diary opposite the date July 27, 1898.

In this diary are frequent references to trips Miss Pierce made with Imboden and days he spent with her.

There are also notations of letters she wrote to him daily and sometimes twice a day when he was away. She says he wrote to her with equal frequency.

During the Spanish-American war, she says, she sent him a flag envelope each morning to let him know she was well. His patriotism suggested the use of the flag.

Called Her "Miss" in Public.

Other witnesses testified that Imboden was at the Pierce home daily and often several times a day, and that he entertained friends there as if it were his home.

Other notebooks used in playing dominoes were introduced, showing little notes purporting to have been written by Miss Pierce and Imboden to one another in which she called him "Sport" and he called her by such pet names as "B. S.," meaning Beautiful Sweetheart, "Dovey," "Little Wifey," and "Baby."

In public he always called her Miss Pierce or Miss Lillie.

Two rings, one a marquise with diamonds and pearls, the other a plain band ring, played an important part in the case. Miss Pierce says they were given her by Imboden.

Imboden made his fortune in Arkansas as a merchant and dealer in real estate and mineral lands. A brother also left him $50,000 when he died. When he retired from business he moved to St. Louis with his daughter, Etelka.

This daughter, who is only 19 years old and was married in June to Dr. J. G. Parrish, Jr., is his sole legatee and is defendant in the present suit.

She is a slender, graceful young woman. Her activity in the suit, taking copious notes, speaking out her objections to testimony for the other side and giving audible vent to her feelings in sighs and coughs, has been a feature of the case thus far. She is always accompanied by her husband, a young physician.

Miss Pierce, plaintiff in the suit, is the daughter of a former police sergeant in St. Louis. She is 38 years old, and until she met Imboden was a public reader and teacher of elocution.

She is a brunette with large, flashing black eyes, and she has shared with her antagonist Mrs. Parrish, in giving life to the case with sharp retorts and dramatic expressions of indignation and injured feelings.

Miss Pierce is a divorced woman, having been married in 1890 to John B. Clark, from whom she got a divorce two years later.

Her father and mother are her chief witnesses in the case, both having given exhaustive testimony regarding the marriage contract and the relations which since existed, they say, between daughter and Imboden.

"SPARE NOBODY," SAYS PRESIDENT TO PROSECUTOR

District Attorney Youngs of Brooklyn Is Ordered by Roosevelt to Probe the Postoffice Scandal to the Bottom.

GRANDJURY FINDS THREE BRIBERY INDICTMENTS

Center of Postoffice Disturbance Will Be Removed From Washington, Where the Political Atmosphere Has Tendency to Stifle It.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 18.—United States District Attorney Youngs of Brooklyn went to Oyster Bay Friday night at the request of President Roosevelt, and, in a conference about the postoffice scandal, he was directed to spare no effort and nobody in his crusade against those who have been robbing the government. Full swing has been given Mr. Youngs by the President, and the center of activity of criminal prosecutions of those concerned in postal department thievery is expected to be Brooklyn rather than Washington, where the political atmosphere might interfere with the course of justice.

The federal grandjury in Brooklyn handed in three more indictments today. Two of these were against George F. Miller, agent for the Brandt-Dent automatic cashiers, who, it is alleged, hired former Congressman Edmund H. Driggs to sell the company's machines to the postal department.

Driggs received $12,500 for this work, and, it is alleged, paid George W. Beavers about $5000 of this money for buying the machines for the postal department.

Miller, like Driggs, had already been indicted, but Mr. Youngs decided to have new bills filed against him because of the possibility of Judge Thomas' quashing the original indictments.

The third indictment is, it is said, against Edward J. Brandt, president of the Brandt-Dent Co. The charge against Brandt is said to be that he was a party to the alleged bribery of a congressman.

Beavers Resigned at the First Fire.

George W. Beavers, who resigned from the postoffice department at the first hint of scandal, will make a fight to have the initial proceedings in his case held before United States Commissioner Shields, in Manhattan, in the hope of being discharged on account of some legal flaw in the indictment.

Beavers was in the office of his lawyers today and they called up District Attorney Youngs, on the phone, and asked him if Beavers had been indicted. Mr. Youngs refused to answer the question at that time, explaining that the grandjury was then in session.

Later he issued a statement telling of the indictment of Beavers.

When asked if Beavers would refuse to surrender himself in Brooklyn if commanded to do so by District Attorney Youngs, his lawyer, Mr. Seabury, said he preferred not to discuss that matter until after his talk with Mr. Youngs on Monday. When Mr. Youngs was asked if he would cause the arrest of Beavers on Monday if the accused man did not come to Brooklyn and surrender, he replied.

"We'll cross that bridge when we come to it."

That Mr. Youngs will consent to Beavers' surrender to Commissioner Shields is not expected.

Regarding the case of Beavers, District Attorney Youngs said to a Post-Dispatch correspondent:

Two Charges Against Beavers

"There are two indictments against Beavers, the specific amount mentioned in one being $840 and the amount named in the other being $250, but there is also a number of other sums involved. I will add that the statute of limitations does not apply to Beavers."

When asked about his conference with President Roosevelt, Mr. Youngs said:

"He told me that he didn't think it necessary to impress upon me his wish that the postal matter should be probed to the very bottom; that I must see to it that the probe must go as far as it was possible to go, no matter where it should reach or whom it should hit.

"The President is insistent that the whole matter should be sifted to the utmost in every branch, form and shape. He set forth his wishes in this regard strongly and clearly."

Edward J. Brandt of the Brandt-Dent company lives in Watertown, Wis. He is the wealthiest resident of that town, being the president of the Watertown National Bank, on which the checks sent to former Congressman Driggs were drawn. What steps will be taken to bring him here could not be learned today.

CLERKS' QUARREL MAY END IN GOVERNMENT SCANDAL

POST-DISPATCH BUREAU,
1345 Pennsylvania Avenue.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—An altercation between Louis Kempner, superintendent of the registery division of the postoffice department and Chief Clerk Wm. M. Mooney may be investigated and throw some additional light on the affairs of the General Manifold Company.

Mr. Mooney was detailed by Mr. Kempner to make an inventory of the stock charged to the registry system. It is understood that this report by Mooney showed that there was stored in the basement 15,000 carbon books in excess of what was actually needed for the fiscal year and also in the neighborhood of 7000 in the registry division of the city postoffice.

Kempner, so the story goes, became angered at the report. There are clerks in the registry system who do not hesitate to declare that Kempner's language was severe enough to have warranted Mooney in using personal violence.

Mooney, it is said, took his "dressing down" with great meekness in the beginning, but finally came back at Kempner in terms equally harsh.

When Mooney came down to his office yesterday morning he was directed to address circulars, while the labors of the chief clerk were given to another to perform.

Kempner is from New York. Mooney was appointed from Ohio.

It is expected a rigid inquiry will be made to ascertain why Supt. Kempner was interested in suppressing the fact that [illegible],000 books more than needed have been [illegible]chased from the General Manif[illegible]

10,000 VOICES IN SERVICE OF SONG

Unique Open Air Meeting Drew the Visiting Epworth Leaguers at Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., July 18.—Ten thousand Epworth Leaguers gathered on the Campus Martius in front of the city hall this afternoon in the open air song service that was the feature of the sixth international convention of the league and one of the most unique episodes in the history of the league's conventions.

A great crowd of leaguers filled the square in front of the city hall and stretched up and down Woodward avenue for several hundred yards.

The services were short, merely the singing of the old "coronation" hymn and "America," led by two cornetists. Between songs they gave three cheers for the United States, for King Edward and for the league.

Detroits three meetings in Tent Ontario, Auditorium, Epworth and Detroit opera house were devoted to addresses on "The Church and Civic Righteousness," "The Church and the Industrial Masses" and "The Church and the Liquor Problem." The attendance at the meetings was not so great by many hundreds as at the preceding meetings, perhaps because of the admission fee that was charged to help cover the expense of the convention.

Henry D. Lloyd of New York was the first speaker on "The Church and the Industrial Masses," at the Auditorium meeting. Mr. Lloyd made a strong plea for municipal ownership, for co-operation in business, for direct vote of the people and for old age pensions.

D. D. Woodmansee of Cincinnati, speaking on the same subject, said that the men who labor and the men who employ should stand together on a common christian platform.

"Let the ten commandments and the golden rule be the basis of all settlements," he said, "then this momentous problem of strikes and strikers would cease to disturb the business world."

Dr. J. M. Buckley of New York was the third speaker.

In Tent Ontario, where the subject was "Civic Righteousness," the smallest crowd that has gathered in the tent during the convention was present. The three speakers devoted their time to a condemnation of the liquor traffic.

Dr. P. A. Buker of Columbus, O., gave a history of the workings of the anti-salooon league in the state of Ohio, after which Bishop Galloway of Mississippi discussed the results of temperance work in his own state. Bishop Galloway was followed by Dr. Albert Carman of Canada, who spoke along the same line of thought.

John G. Wooley of Chicago, former Prohibition candidate for the presidency, was the speaker of the evening at the oprea house meeting, where "The Church and the Liquor Problem," was the subject. Rev. J. S. Oliver of Listowel, Canada, also spoke on the same subject.

CONSUL BOWEN RESIGNS.

Gowdy Asked That Deputy Be Transferred From Paris.

(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

PARIS, July 18.—Referring to the recall of United States Deputy Consul-General J. Allison Bowen, Consul-General Gowdy informed the Post-Dispatch correspondent that he (Gowdy) asked the state department at Washington to transfer Mr. Bowen for the good of the service and that the department cabled to Bowen to report at Washington, whereupon the latter promptly cabled his resignation.

Mr. Bowen lost his wife within a year and has not been in good health.

POPULAR CHAUTAUQUA READER TAKING BRIDE ON 10,000 MILE WEDDING TRIP

Prof, Amsbary, Now at Piasa, Converts Professional Tour Into All Summer Honeymoon.

MRS. WALLACE BRUCE AMSBARY

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Bruce Amsbury, who have been spending a week at Piasa Bluffs Chautauqua Assembly, are on a 10,000-mile honeymoon trip.

It started in May in Los Angeles, Cal., and will not end until the middle of September in Kentucky. Meanwhile they will have traversed back and forth many states.

The couple planned their marriage to take place at the beginning of the Chautauqua season, in order that Prof. Amsbary, who is a reader, might take his bride with him on his summer tour.

In the wedding of these two a romance which began on the public platform was privately consummated.

Something like two years ago Miss Bertha Belle Morgan gave a song recital at Urbana, Ill. Prof. Amsbary, whose home is at Champaign, was engaged to appear with her. They met then for the first time and each admired the work of the other, or at least that was the excuse they found for the interest which they felt in each other.

During the ensuing year they met only two or three times, but by that time Prof. Amsbary told himself in confidence that it was not the work of Miss Morgan that he admired, admirable as it was, so much as it was herself, and he vowed that he would win her.

A man who is gadding about the country all the time making people laugh has poor chance to go a-courting, but Prof. Amsbary managed it so well that it was not long until he had told Miss Morgan the same that he had told himself, and it had all been arranged that they should be married.

The home of the singer is in Pasadena, Cal. Last winter she was leading soprano of the First Baptist Church in Los Angeles. Thither Prof. Amsbary hurried in May time and they were married by Rev. Robert Burdette, otherwise Bob Burdette, the humorist.

They started directly on their long wedding trip, and their stop of a week at Piasa was one of the stations along their happy way.

The couple made many friends at the resort. The last night that Prof. Amsbary appeared he read "Expanded America,, by Willis LeonardClanahan .

REPORT ON FREIGHT BLOCKADE

Traffic Bureau Finds Floods the Cause and Urges Merchants to Aid in Breaking It.

As a result of the repeated complaints regarding freight congestion in East St. Louis and delays in delivery, the St. Louis traffic bureau, representing the Merchants' Exchange and Business Men's League, made an investigation of the situation to determine what was necessary to break the blockade.

Commissioner E. S. Tompkins and Frank N. Johnson, a member of the bureau, spent a day inspecting the terminals and freight houses. They reported finding outbound freight moved regularly, the delay in handling inbound freight being the result of the freight handler's strike and the flood.

They found the railroads, they said, making every effort to get back to normal conditions. In order that the situation may be relieved as soon as possible they issued the following statement to members of the Merchants' Exchange and Business Men's League:

"A number of complaints have been filed with the board of managers relative to the blockade of freight in East St. Louis and the delay in the delivery of this freight, which is badly needed by our merchants and manufacturers.

"The matter has had the careful consideration of the board of managers, and after a thorough investigation, they would respectfully recommend, in view of the efforts now being made by the railroads to get the delayed freight delivered, that:

"All freight be removed promptly by the consignee upon receipt of advice that it has been unloaded by the railoads.

"Consignees whose freight is handled by a transfer company, to arrange to accept all freight delivered at their stores before 6:30 p. m., and if they have large consignments on the east side, to accept it if delivered even later than the hour named. Notify the transfer companies if you will do so.

"Consignees to arrange to accept freight all day on Saturdays, until the present congestion is relieved.

"We find that the railroads are working day and night, and Sundays, to get the freight unloaded, but are not able to make much headway, on account of the consignees not taking the freight from the depots when it is unloaded.

"The high waters prevented the delivery of freight for many days, and we believe it to be to the best interests of all concerned that the merchants and manufacturers co-operate with the railroads in raising the present blockade.

"Please give the matter your personal attention, as it is one of vital importance to the commerce of our city."

Mortimer F. Taylor Ill.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Mortimer F. Taylor, a lawyer of this city, but who is well known in St. Louis, was taken to the New York Hospital today upon his arrival from Europe. All information as to the nature of the man's illness was denied at the hospital, but a story became circulated tonight that he is critically ill. Mr. Taylor's former wife is said to be in the West, but her whereabouts are not known. She obtained a divorce from Mr. Taylor some time ago.

TRIES TO SHOW POSSE FIRED FIRST

come back. I saw another man running northeast. I saw Schumacher lying on his back with his head to the south when I went into the house. My daughter Nellie was in the kitchen. My wife and daughter Esther were in the cellar."

In the cross-examination Rudolph told in detail the happenings in the house, and said that Collins went out and got Schumacher's revolver. He left as soon as Mrs. Rudolph recovered from her fainting spell.

In redirect examination the defense brought out in detail the arrest of Rudolph by an armed guard of six men to show "The animus of the state in the prosecution."

Ben Thurman of Stanton testified that Louis Vedder, a deputy sherriff, said to him on the evening of the shooting "Schumacher said 'Give up, boys'. I would not give up. I went out to arrest them and I shot."

Thurman admitted that he had offered to bet on the result of the trial.

Mrs. Nancy Rudolph of Stanton, mother of Bill Rudolph, testified: "When the men nearly beat the kitchen door down as a knock they commenced shooting. Bill and Collins were in the dining room when the shooting commenced. Bill sent Esther, Nellie and me into the cellar, and while we were there the shooting kept up. When we came up Bill was in the house, and Collins came in bleeding.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph refused to answer questions as to the bank money found at their house, acting under advise of their attorney, Judge Schaper, who is defending Collins.

ADMITS EMBEZZLING CHARGE

John Howard Barnes of Baltimore Arrested in St. Louis for Appropriating Firm's Money.

John Howard Barnes, member of a prominent Baltimore family arrested in St. Louis last night on a charge of embezzlement, admits the charge and is willing to return without papers.

The charge was placed against Barnes by the Little Falls Milling Company of Baltimore, by whom he was employed as a clerk. The charge is that he appropriated $1,277.50 of the firm's money.

Barnes has been in St. Louis since March 16, having left Baltimore a few days previous. While here he stped at 2503 North Spring avenue and was employed by the Washburn-Pillsbury Milling Cmpany on Spruce street.

The prisoner says he used the money to speculate for other persons.

BOY DROWNED IN THE RIVER.

Harry Schultz Got Beyond His Depth at Foot of Carroll Street.

Harry Schultz, aged 13, who lived with his parents at 1717 DeKalb street, was drowned in the river at the foot of Carroll street about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The boy had been in the water for a short time when he got beyond his depth and was swept away by the current.

The body has not been recovered. The boy was 4 feet tall, weighed 95 pounds and had dark hair and blue eyes.

ANOTHER BABY FOR CLEVELAND

Fifth Child Has Arrived at Gray Gables—Mother and Infant Doing Well.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., July 18.—The fifth child, a son, who made his advent at Gray Gables, the summer home of Ex-President and Mrs. Grover Cleveland yesterday, and his mother are doing well.

All conditions affecting both are satisfactory, the attendants say.

The twice-told chief executive is highly elated over the birth of a second son and is receiving innumerable messages of congratulation.

The other four children are Ruth, who is 12 years old; Esther 10; Marion 8; and Richard Folsom Cleveland, who is 5.

"Baby Ruth," the eldest, who was the most popular baby in Washington, is a handsome, robust girl, with the winning features of her mother.

Esther, the only child born to a president in the White House, is a flaxen-haired, fearless child, fond of animals.

Marion was born at Buzzard's Bay. She is a blond and a voluble talker.

Richard Folsom, who has been dubbed "Grover Jr." by Princeton students, was born in the old New Jersey university town. He is a sturdy, good looking little chap and a favorite with all. He rules the Cleveland home and must now share his scepter with his younger brother.

Mr. Cleveland is 67 years old.

LIVED TOGETHER ONE MONTH

Belleville Woman Who Wants Divorce Says Her Husband and His Mother Drove Her From Home.

In the Circuit Court at Belleville yesterday Mrs. Loretta Brown filed suit for divorce from George G. Brown. The couple were married June 15, 1901, and lived together only until July 15 of the same year. The wife says that her husband and his mother drove her from their home and compelled her to return to her home in Belleville.

Since the mariage and separation the mental condition of Mrs. Brown has twice been inquired into in the Circuit Court but both times the commission decided that she was sane.

In her petition she alleges that Brown was guilty of cruelty and deserted her.

KANSAS LEADS IN WHEAT.

Milling Expert Declares Crop Will Excel Average Quality.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SIOUX CITY, Io., July 18.—After a tour of the wheat producing states of the central West and South, H. S. Kennedy of Chicago, secretary for the National Millers' Federation, who was here today to attend a conference of millers from four states, said the wheat would be of more than average milling quality.

Mr. Kennedy, perhaps, is in closer touch with exact crop conditions than any other man in the United States. His estimate is as follows:

Texas—good crop; 18,000,000 bushels.
Oklahoma—fine crop; 30,000,000 bushels.
Kansas—excellent crop; 90,000,000 bushels.
Indian Territory—a new wheat country; 10,000,000 bushels.
Southern Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee—half a crop.
Ohio—fair crop.

NEWSBOYS TO HAVE A REAL BIG TIME

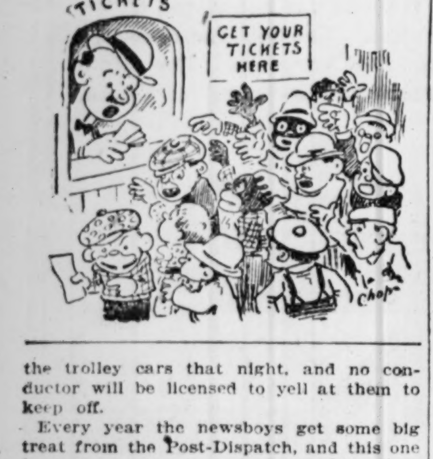
As Guests of the Post-Dispatch They Will Take a Trolley Trip to Mannion's Park.

JOSH JONES WILL BE THERE

He Is Coming in From Gunnyville, Mo., to Be the Official Mascot of the Occasion.

Thousands three and hundreds five
Of the liveliest lads alive—
Boys who sell the Post-Dispatch.
Every one can win from scratch—
Monday night (but keep it dark!)
They will ride to Mannion's Park.

Three thousand five hundred hustlers who sell the Post-Dispatch are going to have the time of their lives Monday night, and Josh Jones of Gunnyville is going to be their mascot. The newsboys will own the trolley cars that night, and no conductor will be licensed to yell at them to keep off.



Every year the newsboys get some big treat from the Post-Dispatch, and this one is to be a street car ride to Mannion's Park and back, with free tickets to the show and special features for the boys' entertainment.

All the boys are talking about the good time that's a-coming. Down at Mannion's Park the actors and actresses are rehearsing special turns that will double up the boys with laughter.

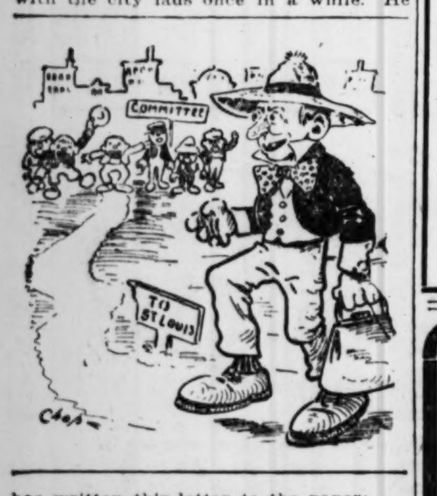
The summer garden show will be great, but the boys themselves will furnish one of the greatest shows ever seen in St. Louis when they board the special cars at the Post-Dispatch office. Crowds of spectators will see this free show, and the boys will be the actors.

If the public wants to see this part of the show and the newsboys want to be in it—and all of them do—they should take note of these facts:

The thirty-five special cars leave the Post-Dispatch office at 7:45 o'clock Monday evening. All aboard!

Branch managers all over the city will distribute tickets to the boys Sunday morning, entitling each to free rides back and forth and a reserved seat at Mannion's Park.

Josh Jones of Gunnyville, Mo., somewhere out on the pike, who has been engaged as official mascot, will walk into the city, arriving just before the boys board the cars. Watch for Josh. You will know him by his cornfield gait. Josh is a good boy and likes to enjoy a time with the city lads once in a while. He has written this letter to the paper:



"Gunnyville, Mizzoury, Juli 17the.

"Dear Mr. Serkelation Man, P.-D.:

"I'm a-comin'. Watch out fer Josh Jones. I red in the paper about the good time you all will have Monday nite, and I sez to ma, sez I, 'Ma, hain't I been workin' like a turible Turk all summer, and hain't sum fun a-comin' to me?' 'Ma, she sez: 'I reckon they be, Joshie.' Sez I, 'I do' want no joshin' now, ma; I want the real thing.' Ma sez, 'Name it, Joshie.' I sez to her, 'I want you to gimme that sock full of pennies I've saved up frum sellin' roastin' years to the Gunnyville town folks, an' sellin' the P.-D. on Sundays.

"Ma, she sez, 'What you want that wealth fer?' Sez I, 'I'm a-goin' into St. Louis, if I haf to wauk, and see that show at Mannion's Park, along with them noosboys that sell the P.-D. They all save their money and I save mine, and we're hustlers. I got my clo'es bought up fer next winter, and I can afford it.'

"Well, Ma, she sez all rite, and I'll be in with the rest of the Post-Dispatch noosboys. I'll start waukin' in by 2 o'clock, soon as I sell out my 48 Sunday P.-D.'s, and I ort to be thar by 4 p. m. a-Monday. The money I save by waukin' I'll spend fer a noo pair of shoes fer Ma.

"So, I say, look out fer Josh Jones—he's a-comin'! Yures,

"JOSH JONES."

DEATH PREVENTED THE LOVE TRYST

Young Man Met Death Msyteriously While on Way to Meet Married Woman.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., July 18.—Section men discovered the dead body of George Kinmon of Kansas City near the Missouri Pacific track east of this city today.

The authorities were notified and the body was brought to town.

Its condition showed that Kinmon had been dead several days and letters in pockets revealed his identity. His address is 1320 Oak street, Kansas City.

At the coroner's inquest this afternoon it developed that letters were found in his pockets from Mrs. Myrtle Williams, living in South Warrensburg, inviting Kinmon to visit her and telling him her husband was away.

Kinmon, it is alleged, was expected by Mrs. Williams Wednesday and she went to the station to meet him, only to be disappointed.

Mrs. Williams acknowledged she had been corresponding with Kinmon for some time. She said she was in love with Kinmon, that she knew him in Kansas City and that his kindness toward her when she had trouble with her husband won her affections.

Kinmon's interference in their family quarrels is said to have engaged the ill will of Williams.

How Kinmon met his death is problem yet to be solved.

Kinmon is a son of John Kinmon, a prominent real estate dealer in Kansas City.

MME. SODER-HUECK DEPARTS.

Will Study Operatic Song Under Great Berlin Singers.

Mme. Soder-Hueck, the well-known singer, will leave for Europe tomorrow, sailing on the Koenigin Luise from New York. While abroad she will place herself under the special instruction of Mme. Lilli Lehmann, one of the greatest German opera singers, and thus perfect herself in operatic song.

Mme. Soder-Hueck's stay in Berlin will cover six months and she also intends in that time to become proficient in song-cycle work, which just now seems to be very attractive to many accomplished songstresses in that it meets the changing taste of concert-goers.

Mme. Soder-Hueck's further arrangements call for several important engagements with a New York impresario. The practically announced first presentation on any stage of Wagner's opera Parsifal, the culmination of the Lohengrin cycle, in New York in less than a year, has also been considered by Mme. Soder-Hueck, who will very probably be a member of the noteworthy cast to which this most remarkable of operatic creations is to be intrusted under Mr. Conreid's management.

FOREIGN OFFICIALS HONOR APPRENTICE

POST-DISPATCH BUREAU,
1345 Pennsylvania Avenue.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Altogether unusual funeral honors were accorded the body of Frederick Mackey, an apprentice of the first class on the battleship Kearsarge. He died on June 19 and was buried the next day at Nyborg, Fyen, Denmark.

Although only an enlisted man, far beneath an officer in social standing, the Danish officials at the place of burial turned out en masse. The wife of the mayor walked a mile and a half in order that she might lay a wreath on the casket of the youth, whose body was being buried in a foreign country. She told Capt. Hemphill she did it because she might, some day, have a son buried in far-off America, and she felt sure some American woman would do as much for her boy.

But still more unusual was the action of the officers of the Fifth infantry stationed at Nyborg. They all turned out, and sent a military escort to accompany the burial party from the Kearsarge. Still more unusual than that was the attendance of the German, Russian and Dutch consuls. Official etiquette, if it says anything on the subject, says they need attend only the funeral of commissioned officers. Mackey was not that, and under the aristocratic form of organization of the navy the chances were about 100,000 to 1 that he could never attain to such an honor.

Capt. Hemphill, in the report he made to the department, asked that the state department make suitable official acknowledgement of what was done. This the navy has requested.

Mackey's home was at Brooklyn, Mass., where his mother lives. She is a widow.

This unusual tribute was paid the body of the dead sailor because he had been a member of a United States battleship in those waters. It was a high token of respect to the country he served.

Mexico Man Congratulated Bride After Ceremony.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO, Mo., July 18.—In the presence of her divorced husband, Mrs. Jennie Northcut was married to John Scott of Godfrey today at the home of her mother in this city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Kirkendorff.

A year ago the bride was divorced from her first husband and by a peculiar coincidence he called at her home in time to see the second ceremony solemnized.

He was one of the first to congratulate the bride.

MISSOURI BANKS TO SELL MONEY ORDERS

Members of State Association Will Compete With Postoffice and Express Companies.

The Missouri Bankers' Association has adopted a money order system similar to that in vogue throughout many states and will hereafter compete with the Post Office department and the express companies for this character of business.

According to St. Louis members of the state association, this step has been decided upon to prevent further encroachments on their business, as it has for some time been felt by bankers that a large part of their legitimate profits were being taken away from them through opposition from the sources mentioned.

Missouri is one of the largest states formally to adopt this plan and has been preceded by Texas, Minnesota, Virginia, Tennessee, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois in the order named. Many of the eastern states are now preparing to take up the system and eventually it is expected to be general.

By this means, the banks will gradually secure a large part of this field for themselves and, by agreement, will cash all bank money orders at par and thus aid in popularizing this mode of transmitting money by mail.

It is argued that the public is more familiar with money orders than with drafts and if bank money orders are extensively advertised, the banks will ultimately recover a large portion of the business that has drifted into other channels, notably the buying and selling of government and express money orders.

The bank money order will have a tendency, it is said, to equalize rates of exchange between competitive banks and to establish a rate where no exchange is now charged.

CAR FAMINE IN KANSAS.

Insufficient Rolling Stock to Carry Wheat Crop to Market.

TOPEKA, Kan., July 18.—On the eve of marketing the great wheat crop of Kansas a serious car famine exists.

"It will be an impossibility," said Cyrus Anderson, secretary of the board of railway commissioners today, "for the railroads to get enough cars into the state to prevent a car famine. There are not enough cars for use on the roads to prevent a car famine. The wheat crop is so large that it will require all of the available freight cars to carry the first installment of it to market."

Owing to the high market price for wheat most farmers are preparing to rush the product to market, and it is believed that comparatively little grain will be held for a raise.

Heavy Destruction of Corn.

WARSAW, Ind., July 18.—A severe storm and heavy rainfall early today destroyed thousands of acres of growing corn. Whole fields east of this place in an area of six miles were ruined.

The Store closes every day at 5 o'clock, except Saturdays.

THE MEYER STORE
COR. BROADWAY & WASHINGTON.

During July and August the store will close at 1 o'clock Saturdays.

Big Reduction Sale

Constipation Leads to Typhoid and Malaria.

Mull's Grape Tonic Cures Constipation.

A constipated man is an easy victim for typhoid and malarial fevers. One whose bowels are open and free will not likely take either. The typhoid germs are harmless until they get into the alimentary canal. Then they do their dirt if allowed to remain very long. It wouldn't do to take a physic, for that would irritate the intestines and make them all the more fertile for the attack of the disease germs. But you must keep the bowels open, and nothing will do it like Mull's Grape Tonic.

It is a tonic which heals the irritation, makes it almost impossible for the germs to get in their deadly work and so stimulates the organs of the digestive parts that they are enabled to voluntarily perform their functions. One dose will prove it.

Mull's Grape Tonic is sold by all druggists at 50 cents a bottle. Send druggist's name and 10 cents to cover postage on large sample bottle.

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Is the name sometimes given to what is generally known as the BAD DISEASE. It is not confined to dens of vice or the lower classes. The purest and best people are sometimes infected with this awful malady through handling the clothing, drinking from the same vessel, using the same toilet articles, or otherwise coming in contact with persons who have contracted it.

It begins usually with a little blister or sore, then swelling in the groins, a red eruption breaks out on the body, sores and ulcers appear in the mouth, the throat becomes ulcerated, the hair, eye brows and lashes fall out and, as the blood becomes more contaminated, copper colored splotches and pustular eruptions and sores appear upon different parts of the body, and the poison even destroys the bones.

Our MAGIC CURE is a Specific for this loathsome disease, and cures it even in the worst forms. It is a perfect antidote for the powerful virus that pollutes the blood and penetrates to all parts of the system. Unless you get this poison out of your blood it will ruin you, and bring disgrace and disease upon your children for it can be transmitted from parent to child.

Write for our free home treatment book and learn all about contagious blood poison. If you want medical advice give us a history of your case, and our physicians will furnish all the information you wish without any charge whatever.

BLOOD POISON

We have a NEW SECRET REMEDY absolutely unknown to the profession. Permanent cures in 15 to 35 days. We refund money if we do not cure. You can be treated at home for the same price and the same guaranty. With those who prefer to come here we will contract to cure them or pay expense of coming, railroad and hotel bills, and make no charge if we fail to cure. If you have taken mercury, iodide potash, and still have aches and pains, mucous patches in mouth, sore throat, pimples, copper-colored spots, ulcers on any parts of the body, hair or eyebrows falling out, it is this secondary blood poison we guarantee to cure. FARMER CHASED BY LIONS.

Quartet of Pumas Give Californian a Close Call for His Life.

LORDSBURG, Cal., July 18.—With his clothing torn into shreds and a burro which he was riding ready to drop, J. B. Camp, a farmer who has a home in the foothills, arrived here a few days ago and asked assistance and protection against four mountain lions.

His story was that while clearing brush in the foothills he had suddenly come upon the lions, and, this being their mating season, they had chased him into his cabin, where he remained two days without assistance. Then he started for this place and on the way he was pursued by two of the lions. In tearing through the brush his clothing had been almost stripped from his body.

He was supplied with firearms and ammunition and, accompanied by several experienced hunters, returned to his camp, where an organized effort will be made to secure the pelts of the lions.

LET ME SERVE DOUBLE TIME.

Don't Make a Criminal of My Wife, Says Man Charged With Shoplifting.

NEW YORK, July 18.—George Lander and his wife, Mary E. Lander of 241 West Eighty-fourth street, were arraigned before Magistrate Deuel in the Jefferson Market police court today charged with shoplifting in a Sixth avenue department store.

The case made out against them by the women detectives of the store was strong, but Lauder made a pitiful plea for his wife.

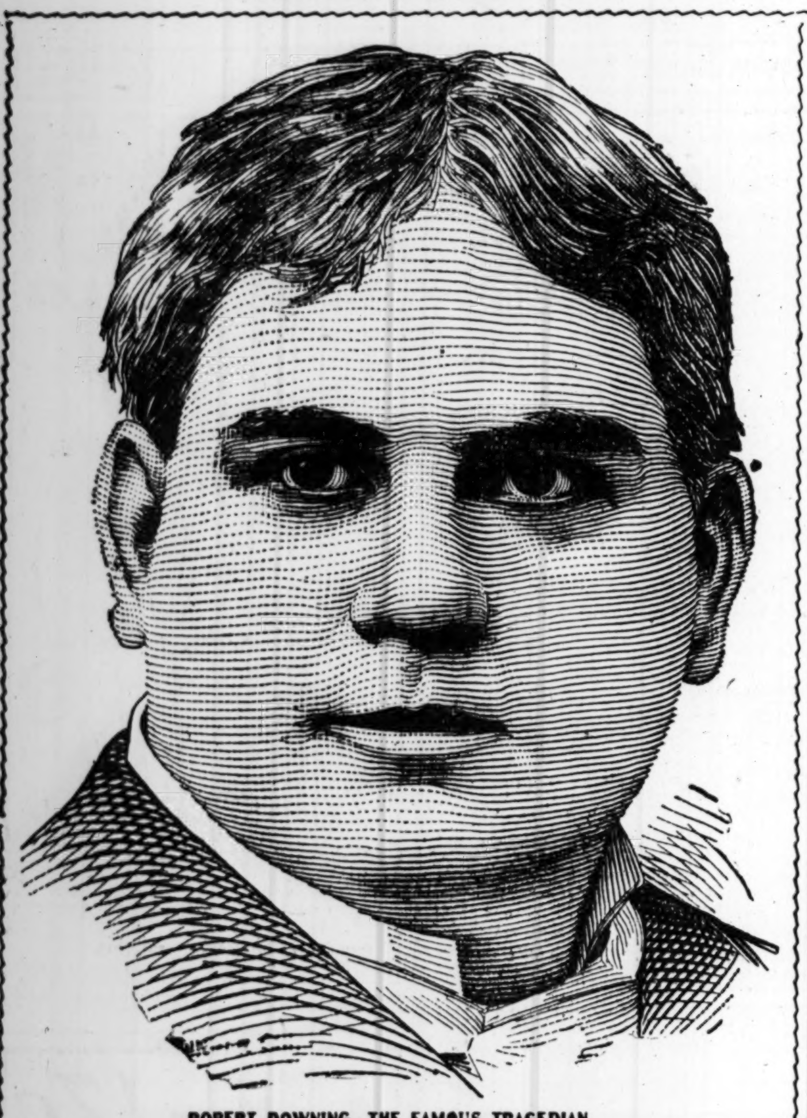
"Your honor," he said, "I am the only guilty one. My wife never did anything like this before, and she didn't know what it meant. I am a consumptive, and have been sick and out of work. I needed the money.

"Let me serve double time, but don't make a criminal of her. Let her go and hold me."

Although Lander is only 26 years old, he is bowed and emaciated. His wife clung to him and cried. Magistrate Deuel was visibly affected by the appeal, but said that it was his duty to hold them in $500 bail each for trial.

SUMMER CATARRH SO LITTLE UNDERSTOOD

Claims Many Thousands. A Great Tragedian's Thanks to Pe-ru-na.



ROBERT DOWNING, THE FAMOUS TRAGEDIAN.

AMONG the greatest, if not the greatest, of American tragedians is Robert Downing. For years he has held American audiences spell-bound with his thrilling interpretation of tragedy. Few people realize what exhaustless energy it requires of a man to keep up this terrible drain of nervous force. If the truth were known it would be found without doubt that few if any of the leading stage artists are without some tonic or nerve invigorator to enable them to keep themselves in a state of absolute health.

Robert Downing, the subject of our sketch, was recently interviewed by the press on this subject. Mr. Downing promptly and emphatically gave the whole credit of his splendid physical condition to Peruna, saying:

"I find it a preventive against all sudden summer ills that swoop upon one in changing climates and water. It is the finest traveling companion and safeguard against malarial influences.

"You may notice that persons in poor health always find the heat most intolerable; this I avoid by using Peruna. I know by the thermometer that the weather is hot, yet I have felt the heat less this summer than ever.

"The cooling action of Peruna on the mucous membrane makes it invaluable to actors and singers, as it does away with that tendency to sudden hoarseness so apt to overtake one on emerging from a hot dressing room to the draughty stage.

To sum it up, Peruna has done me more good than any tonic I have ever taken."—Robert Downing.

Mrs. Hannah Lind, 1132 E. Long St., Columbus, O., says:

"I was for many years a victim of nervous prostration and neuralgia. I would have spells during which my suffering was great. All sorts of treatment was tried, from which I received little or no benefit. Doctors were employed and various kinds of medicines used. Except to give temporary relief, there was no appreciable change in my condition. At last I was induced to try a bottle of Peruna, and, after using two bottles of this medicine, I found myself more improved than from all the other treatment I ever received. I always try to keep Peruna in the house, as I then feel safe from my nervous attacks. It is a wonderful medicine for nervous women, and I recommend it to them, especially during the trying weather of spring and early summer."

Simple stimulants will not cure such cases. Neither will so-called tonics. Nothing but a natural nerve invigorator that restores the mucous membrances to their normal condition will permanently relieve such cases. Dr. Hartman was the first physician in the United States to accurately describe systemic catarrh. His remedy Peruna, the only systemic catarrh remedy yet devised, is now known all over the civilized world. A person having used it once can never be persuaded to be without it when in need of such a remedy.

SECRETS OF DEEP TO BE REVEALED

Italian Inventor Perfects Device by Which Bottom of Sea Is Brought to View.

TREASURES CAN BE FOUND.

With Another Invention Objects Can Be Easily Raised—Tests of Both Machines.

LONDON, July 19.—Cavaliere Pino of Genoa is known on account of the submarine boat of his name, an invention which brought him a knighthood from the King of Italy and the honor of his countrymen.

He is about to become world famous on account of two of the most wonderful inventions ever perfected, inventions which have given him the power to reveal all the secrets of the sea.

Pino, in a word, is master of the sea. His inventions will revolutionize the lives and the ways of all who go down to the sea, to do business on the great waters. They will place him upon such a high pinnacle of fame as few inventors have achieved, and they will bring him, it is reasonable to suppose, such wealth as Solomon or a New York millionaire never dreamed of.

The inventions are, first, a machine called the hydroscope, and, second, a machine called the elevator. The hydroscope is an instrument which enables human eyes to look down into the sea, to behold what it contains, and to examine the floor of the sea at any depth, while the elevator is designed to recover from the water any object seen and coveted from a sunken ironclad to a pearl or a coin. Each invention stands today absolutely perfected awaiting public trial.

These things are not dreams, but sober matters of fact. Every one will soon know all about them, for Pino's agent, Dr. Iberti, is at present in London actively arranging for a public trial of the inventions, and he hopes to have all his plans completed before the end of this month.

There are to be two trials—one at Keil, before the German Emperor, and the other at Southampton, it is hoped before the King, at any rate before the British admiralty and several of the leading shipbuilders and salvage companies.

Can Be Seen at Any Depth.

At these trials it will be proved that the hydroscope enable one to see any object in the water at any depth, and to take clear photographs of the sea bed, while the elevator will prove how it can bring sunken ships of any weight to the surface, and also such small objects as coins.

A private official trial of the hydroscope has already been made by the Italian government on Jan. 25 last, in Portofino harbor, lying between Genoa and Spezia, when it was proved beyond doubt that it would perform all the miracles that its inventor claimed for it. The minister of the Italian royal navy, who has interested himself greatly in Pino's career, sent a torpedo-boat to assist in the experiment and naval representatives from Portofino and S. Margherita, while several naval engineers and captains and two professors of science and two lawyers were also present.

These men, at the end of the trials, signed a document which described how they had seen with their own eyes all the objects on the sea's bed that came within the hydroscope's range with perfect clearness, in their natural forms, colors and positions, bearing strong testimony as to the priceless worth of the invention.

Pino now has at his mercy all the treasures of the sea—the pearls, the sponges, the coral reefs, and the sunken ships with their lost cargoes of gold and works of art. With his hydroscope he can see them, with his elevator he can rescue them.

Sunken Treasure to Be Recovered.

For conceive what treasures of all sorts the sea now hides and jealously guards. To take one example of the sea's natural wealth—a single coral reef, discovered in Japanese waters after two years' search, yielded in one year a profit of more than half a million pounds.

And for an example of the sea's wealth in the shape of sunken treasure one may mention the Black Prince, a British ship that went down in the days of the Crimean war with an enormous sum of gold on board, of which not a single gold piece has been recovered.

Pino has made it possible to locate coral banks and to garner the coral harvest with absolute certainty. He is making arrangements with the British government to recover the Black Prince's cargo.

There is another big contract between Pino and the Greek government for the recovery of certain statues and other works of art of inestimable value known to have been sunk in Cerigotto harbor during the Pompeian war. Through these, treasures from ancient Athens have lain beneath the sea for some 2000 years, already many of them have been photographed as seen by the hydroscope's far-reaching eye at the bottom of the sea.

With the hydroscope to locate sunken ships and the elevator to raise them, the work of the salvage companies will be utterly revolutionized. As it is, divers can only descend some ninety feet, while only a minute proportion of the ships that sink every year are ever brought to the surface again.

The possibilities of the hydroscope, apart from its uses with its companion, the elevator, are endless. Attached to a ship, it enables the captain to see all rocks and sandbanks and other dangers in the water beneath him.

Commanders of men-of-war may see where explosive mines are lying, or observe the approach of submarines or torpedoes. Surveyors, with the hydroscope's help, may map the sea as easily as the land. And cable companies will bless the invention, for it solves at once all their greatest difficulties.

Then the hydroscope offers a new sensation to ocean voyagers, for it may be so adjusted as to reflect the sea's bed and the things in the sea—the fishes and the flowers—on a screen on deck, where a hundred people at the same time may watch, as at a biograph shop, all the infinite beauties of the sea waters as the ship passes over the surface.

One important point must be mentioned. With hydroscopes attached to fishing boats, sea fishing no longer will be a matter of chance. The fishermen will be able to see exactly where the shoals are feeding or moving.

To the hydroscope night and day are alike. Cavaliere Pino has ascertained that even at great depths the instrument needs no help from artificial light in the daytime to clearly reveal everything in the water. But for use at nighttime and in the deepest waters he has designed new electric lamps of enormous penetrative power to illuminate the seabed in its blackest abysses—and so nothing can escape him.

INDICT WALKING DELEAGTES.

Four Counts Found Against Samuel J. Parks by New York Jury.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The grandjury today concluded its investigation of the labor troubles and returned indictments against Samuel J. Parks, Richard Carvel and Timothy McCarthy, walking delegates, who are charged with extortion. There are four counts against Parks, two against Carvel and one against McCarthy.

BROTHER AIDS MATCHMAKING

Letters and Photographs Only Means of Acquaintance Until Young Woman Arrived.

When Franciska Samar, the young immigrant girl who was found asleep on the streets of Belleville Thursday, went to her brother's home in New Baden yesterday, whom she had never seen.

She expects to be married, probably today, to John Beyer, a friend of her brother Aloys Samar. Her brother was the matchmaker, and responsible for the marriage.

John Beyer, like Samar and his sister, is a native of faraway Bohemia. He lives at New Baden, boarding at the home of Aloys Samar.

One day he said to Samar: "Do you know, Aloys, I wish I had a home of my own, and I believe I'll have to make one."

"Well, I've got a pretty sister in Bohemia," replied Samar, and the suggestion was enough.

By letter Samar introduced Beyer to his sister, Franciska, and a correspondence dated from that day. Beyer sent the girl his picture and she returned the compliment by sending him one of hers.

This was followed by an engagement, and Beyer sent money to the girl, telling her to come to him in America and they would be married.

She came at once, so soon, in fact, that she arrived in Belleville two days before her fiance and her brother expected her. They were not at the train to meet her, and, unable to speak a word of English, she wandered about on the streets until she became tired. Then she lay down with a basket for a pillow and went to sleep. There Mrs. U. G. Stoltz found her and notified her brother, and the meeting with him and her fiance followed.

FARMERS IN STATE CONVENTI'N.

Social and Economic Union Nominates Officers at Nashville.

The state convention of the Farmers' Social and Economic Union, which has been in session in Nashville, Ill., for the past three days, adjourned yesterday. The sessions Thursday and Friday were secret.

The convention was well attended, about 70 officers and delegates being present. President Scott Crews of Murphysboro occupied the chair at the sessions, with E. B. Hunter of Murphysboro acting as secretary.

The most important matter disposed of at the Friday session was the nomination of state officers as follows: President, Scott Crews of Murphysboro and A. H. Evans of Tamaroa; vice-president, George H. Winter of New Athens and G. B. Sanders of Sparta; secretary, E. B. Hunter of Murphysboro and Jarret Rule of Pinckneyville; treasurer, A. J. Cross of Murphysboro, Frank Heine of Cutler and J. H. Germain of Belleville; lecturer, S. C. Herwin of Percy, John W. Jones of Ava, T. J. Wise of Duquoine, J. Q. Adams and J. D. Davis of Denmark.

For the position of editor of the Farmers' Union there was but one nomination, it being W. D. Crews of De Soto, the present editor. For the position of board of trustees there were eight nominations, five to be elected. The nominations were: William M. Preston of Sparta, A. J. McIntyre of Sparta, George H. Reinhardt of New Athens, T. J. Rice of Tamaroa, J. C. Davis of De Soto, R. M. Dempsey of Nashville, Will M. Beattie of Sparta and E. B. Hunter of Murphysboro.

The next session of the union will be held at Murphysboro on the first Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of January, 1904. Voting on the officers nominated at the local convention will then take place.

The Prairie Hill quartet of this county rendered music during the sessions.

NEGRO SHOT WHILE FLEEING

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOUND CITY, Ill., July 18.—John Brown, a negro, who claims to reside in Paragould, Ark., was shot in the side at Beechwood while seeking to escape arrest at noon today.

Brown is charged with entering the home of Mrs. Nannie McCarthy, a widow of this city, Tuesday night, and after robbing her of $3 attempted to assault her.

When she screamed he decamped.

A large posse scoured Pulaski and surrounding counties for the culprit and he was seen today at Beechwood by City Marshal Pearson and Moody Parring of Mound City, a brother of Mrs. McCarthy.

Both men shot at the fleeing negro, one of the bullets entering his left side and passing through the body.

Threats of summary vengeance were made, but the authorities do not anticipate any demonstration.

WHOLE COMMUNITY MUST GO.

New York's Water Demands Cause Many Removals.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Notice has been served by the county court at White Plains on 58 squatter occupants of land condemned and purchased for New York's watershed, that they must vacate.

Some of the property taken in Golden's Bridge, Purdy's Station and Yorktown is to be turned into artificial lakes to supply New York with additional water. Many of the farmers already are preparing to migrate, but others declare they will fight. Included in the property to be seized by the city are four churches, four schools, six hotels, ten summer residences and about 40 farms.

ACCUSED OF SETTING 20 FIRES.

GLENS FALLS, July 18.—Sam Pasco was arraigned in the Warren County court, in Lake George, today charged with setting 20 forest fires. These are alleged to have been started early in June. He also is charged with stealing timber, with assault in the first degree and with burglary in the third degree. Pasco is more than six feet, a dead shot and a typical mountaineer. He pleaded not guilty and asked that counsel be assigned.

FOUR INJURED AT EMINGTON.

One Man Killed at Campus—Both Towns Suffer.

PEORIA, Ill., July 18.—Emington and Campus, two small towns on the Wabash railroad, suffered severely from the storm.

At Emington several houses were utterly demolished and four persons were seriously if not fatally wounded.

At Campus one man was killed, while two others sustained injuries which may prove fatal.

The tornado was accompanied by a terrific rainstorm which washed out bridges, culverts and thousands of feet of railroad track. The loss of crops is very heavy.

NATURE HAS IT'S LIMIT.

Paris Paper Takes Alice Roosevelt's Strenuous Social Career as Text.

PARIS, July 18.—Under the caption of "Neurasthenia," the Journal Des Debats says: "This is becoming a popular American malady, Alice Roosevelt having made it quite modish. The doctors ordered absolute rest for a year, after calculating that in 15 months the President's daughter had attended 408 dinners, 300 parties, 350 balls and 680 afternoon teas, shaking hands in that time with 32,000 people, besides paying 1700 calls."

The Des Debats counsels Americans to remember that there is a limit to human endurance.

HOMELY ELOPEMENT FROM A POOR FARM

Youth and Girl Who Want to Get Married Pursued by Guards and Dogs.

STOCKING HOLDS TROUSSEAU

Kindly Farmer Refused to Accept $100 Reward to Betray Them, and Helps Pair Out of State.

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J., July 1.—Homely though the romance be, the steward of the County Poorhouse, assisted by trained dogs, receiving scant assistance in the chase over the countryside for an eloping pair. A liberal reward also does not spur the farmers on to activity other than to halt the horses in harness and point out the wrong direction to the pursuing pack.

The fugitives are Charles Arthur, 20 years old, and Maggie Morris, in her blushing eighteens. Both had been sent to the poorhouse years ago by their unfortunate parents, and knew nothing of life or love until they met each other.

Charles was digging in the potato field the other day, when several of the girls were sent out with baskets to pick up. To Maggie fell the row down which he was swinging the hoe. Maggie was lonesome and worked fast, and was soon up to the sturdy young fellow. He hurried on, fearing reproof from the foreman, but Maggie was at his heels, and failing to attract his attention otherwise bumped the basket against him as he stooped.

Picking himself up from the hollow of soft dirt, dotted with the crisp gleam of new-mown potatoes, Charles turned indignantly and met his fate.

"Pretty warm," he said. "Darn those mosquitoes."

"Whuh," said Maggie, coyly crunching a potato bug between her bare toes and meekly submitting to a slap at a mosquito on her brown shoulder.

They had the potato hoeing record that night, and the foreman smiled approvingly and paired them off. When hay fell in swaths before his mighty reaper she came along with the rake. When he pulled onions she extracted weeds, and when he hoed string beans she picked them. Those were delightful hours among the beans and corn. Already they had learned to say things low, and without the conversational lip movement, fearing the foreman's careful ear and eye, but among the corn and beans—one beautifully tall in its stalk and the other winding high with its added shadow—well, Bobbie Burns wrote of less opportunity for love making.

Some time early on Sunday morning Charles slung himself out of the open window on the third floor of the County poorhouse to the waterspout. It held, and with only a few more bruises on his knees he reached the ground. Something of girl's apparel—the only piece of white Maggie had—pointed the way to Maggie's window, and he tossed pebbles softly and carefully until a scratched head showed where he had hit last.

"Bring your clothes," he said, after a second look.

Maggie's trousseau sailed out of the window and he picked it up reverently. A spare white stocking, owned by the matron, can hold a lot of things needed by a bride when bulged to unwonted capacity. Then Maggie came with a thump that almost drove her adorer into the ground.

About 9 o'clock this morning a farmer traveling toward the west was met in the road by a youthful pair, who asked for a lift. The girl's feet were bleeding, but she clung to a fat white stocking, and the farmer put her under the canvas so as to be out of the hot sun. The young fellow climbed up beside the farmer and talked a little while, then also went under the canvas.

And the farmer said "Gitup!"

Twenty minutes after Leida, the steward, with men and dogs about him, crossed the road and stopped the rattling farm wagon.

"Seen anything of two kids escaped from the poorhouse?" yelled Leida. "Boy and a girl, pretty good looking, but not hardly any clothes on?"

The farmer hauled up. "Lesse," he said thoughtfully.

"One hundred dollars reward for them," said Leida, and the dogs began sniffing around the wagon and one tried to jump into the canvas-covered bed.

"Gosh," pondered the farmer, "that's a good deal."

"Yes. They're running away to Pennsylvania to get married. Ain't got a cent and nothing else to boast of."

"Goin' to get married, are they?" queried the farmer, "and on nothing? My, my. I ain't seen 'em. Gittep!"

As the wagon rattled further along toward the Pennsylvania state line a bare foot, followed by a round brown leg, rose from a wrinkle in the canvas and five toes wriggled in front of the farmer's kindly gray eyes.

"Gittep!" said the farmer to his horses.

HOT DAYS IN NEW YORK.

Some Things That Happen to Birds and Men.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Several sparrows were partially prostrated by the heat in City Hall Park. They were too weak to fly and could only hop feebly about on the grass.

"The New York sparrow is a tough citizen," said "Mart" Keyes, the historian of the city hall, "and when he keels over from the heat it's a sure thing that it's about as hot as it can be. The coldest day in winter seldom hurts him, but the big blizzard of March 12, 1888, killed a lot of sparrows. They were frozen stiff, and we found their bodies when the snow and ice disappeared. Today must be as bad in the heat line as the blizzard was in the cold line.

A wholesale drug firm in Fulton street suffered large financial loss because the heat was to much for the automatic sprinkler in the drying-room on the fifth floor. This place is usually kept up to the fusing point. The natural heat combined with the artificial heat touched off the safety valves of the automatic sprinklers yesterday morning, and before the water main which feeds the sprinklers could be shut off the place was flooded.

Excitement was caused in the neighborhood of Union Square when the mercury was about at the record notch by the appearance of a tall man in a long overcoat. It was buttoned tightly about his chin. Oblivious to the crowd that followed him the man walked up Seventeenth street to Twenty-third.

"Lynch him," roared a truck driver.

"Must be his only garment," said a young woman.

Before he disappeared in the crowd in Twenty-third street the man with the overcoat unbuttoned it and displayed underneath a heavy woolen suit.

MAN'S NOSE TAKEN OFF.

Roth Was Looking Down for the Elevator to Come Up.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Louis Roth, a porter living at 405 East Houston street, had his nose accidentally torn from his face today by a descending freight elevator on the third floor of the feather works of Kohnstamm & Co., at 164 Tillary street, Brooklyn. The victim's face was also seriously lacerated and it is feared that there is danger from lockjaw in his case. He is under treatment at the Brooklyn Hospital.

Roth was standing looking down the dark shaft waiting for the elevator to ascend to take him upstairs, when it was lowered swiftly from above and when whizzing past him as he stood in a direct line with the edge of the platform.

CHILD SHOOTS HERSELF.

Angered Because Mother Wanted Her to Wash Dishes.

HUNTINGTON, Ind., July 18.—Sarah, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Crago, living east of the city, is lying at death's door as the result of a pistol shot fired by her own hand with suicidal intent.

The bullet, which was a 22-caliber, entered the skull at the temple and imbedded itself in the brain and will prove fatal. Death is expected almost any moment.

After breakfast Mrs. Crago told her daughter to wash up the dishes, while she was otherwise engaged. When her mother returned from the garden she found the breakfast dishes were untouched, and finding her daughter in an adjoining room, upbraided her for not obeying. The girl made no reply, but went to an upstairs room.

Shortly afterward Mrs. Crago heard the report of a pistol, and, going upstairs, found her daughter lying on the floor with the blood oozing from the wound in her head. Neighbors heard the mother scream, and summoned a physician. The girl still lies unconscious. She is a well developed girl, having the appearance of a full-grown woman. No cause for despondency is known.

GIRL MISSING FOR A WEEK.

Emma Schwab of Vincennes, Ind., Disappears From Her Home.

VINCENNES, Ind., July 18.—Emma Schwab, daughter of Michael Schwab, has been missed for over a week and no trace of her can be found. When seen last she was in the company of a young man. Her relatives have no tidings of her and her sudden disappearance has caused much anxiety. The police are working on the case.

BIG CARP DRAGGED GIRL INTO POND

Philadelphia Girl Went Fishing at Reading With Most Astonishing Results.

READING, Pa., July 18.—In the excitement of landing a monster carp that measured nearly 30 inches in length, Miss Grace Reddington of Philadelphia today lost her footing, fell into a pond and narrowly escaped drowning.

In an effort to save the drowning girl Miss Bessie Gresh, a cousin, with whom Miss Reddington is spending several weeks, also fell into the water and was with difficulty rescued by several acquaintances who, hearing the cries of the drowning girls, rushed to their assistance.

The young women left the Gresh home, at Little Oley, early in the day on their fishing trip. After trying several points along the stream with varying success they finally cast their lines at the old foundry dam near Boyertown, and it was here the accident occurred.

They were taken home in a wagon and, after procuring dry clothing, announced that they were none the worse for their experience.

Gave Prisoner a Vacation.

PETERSBURG, Ind., July 18.—Joe Burton, an inmate of the Pike County jail, was permitted by Sheriff Peed to accompany some friends to White river yesterday afternoon for recreation. On reaching the river the prisoner jumped into a boat and made for the Knox County shore. All efforts to capture him were fruitless. Burton was in jail to make good a fine of $170 for bigamy.

SUNSHINE DEPARTMENT OF THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH

(Official Organ of Missouri).

Conducted by MRS. C. W. TROWBRIDGE, State President.

Pass Along "Good Cheer."

Catch and radiate the sunshine,
Pass along the word of cheer,
Give a tender smile or token
To the sad ones far and near.
Gather up each passing sunbeam
And reflect it far and wide,
Sending forth its rays the brightest
Where the darkest shadows hide.

To the weary, heavy laden,
Walking lonely down the road,
Lend a hand to help them onward,
It will lift a heavy load.
To the aged and the careworn,
Grown so weary of the way,
You can be a very sunbeam,
Bringing light and joy today.

Not alone in crowded alleys
Do we find the sorest need;
There is sorrow in the palace,
There are hearts that break and bleed.
Scatter sunshine, brother, sister,
Sympathize with smile or tear;
Make this whole wide world the brighter
For your tender words of cheer.

The Free Ice and Sick Diet Circle of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons of St. Louis will provide ice and sick diet to the fullest extent possible with funds contributed, to very poor families where there are invalids, sick children or infants. A careful distribution being made in the districts where the need is most apparent. All Sunshiners and friends of the unfortunate and helpless ones are asked to send their contributions to the treasurer,

MISS EDITH KENT CHILDS,
5207 Ridge avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

Sunshine Wanted.

Miss Bertha Marker, Bosworth, Carroll County, Mo., is only 19 years old and for two years has been confined to her bed. For eleven months she has been utterly helpless. In spite of all this she writes that she "tries to be always cheerful and finds that the greatest kindness she can do for many of her friends is to sympathize with them in all of their troubles, great or small." Miss Marker has a number of periodicals that she will be glad to exchange with other members, and desires to receive any sunny greeting and cheerful letters. Write to her, for she is a good correspondent.

Mrs. Hanna Abernathy, Colfax, Ind., is 80 years old, and would be glad to receive silk pieces for a quilt. She is a dear, bright, sunny soul, and a fine sunbeam. Send her some scraps.

Mrs. Emma Watkins, Colfax, Ind., would be glad of current magazine and other sunshine tokens.

Mrs. Lou Williams, Elkins, Ark., would greatly appreciate good reading matter. Send her something to while away the long summer days.

Sunshine Gossip.

Mrs. Charles N. Jewett has been quite ill, but is now convalescent.

Mrs. Brasell has been visiting in Indiana, but did not neglect her sunshine work and made many friends for the society. She leaves for Nebraska soon.

Mrs. Guilkey is working hard with her raffle trying to raise money to send an old lady home to Gentryville whom she rescued from the poorhouse.

The Lamar, Ark., Sunbeams meet every Monday at the home of Miss Amelia Mayer. They contemplate a series of entertainments in the near future. The proceeds to be used to fix up the cemetery, which is sadly neglected. At each meeting the Post-Dispatch Sunshine Department is read aloud, also any other little human incident bearing on the work. Miss Mayer writes the interest is growing daily, and we predict success for this enterprising branch.

The children of the Martha Parson's Hospital were given their annual outing by the Sunshine Society Wednesday at Forest Park. The little tots all enjoyed themselves wonderfully, and the ladies in charge were amply repaid for their hard work. The outing was a complete success, owing to the liberality of Mr. Murray Carleton, who provided transportation, and Mr. Frank Madden, who gave Mrs. Baumhoff $10 for that purpose.

The Ever Ready Branch have a monthly social. The president writes they "have adopted this plan for the summer months, hoping to promote the spirit of sunshine, and to allow the members to become better acquainted with each other." Last month they were entertained by Mrs. Ferguson in Clifton Heights. Tuesday they visited Forest Park, took a look at the World's Fair buildings, after which, finding a nice shady place, a few letters were read and discussed. Four of the ladies acted as hostesses, serving the party with ice cream and cakes. One of the party had a kodak, and one or two snap shots were taken. All seemed to have a very happy time. Mrs. Sturges has had a long and trying illness, and we are happy to know that she is able to be out again.

Mrs. Gulick and daughter expect to visit her old home in Sturgeon, Mo., next week. Hope they boom sunshine while there.

Sunshine Received.

Little Miss Bertha Terry, 11 years old, assisted by Hazel Zesterson and Lee McHan, sent a box of toys, picture books and other trinkets, all the way from Tillar, Ark., for the children in the hospital. Could they have seen the pleasure their gifts brought to the little afflicted ones our little Arkansas friends would fully realize that it was "more blessed to give than to receive." Twenty-five cents was also sent for the children's outing fund. We thank you very much and hope to welcome you soon to Sunshine ranks, for we need all such earnest little workers.

From Mound City the Glenn children sent 20 cents and a package of books and games to be passed on. For many months the Glenns have been active workers and one and all enjoy "scattering sunshine all along the way." Many thanks for the contribution to our stamp fund. Uncle Sam is arbitrary and all packages consigned to his car must be prepaid. We always welcome postage stamps.

From far away Montana came a little package of curios. No name, but a charge to "pass on." Thanks to the unknown friend the treasures enclosed gave joy to three sunshine shut-ins to whom they were given.

At Home Branch sent $1 for the state stamp fund. Thanks. We needed it badly. This branch never forgets that it takes money to do anything and comes to the front often.

Aunt Clara's Letter to Juniors.

My Darling Sunbeams: Wednesday I defied old Sol's heat and took out all the dear little ones able to go of the Martha Parson's Children's Hospital for an outing. I have prayed that kind hearts would open their purse-strings and assist. My prayer was answered, for a liberal check from Mr. Madden and $1 from Lebanon Sunbeams came in and Mr. Murray Carleton furnished the car fare. God surely loves the Sunshine work to pass on blessed good cheer to the less fortunate ones, for often at the eleventh hour aid will come in for some of our worthy causes. To whom have God bid this appeal to reach the heart? Send the contribution to me and we will cheer up the unfortunate sunbeams as soon as possible. I hope to visit Vandalia, which is no easy matter for Aunt Clara to leave her merry little boys, to attend their ice cream social and bazar. Those sunbeams think I can help them. Hope their imagination will aid them to make the same a big success, for, God willing, I will go. How I do wish it was in my power to make you, kind readers, realize how happy, cheerful and contented you can be doing, saying and thinking sunshine. It will help you over the stumbling blocks in every-day life, i. e., our cares and trials. Just try it. If you cannot be a rich member, why, be a poor one. Each branch, once a year, is requested to observe state day, to raise money in any manner you desire, for state work. I have some junior branches to whom a penny seems every bit as great as the dollar to other wealthier branches. A branch of all poor children recently sent in $1 for sunshine outings to the poor, where they had earned every penny. That dollar carries an extra blessing with it. Our more fortunate sunbeams who go away from their homes for the summer to see more of God's beautiful world, will you not give the dear little unfortunates a thought and help? Do not be selfish with the many blessings God gave you. If you could cast one glance into some of those wretched, small, suffocating rooms in the tenement district you would not hesitate a moment, those who have sunshine hearts, to help. It would make your heart ache and you would open your little purse, saying: "Here, take it; see how far it can reach." St. Louis is one of the largest cities and here the tenement district is packed tight with poor, suffering humanity, so much that all our charities and societies combined have hard work to relieve a fraction of the suffering there. The heat ought to make you more conscious of others.

Sunshine Juniors, send in your reports for I want them. We Sunshiners never take a vacation for they carry with them everywhere they go good cheer, kind thoughts and happy hearts. Write to me often, for I love your dear letters. Yours lovingly in sunshine and shade,

AUNT CLARA.
Address 3465 Park avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

GERMAN ELECTION SCANDAL.

Dr. Theodore Barth, Defeated Leader, Thinks He Was Counted Out.

BERLIN, July 18.—The supporters of Dr. Theodore Barth at the recent election are making a searching investigation for evidences of irregularities whereby, it is claimed, he was defeated.

A committe has discovered that in the village of Gross-Aupa only 15 votes were counted for Dr. Barth, whereas 43 voters are ready to declare on oath they voted for him. The state's attorney has been [illegible] to prosecute.

DELIRIOUS FROM SUNBURN.

Coney Island Life Saver in Hospital in Serious Condition.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Joseph Perkins, a Coney Island life saver, who arrived in this country from England six weeks ago, is in a hospital delirious from sunburn. The doctors said he was the worst case of sunburn they had ever seen and that his condition was serious. Perkins began to burn at the beginning of the hot spell. It got so bad yesterday that he decided to come to this city for treatment.

On the way up the pain become so great that he began to scream and act as though he was crazy. He finally became so violent that the steamboat captain ordered him tied down for fear he would harm himself. He was tied down in the ambulance and removed from the pier. Dr. Mills said a large part of his skin had been made completely raw by the sun.

HURT BY AN OWL.

Peculiar Accident to a Fireman on the Grand Rapids Road.

RICHMOND, Ind., July 18.—Fireman Williams, on his run over the Grand Rapids road, Sunday, had a severe and peculiar accident between Portland and Ridgeville.

While the train was running about a mile a minute something struck Williams on the forehead. He was knocked from his seat and considerably dazed for a time. He thought someone had struck him with a rock or club, but the engineer had neither seen nor heard anything. On glancing at the floor Williams saw a large owl lying dead at the coal grate. This was sufficient explanation of the mystery.

CAGAYAN SULUS ARE UNCLE SAM'S

State Department Will Not Admit That Great Britain Has Shadow of Claim.

POST-DISPATCH BUREAU,
1345 Pennsylvania Avenue.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—If a query comes from the British foreign office as to why the United States claims sovereignity over certain islands north of Borneo, the United States will not admit that Great Britain has even the shadow of a title to them. That fact was announced with emphasis at the State Department today. At the same time it was distinctly asserted that there is no expectation of an inquiry from Downing street.

The denial of any shadow of a claim to title will be based upon what the British foreign office said just before this government made a treaty of purchase with Spain. Secretary Hay addressed a note to the late Lord Paunceforte, asking him if Great Britain claimed any interest or title in the group known as the Cagayan Sulus. He did that because on two occasions Great Britain, Germany and Spain signed treaties in which they were mentioned. Each time Great Britain and Germany confirmed the title Spain held, to all islands more than a marine league from the coast of Borneo.

The British foreign office, in due time, answered that Great Britain claimed neither interest nor title in them. That assurance caused Mr. Hay to conclude the negotiations with Spain.

Carefully prepared charts in the office of Admiral Bradford, chief of the bureau of equipment, show all the islands to be more than a league distant from the Bornese coast. Admiral Bradford is the man who keeps track of the islands of the earth, because he is hunting for the good unoccupied ones for the purpose of having them made into coaling stations.

Telephones All Burned Out.

A tangle of the telephone and electric light wires in Belleville, about 6 o'clock yesterday evening resulted in a complete breakdown of the local Kinloch telephone system. All the connections in the exchange were burnt out. A large force of men were put to work at once but it is not expected that the system will be in working order before Sunday morning.

I Save Weak Men

I Have Discovered the Marvelous Secret of Perpetual Youth and Undying Manly Vigor and I Give It to You Free.

My Mysterious Compound Startles the World With Its Wonderful Cures—With This Marvelous Secret No Man Can Grow Old and It Is My Mission on Earth Henceforth to Bring All Jaded, Worn-Out Men to This Fountain of Youth.

Send No Money—Simply Send Your Name and Address and This Marvelous Compound Will Be Sent You By Return Mail, Prepaid and Absolutely Free.

I have discovered the marvelous secret of perpetual life and vigor in men. To me it has been given to bring to the fallen, weary, worn-out brothers the knowledge of this priceless boon, and even to the uttermost ends of the earth I sendmy message of love and peace and hop and help. Unbelievers may scoff and cry "fake," but I heed them not. My work has just begun and I am saving men.

The secret of this mighty healing power, this vital life spark, this marvelous tonic fluid, is known to me alone. It is mine to give to whom I will and my works go before me. Doubt not! I ask no man to believe me, but I give to every weak man free this priceless boon and it restores him instantly to the strength and powerful vigor of youth. With this marvelous, mysterious compound, which I have discovered only after a lifetime devoted to search through all the realms of science, and the archives of the ancients, it is possible for every weak man to have for his own the glorious manly power, the untiring vigor and the long life of the patriarchs of Bible times. With this mysterious compound no weak man will ever again be troubled with impotency, vital losses, nightly emissions, spermatorrhea, varicocele, prematurity, defective power or lack of vital energy.

Send me no money. It is my duty, guided by an Unseen Hand—it is my mission on earth—my life work—to lift up the fallen, heal the weak and cure the maimed or undeveloped; and to every man who has lost his vital power or finds it waning, I send my message of love and peace and health. I can save him and I will save him and restore him to many years of happiness and the impetuous vitality and vigorous manhood of perfect health and youth.

Remember, it matters not how old you are; it matters not how you lost your manhood, or when you lost it. It matters not what doctors or scoffers say. This is no ordinary drug or stimulating method of treatment, but it is the vital spark of life itself, and it matters not how many remedies and doctors have failed. I have repeatedly and instantly renewed the youth of old men. My secret compound never fails. I have often instilled into jaded men new vitality, health and strength. For worn-out men I have oft kindled, in an instant, and to stay, the sparkling vitality of youth. My private address is Dr. C. Sargent Ferris, 148 Strawn Building, Cleveland, O., and I urge every weak man to come to me, for I will give him undying strength, the supreme joy and happiness of perfect manliness. My wondrous discovery has startled the world by its miraculous effects, yet I seek not fame nor glory. It suffices me if I may be the humble instrument of Nature's greatest power in bringing all men into the enjoyment of their true manliness and I do it free. In the time allotted to me here on earth I shall do all that is my power lies to give my fellow-men the benefit of this great secret and my reward shall be in the knowledge that I have done unto others as I would that others should do unto me.

JURY REPORTS ON ALABAMA SLAVERY

Ninety-Nine Bills Returned Against Alleged Participants in Negro Peonage Traffic.

CONDITIONS ARE ASTOUNDING

Evidence Shows That Justices Are in League With Slave Drivers to Provide Victims.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 18.—The United States grandjury which has been engaged in investigating peonage cases in Alabama made its final report today, returning 99 true bills against eighteen persons. The practice of holding blacks in servitude was scored from the bench and the jury was praised for "standing up for humanity, liberty and law."

"We regret to report that in two counties of the district," says the report, "crimes have been committed by eighteen persons by which citizens of the state and United States have been systematically despoiled of their rights and liberty, confined and made to work, and not infrequently cruelly treated. Conspiracies in two localities were formed and carried out between justices of the peace, constables and employers of labor, to convict ignorant and defenseless persons and to sell them into involuntary servitude, that the parties concerned might make a pecuniary profit out of this cowardly oppression of citizens.

"Trumped-up charges in many instances have been preferred before justices of the peace, who were members of the conspiracies, against selected victims. Any inoffensive and ignorant person in these localities was liable to be thus arrested. Defendants were usually tried hurriedly, convicted without any regard to law or evidence, and then sent out under officers to be sold. Officers always got what they could for these so-called convicts, making it a point to get as much as possible above the fines and costs. The amount of the fines and costs was then paid to the justices of the peace, and sometimes to the mayors of incorporated towns, and constables put the rest of the purchase money in their pockets as profit.

Justices in Pay of Slave-Holders.

"Sometimes the hirer had an arrangement by which he could get hands in this way, having paid justices of the peace a monthly salary. If the purchaser was not thus interested, his profit came in getting labor for almost nothing, and it was more valuable because the persons bought were made to perform their tasks by corporal punishment.

"The systematic commission of these crimes in these two localities has gone on for several years. The state authorities, as we are informed by a state officer who was summoned before us, and as we know of common knowledge, have been powerless to punish the offenders, because of their influence, the timidity of witnesses and the unwillingness of jurors drawn in the immediate vicinity to do their full duty.

"We have no means of ascertaining the number of persons who have been thus kidnapped and imprisoned in these localities during the last few years. The number, however, is something over 75 during the last two or three years, as near as we can judge from the dockets which have been in evidence before us. In some of the towns in the two counties to which we refer the charters give authority to the mayor and aldermen to hire out persons convicted in the mayor's court anywhere in the state. No attention seems to have been paid to these provisions.

Victims Hurried Off to Market.

"When persons were convicted they were turned over to some constable, who immediately hurried them off to market and sold them to one of the two peonage farms whose owners were in need of hands. In such cases the dockets show no record of the disposition of the defendants, but on the contrary show that the costs had been paid in full and the defendants discharged, when the facts show the defendants had been spirited away to peonage farms, and when there they were lost to the world.

"The most notorious of these offenders have pleaded guilty, and your honor is acquainted with the facts as to cases tried in court. In finding indictments we have endeavored to bring to justice, as this was the first enforcement of the federal law, only such persons as were guilty of real oppression or consciously and knowingly violated the law. We have not preferred indictments in technical cases of peonage where persons who had made fair contracts for labor and had been defrauded by laborers have sought in some instances to compel performmance of the contract by threats of force, as we are satisfied the investigations of these cases and the punishment of those indicted will forever put an end to the shameful condition of things which we are forced to report in two localities.

"We have diligently sought to ascertain as far as time and the facilities would permit, whether a like condition of things exists anywhere else in the district, and are gratified to report that the two localities named are the only places where such a state of things or anything approaching it exists in this district. While the grandjury has been informed of isolated instances of peonage and has investigated them, in none of these cases has it found sufficient proof to warrant an indictment.

"We set out the facts in this report without exaggeration on the one hand or extenuation on the other. We think the truest friends to our people are those who tell the exact truth as to these matters. The great body of the people in this district save the very few who are lost to all sense of justice and wish to profit by oppression are violently opposed to these practices."

Judge Praises the Jury's Work.

When the report had been read, Judge Jones, among other things, said to the jury: "You have stood up for humanity, liberty and law. You rightly say, 'We think the truest friends to our people are those who tell the exact truth as to these matters.'

"The time is not far distant, if it is not now here, when all right thinking, honorable people will realize and declare that in setting the laws of the United States in motion to prevent outrages upon helpless and ignorant citizens of Alabama, who are as well citizens of the United States and under its protection, you have been the truest and best defenders also of the honor of the South, the state and its people.

"While proud that we are citizens of the United States, none of us holds less our citizenship as Alabamans. It should be a matter of gratification, not cause of jealousy or reprehension at home, that in executing the laws of the United States we have also been able to assist our state in enforcing the protection of the rights of its own citizens when by reason of exceptional and untoward circumstances, beyond its control in a few localities, it has been powerless to do so, in particular cases.

"No man who truly understands or values our institutions will regret that as to many fundamental rights of the citizen he has two refuges, instead of one, against oppression, and may appeal to either or both when he has been wronged."

THIS BELLEVILLE COUPLE HAVE BEEN MARRIED QUARTER OF A CENTURY

BELLEVILLE, ILL.
MERKER PHOTO

Union of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Koch Has Been Blessed With Nine Children.

Saturday was the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Koch of Belleville.

Mr. Koch was born in Bavaria on June 20, 1843, and came to America in his twenty-fourth year.

He came direct to Belleville and found employment at a bakery. He worked there for eight years, and then opened a bakery of his own, which he still manages.

Mrs. Koch (nee Sophie Mueller) was born in St. Louis 43 years ago. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Mueller. Twenty-seven years ago the Muellers moved to Belleville, where they have resided ever since.

In July 18, 1878, this couple were married in St. Peter's Cathedral by Rev. Father Bruns.

Nine children have been born of the union, ranging in age from 19 to 2 years.

Preparations had been made to fittingly celebrate the day, but they had to be abandoned because of the serious illness of Mrs. Koch's father, who lies at the point of death at his home at Seventh street and Mascoutah avenue.

TOPEKA REBUILDING AND LABOR SCARCE

Prices of Material Advances and Contractors Have More Than They Can Do.

TOPEKA, Kan., July 18.—Despite numerous forecasts that Topeka would suffer a suspension of business activity as a result of the North Topeka flood, that the town would become inactive and that her population would feel the tightening grip of hard times, there is unmistakable evidence that the opposite is true. This evidence does not need to be gathered in North Topeka, where probably $100,000 worth of repairs upon buildings damaged by the flood are underway. On the south side of the river in the last two months, or since May 15, work has been commenced upon residences, the cost of which will represent an outlay of about $65,000. The contractors cannot meet the demands of builders.

The prices of building materials are considerably higher than a few years ago, yet the building activity is greater than when the price of material was less. There is probably a greater demand for labor of all kinds at the present time than before or since the boom. The difficulty of securing skilled help might have been a sufficient reason for a decrease in the amount of new building but the supply appears to have been good. In discussing the building that is in progress here now, Fire Marshal Wilmarth said:

"There appears to be sufficient help to supply the demand for building labor whic is very eavy rigt now. Building is going on all over town much the same as usual in addition to te great activity in North Topeka, where the damaged residences and business buildings are being put in order. I have not seen that the unusual amount of such work has made any difference in the situation."

InNorth Topeka the flood sowed a field that is being reaped with profit by the building and loan associations and the mortgage companies of Topeka. Ready cash being in demand the building and loan asociations have found an opportunity for a very large number of the safest kind of loans, and their lists show the names of a great many North Topeka families. It is impossible to make an accurate estimate of the amount or value of building and repairing in progress on the north side of the river, but it undoubtedly exceeds $100,000. The usual number of alditions to homes on the south side are shown in the building permit book in the fire marshal's office.

THIRTEEN WOMEN READY.

Each Claims a Farmer Under Promise He Made.

RICHMOND, Va., July 18.—James Pitzer, a handsome farmer and a bachelor, who owns a farm in the rich National Bridge district, several days ago saw three pretty young women picking blackberries in one of his fields. He announced that he would ask the first woman who came the next day to pick berries to become his wife.

When he looked out early the next morning 13 young women and a widow were in view from his window. He admits he is bashful, but, summoning courage, he went out dressed in his best suit.

He was nonplussed when 13 candidates for his affections each claimed to be the first on the ground.

Overwhelmed and being unable to decide so delicate a question, he is still a bachelor, though declaring that he has not changed his intention to wed.

MISSISSIPPI GIRLS ARE BADLY FOOLED

Fell in Love With a Fine Looking Chap Who Was a Woman Disguised.

NEW ORLEANS, July 18.—Accused by a girl to whom attentions were paid, Willie Ray, a supposed citizen and farmer of Prentiss County, Miss., has disclosed her true sex after eight years of concealment. Incidentally half a dozen rosy-cheeked girls of the neighborhood are wondering how they ever fell in love with "him," and are now assiduously turning up their noses at "her." Domestically inclined matrons have thrown their hands up in horror, staid farmers are enjoying a good laugh, and the community as a whole is excited as it hasn't been since the war.

Miss Ray has resided in Prentiss County since 1895, and during the first five or six years worked for various farmers for monthly wages. She dressed in ordinary male attire of a farm hand and made regular trips to Booneville, the county seat, each Saturday afternoon, riding astride on horseback, and to all outward appearances being a neat-looking boy of quiet, gentlemanly habits, although a steady user of tobacco in chewing and smoking form. Willie was known all over the county as a first-class field hand, a hard worker and good for "his" debts.

Last year the girl in man's masquerade decided to start out as an individual farmer instead of a field hand, and rented a small farm, open a store account and began to get in debt, as all small farmers are expected to do. No one ever suspected the neat-looking boy was anything but what was represented, and it is stated that more than one of the pretty, rosy-cheeked maidens of the neighborhood in which Willie resided cast sheeps' eyes and smiled their sweetest when they happened to meet the handsome young farmer, who had reached man's estate and was entitled to vote four or five years ago.

This might have gone on to the very end of the chapter but that Ray was called into court a few days ago, and in order to disprove an allegation that had been lodged was forced to the necessity of divulging her sex. Since that time Willie has been compelled to do female garments. She is originally from Tennessee and is about 25 years of age. When asked as to her reason for assuming the role of a man she said that she did it in order to go out and do man's labor for a livelihood. ¼

FATHER AND SON MEET.

After a Separation of Twenty-Three Years They Are Reunited.

PANA, Ill., July 18.—Twenty-three years ago last March, Joe Reed of Shelby County parted with his son, L. E. Reed, and went West. He sent home no word of himself, and eventually his son also went to Oklahoma, giving up the home place and mourning his father as dead.

Some years after his son left, the father returned to find no trace of his family. Word was brought to him at one time that his son had been killed by a train in Texas. Yesterday the son returned home and entered the room where his father was living. The recognition was instantaneous. The father shouted for joy and then fell fainting in his son's arms.

BARBER HIT HARD BY CRUEL FATE

Paralysis and Bright's Disease, Followed by Chair's Loss, Almost Too Much.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 18.—Slowly recovering from a stroke of paralysis and suffering from a severe attack of Bright's disease, L. Gardner, proprietor and manager of a basement barber shop at Nicollet and Washington avenues, is beginning to feel that the seizure of one of his barber chairs under sheriff's execution for personal property taxes is at least next to the last straw needed to break the camel's back. Mr. Gardner will not redeem his property, because he cannot afford to pay the $18 taxes due, and also because Samuel White, a loan agent in Temple court, has a mortgage on it, the chair, therefore, never having belonged to Mr. Gardner. Here is Gardner's story:

"I have been in this city sixteen or seventeen years and I have always paid my bills and my taxes. I got notice from the sheriff to pay, but I couldn't pay then, and the first thing I knew they were in here seizing my chair. I tried to explain that the chair belonged to Mr. White on a mortgage but they wouldn't hear me.

"From March 24 to June 1 I was suffering from a stroke of paralysis and an attack of Bright's disease. For five weeks I was unconscious. I had to leave the shop in the hands of comparative strangers and the receipts dropped from $75 a week to $40. I am 45 years old and have a family of seven to support. If they take a chair away from me every time I can't pay my taxes, they will soon put me out of business entirely. It seems as if they might or Dr. Bass and they will tell you I have four chairs left, but the mortgage covers them. What am I going to do? I never saw business worse for the barbers. I've been a sick man and am sick yet. I'm still taking medicine. You can see the bottles over there. Ask Dr. Towers, Dr. Bell or Dr. Bass and they will tell you Ihave been very sick. All I want is a chance."

Mr. White, who holds the mortgage, consulted an attorney after the barber chair had been carted to the sheriff's office, and this morning he made formal demand for it on Sheriff J. W. Dreger. Mr. Dreger, however, "stood pat." He declared that he was going to sell that chair and that if Mr. White had any claimonit he could collect damages from the county commissioners. Nevertheless, Mr. White is convinced that he has a good claim on the chair. The sheriff's sale has been postponed from July 19, which, as Mr. White pointed out, was a Sunday, to July 28. The chair is the only article out of all the things seized, that the sheriff has left to sell.

CHILD FELL THIRTY FEET.

Only Injury Was a Scratch on Her Cheek.

ANDERSON, Ind., July 18.—Edna, the 3-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fulscamp, fell 30 feet from the second story of a block in which the family lives, last evening and escaped with a slight scratch on the side of her face. The child was playing on a balcony at the rear, when she lost her balance and fell over the railing. She struck a clothes line eight feet from the ground, which broke the force of the fall. The child was back playing in five minutes and did not seem in the least excited over the experience.

THIS WEEK AT THE GARDENS

The summer garden season is at its height, and what between the regular summer gardeners and the picnickers, who go out in bodies and take possession of the entire grounds for a whole day, the garden managers are doing a thriving business.

As far as the attractions are concerned there is little to be said. There is nothing startling at any of the gardens, and yet there is plenty of entertainment for those who don't expect too much. If you are expecing to see a Sultan of Sulu or a Ben Hur production you will be disappointed. If you simply expect to see a bit of variety and hear some good music you can find it at any of the gardens.

Weberfieldian travesty is running its merry course out at Delmar, and this week, beginning with the matinee this afternoon, "Fiddle-dee-dee," the liveliest of all the Weber and Fields shows, will be the offering.

There is little new that can be said of "Fiddle-dee-dee", as it has been seen here a couple of times, but it can be said of the Delmar company that it ought to be able to give just as good a performance as any company ever seen. Sidman and Harris are clever German comedians. Arthur Whitelaw is a good Irish character man. Harry Walters does the Hebrew almost as well as Joe Walsh. Billie Taylor can sing and Ted Burns is funny anywhere you put him. Miss Freda Gallick is a beautiful young woman with a lot of ability and Josephine Newman is always a favorite in St. Louis. Little Miss Sylvia Elden, who won Delmar patrons last week, will be seen in something new this week, so, taken all together, it ought to be a good show.

Couturier's band is getting better every week and the free concerts are a drawing card. Tuesday the West End Business Men have an outing and the week promises to be a lively one.

"The Bamboo Queens," as the management calls it, is one of the main features for the coming week at Hashagen's Park theater. It is a musical sketch and will be presented by the company's full strength, with a lot of new electrical and other pleasing effects. Other numbers booked are: Mabel Stewart, soubrette; the two Hazels, comedy sketch team; Willis and Johnson, funny acrobats; Louie Bates, female impersonator. The balloon ascension by Prof. Scanlan creates a great deal of enthusiasm nightly, as an outside attraction.

The North End Society holds its festival at the garden Tuesday evening, the 21st, and the St. Louis Liedertafel and North St. Louis Liederkranz on Thursday evening, the 23d.

Mantelli, the latest and greatest addition to vaudeville, and one that will soon pass from it again to legitimate honors, will appear at Forest Park Highlands this week, beginning with today's matinee. Mme. Mantelli was the leading mezzo-soprano with the Metropolitan Opera Company for several seasons, and only last winter was selected by Pietro Mascagni to sing in his operas and to create in this country the part of Zanetto, in his opera of like name. During her vaudeville engagement at the Highlands Mme. Mantelli will appear in costume suitable to the operatic characters from which she will sing, while her concert numbers will be rendered in conventional stage attire. The repertoire will be frequently changed, so as to make every matiness and evening performance a fresh treat to music lovers. The operas from which the great songbird will sing are: "Barber of Seville," "Mignon," "Carmen," "Samson and Delilah," "Trovatore," "Huguenots," "Favorita "and others. The engagement is of such unusual magnitude that almost any other announcement save that Mantelli is coming seems superfluous.

In addition to this Col. Hopkins has engaged the Kaufmann troupe of trick bicyclists, whose "Seven on One Wheel" ride is sensational; Sanoa, an impersonator of great men of the past and present; Zabodie, the greatest living equilibrist, a European act new in St. Louis; Little Elsie, a child actress, who imitates cleverly Fay Templeton, Digby Bell, Dave Warfield and Dan Daly, and others.

With Innes and his band in two special concerts, Marvelous Marsh, the daring cycle diver, Walker's high diving horses and a host of permanent attractions, Suburban Garden will offer today the most attractive entertainment of the season. Innes and his band return to St. Louis for a limited engagement after a successful three weeks' run at Electric Park in Kansas City, and the concerts should prove pleasing to lovers of good music. Marvelous Marsh will prove a sensational attraction worth seeing. The daring rider mounts his wheel on a tower, 70 feet from the ground, and then descends on a a gradual incline until he reaches a point 40 feet from the ground. Here the incline run reaches an abrupt end, and Marsh, leaping from his wheel, dives into a small tank of water on the ground below.

The high-diving horses will be retained for two special exhibitions today. This will be the last chance to see these animals in St. Louis this season. Innes and his band and Marvelous Marsh will be the main attractions throughout the week.

Creve Coeur Lake commends itself these warm summer days and nights to those seeking cool winds and shady glens. The ride on the new summer cars is so enjoyable that with a topping-off of a spin over the scenic railway pleasure-seekers are more than compensated.

The Central Trades and Labor Union's mammoth carnival and exposition, comprising all the new features that could be obtained in the East, will open at Handlan's Park, Saturday, July 25. There will be 14 midway attractions and 10 free platform exhibitions. Bands galore will entertain the crowd.

While many of the attractions bear the same old names, the fronts and entrances are new and artistic and a surprise is in store for those who enter. The Electric Palace will contain strange spectacular features. The dog and pony show is the best selection that has ever been offered to the public; Cleopatra and Greek art will be a beautiful life study of the great Egyptian queen in tableaux. The Congress of Curios will be a place where all laws of gravity will be defied. The Olympian Arena has a diversified program of new ideas. The Roman Empire Theater, a place of instruction as well as of amusement during the reign of Cesar, will de depicted and the carnage indulged in by the victorious soldiers will be as realistic as possible. Edison's Phantascope, the latest achievement of the wizard of electricity; the old Plantation, with negro melodies sung during cotton-picking time by the faithful old slaves of Dixie; Congress of Lady Athletes and Palace of Mystery, together with the industrial exhibits, should tend to please all.

The management of Mannion's Park will offer a most select bill of vaudeville, starting with today's matinee. The top-notchers are J. Aldrich Libbery and Miss Katherine Trayer in an operatic comedy singing sketch never before seen locally; Mr. Libbery is one of the best known vaudevillians now in that field, his success being most pronounced from the East to the West, and Miss Trayer lays claims to a most beautiful voice, which she knows how to use. Kerns and Cole are really top-liners in the German comedy field. Gillihan and Murray will present a comedy black-face sketch; Le Roy and La Varion will present their eccentric comedy horizontal bar act; Lew Palmer, a clever mimic, will round the bill into form and complete same.

In addition to the regular vaudeville program at Forest Park Highlands for the last week of the month, the management will provide several special musical features on the evening of July 31, when the Office Men's Club and their invited guests are to give their annual midsummer night festival. President Robert J. Parvin of the club is in correspondence with some of the best vocal solo talent of the city, and intends also to have the co-operation of quite a coterie of high-class instrumentalists.

As a relief from the heavy plays of the past few weeks, Manager H. H. Rice of Koerner's Garden has chosen for next week an old comedy of the style of "Pink Dominoes" and one which has been spoken of as the classic comedy of the nineteenth century. It is the masterpiece of J. Stirling Coyne, the famous English playwright of the mid-century period, "Everybody's Friend," and the scene is laid in the old town of Clapham, England, about the year 1850.

At the time when the customs and traditions of our grandmothers are being brought down from the attic of our memories and the old-fashioned dresses are coming again into such vogue among the modern generation, a play of this kind, with its atmosphere of hoop skirts and curl-papers, is particularly appropriate and should win the popular aproval as few present-day pieces could. The sentimental element, too, runs through the comedy in very pleasing quantities and affords an opportunity for emotional and romantic female parts of a high order.

Mr. Hanley will, of course, enact the principal role, that of Felix Featherly, everybody's friend, and it will give him again opportunity to show his versatile accomplishments.

Miss Victory [illegible]teman, whose remarkable ability to th[illegible]self back into another age and to assume the feelings and the appearance of an old-fashioned dame of our grandparents' time, will have a splendid opportunity here to display her art.

One of the strongest bills of the season is booked for Lemp's Park this week. It is headed by the Six Katy Dids, a troupe of clever and versatile children. These youthful vaudeville performers are all St. Louisans, and have made big hits wherever they have played. Among the other entertaining features on the program are Franklin and McNutt, in a down South plantation sketch; the Patmands, French acrobats; the Carys, in their new skit, entitled "Topsy Turvy;" Lou Emerson, monologist; Murello, the magician, and the moving pictures.

Miss Rosabel Morrison has signed a contract with Manager George Samuels to create the leading role in his new melodrama, "A Deserted Bride," which will have its first production on any stage early in September. Miss Morrision, who is a clever actress, is a daughter of Lewis Morrison, the well-known actor, and has appeared with much success in her father's productions, principally as Marguerite in "Faust." She has also starred in "The Danger Signal," replaced Blanche Bates' role in "The Children of the Ghetto," and the title role in "Carmen." The role of Mary Preston in "A Deserted Bride" is one particularly suited to Miss Morrison's abilities. Manager Samuels will surround his new star with a capable company and first-class production in every way.

E. H. Sothern finished his season in Duluth on Saturday night and immediately embarked on one of the lake steamers for a trip to Buffalo. Mr. Sothern writes that his season has been a gratifying one in every respect and he is very enthusiastic over the northwest, as well as the Pacific coast, where his reception has been cordial to extremes. As Daniel Frohman is due in New York about the same time that Mr. Sothern will arrive, there will be a conference as to next season's plans relative to "The Proud Prince," and then Mr. Sothern will take himself to the country.

Weil's band will present an excellent program at the concert to be given in Tower Grove Park this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The concerts are becoming more popular each week. Here is the program in detail:

Overture—Der Freischuetz	Weber
(a) Song—Beyond the Gates of Paradise	King
Solo trombone, H. Meier. Solo cornet, W. Rau.
(b) March—Missouri	Williams
Ballet music (suite 1) from Faust	Gounod
Selections from the operas of	Wagner
Gems from Martha	Flotow
Hungarian Fantasie	Tobani
Andante from C minor Symphony	Beethoven
Excerpts from the Runaway Girl	Caryll

William Weil, conductor.

Bandmaster Seymour has prepared a series of interesting programs for the musical week beginning this afternoon. At the Cottage in Forest Park he will in turn present all his soloists, and for the time being will himself resort to his alto horn as a solo instrument, laying aside his popular concert cornet in reserve for greater efforts later on.

ACTRESS WHO LOOKS LIKE HER SISTER WILL SUPPORT FORBES ROBERTSON

MISS GERTRUDE ELLIOTT.

It is announced from the offices of Klaw & Erlanger that Miss Gertrude Elliott, who is a striking duplicate in appearance of what her sister Maxine was a few years ago, will support Mr. Forbes Robertson on his forthcoming production of "The Light That Failed." The company will open at the Star Theater in Buffalo, Sept. 28. Mr. Robertson and Miss Elliott will bring their entire London company to America and will stage this play here with every detail of the original scenery and mechanical effects. It is described by London critics as a very powerfully constructed play, presenting in the more realistic atmosphere of dramatic portrayal all the characters in which the reader of the book takes special interest, including, of course, Dick Heldar and Maisie, played by Mr. Robertson and Miss Elliott.

SOME THEATRICAL GOSSIP OF THE SEASON NOW IN SIGHT

The coming of the regular theatrical season is indicated by the arrival home from the East of Manager Garen of Havlin's. He has had to cut his eastern trip short, limiting it to business, with only a glimpse of the usual outing of the theatrical people. Mr. Garen is assertive, rather than enthusiastic. He believes that the season will be a reflex of the prosperous condition of the country, and particularly so of St. Louis.

Havlin's will open with the matinee of Sunday, August 2, with "An Orphan's Prayer," one of the best of the pure type of melodrama. Among the other attractions of the season at Havlin's there will be "The Stain of Guilt," an American melodrama, under the personal direction of William Garen and John H. Havlin, with special settings of the stage and a cast of players who have a well gained reputation by their creation of character parts in other "heart touching" plays. "The Stain of Guilt" will be the attraction for the week of Labor Day. Some of the other bookings are:

"When the Bell Tolls," "Her First False Step," "The Middleman," "Hearts Adrift," "McFadden's Row of Flats," "Through Fire and Water," "A Daughter of the South," "Why Women Sin," "A Dishonored Wife," "Too Proud to Beg," "At the Old Cross Roads," "Dashed to Death," "Over Niagara," "For Her Children's Sake," "The Minister's Son," "A Millionaire Tramp," "Nobody's Claim," "A Little Outcast," "At Cripple Creek," "Across the Pacific," "A Desperate Chance," "The White Slave," "In Old Kentucky," "A Ragged Hero," "The King of the Detectives," "The Fatal Wedding," "Lost River," "Heart of Maryland," "Not Guilty."

Havlin's is being overhauled and redecorated inside and out.

The Columbia, which has been entirely overhauled during the present summer from top to bottom, will be opened for the season this afternoon. The first two weeks will be devoted to pictures entirely, the vaudeville season not opening until Aug. 3. The pictures to be exhibited are those taken by the polyscope at the ringside of the Root-Gardner fight at Fort Erie recently. They will be run continuously from 1:30 o'clock until 10:30 o'clock, it requiring one hour and 15 minutes to run the fight through each time.

Incidentally Mr. Sire is looking after the details of some theatrical ventures which are of interest to St. Louisans. One of them is the possibility of making a contract with the Odeon company for the summer of the World's Fair. It is the desire of Mr. Sire to put on an extravaganza during the World's Fair. He has been negotiating both with the Odeon and the World's Fair management, and hopes to conclue the negotiations with one or the other before he leaves for the East.

The first of the new attractions to be put out by Mr. Sire this fall will be "The Four-Leaf Clover," in which Edna Aug will be starred. Later in the season, provided the strike in New York does not interfere with the construction of his new theater, he will produce "The Prairie Queen," the new wild West opera by Hayes and Kunkel.

W. H. Crane will open his American season under the management of Charles Frohman, with a dramatization by E. E. Rose of "The Spenders" in the Savoy Theater in New York next September, following Mrs. Langtry. She will appear in a new comedy which is being rehearsed for her by Charles Hawtrey.

The famous comedy star, Lizzie Evans, who forsook the drama about five years ago for a top-line career in the vaudevilles, will return to the "legitimate" in September. She will star in the comedy drama "At Cozy Corners." Miss Evans was last seen, before presenting her sketches in vaudeville, with Anna Held's company, playing a leading role in "A Gay Deceiver."

The first embarrassing result of the building strike in New York was made public when Klaw & Erlanger announced that "The Rogers Brothers in London" would open their season Monday, Aug. 31, at the Knickerbocker Theater, instead of the New Amsterdam, where they were scheduled originally to have their next season's first night. Strenuous efforts have been made by the Fuller Construction Co. to have the New Amsterdam Theater completed on time, but despite the fact this firm yielded to the demands of the strikers and put an exceptionally large force to work upon the house, it is finally admitted by builders and managers that the structure cannot possibly be ready for its opening on Sept. 1.

The engagement of the Rogers Brothers will continue at the Knickerbocker until the early part of November, when Forbes Robertson and Gertrude Elliott in Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed" are expected to make their New York bow.

Henrietta Crosman now comes out with the positive announcement that after her coming tour of "As You Like It" next fall, she will never again appear in a "breeches part" on the stage. Miss Crosman started the craze for this style of part with her "Mistress Nell" three years ago. Now every actress of note is anxious to appear in such roles. So Miss Crosman has decided to give them all a clear field, and confine herself to skirts only.

My Husband Was a Hard Drinker for Over 20 Years, But I at Last Cured Him

Write Me Today and I Will Gladly Tell You How I Did It

For over twenty years my husband was a hard drinker, and had tried in every way to stop but could not do so. I suffered all the troubles and misery caused by this awful curse. Almost discouraged, yet determined to cure him, I at last succeeded by the use of a simple home remedy, which anyone can give secretly. I have proved conclusively that this disease can be easily cured. My husband is cured to stay cured, and I know from my own actual experience the trouble and heartache caused by drink, and now that my home is bright and happy again, I want everyone who has drunkenness in their home to know of this wonderful remedy, and if they are sincere in their desire to cure this disease and will write to me, I will tell them just what the remedy is. I have nothing whatever to sell, I no money. My address is Mrs. Margaret n, Box608 Hillburn, N.Y. I am sincere er. I have sent this valuable informa- sands, and will gladly send it to you, write me today.

Sometimes we are greeted in the morning by flags at half-mast for some prominent official who yesterday was apparently in perfect health. When we inquire the ailment by which he was stricken it is not uncommon to be told "acute indigestion" or "stomach trouble."

It is time people learned that indigestion or any form of "stomach trouble" is not a thing to trifle with. The result may not be fatal, but there can be no condition of diseased stomach which does not carry with it physical loss and weakness.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures indigestion and other forms of disease affecting the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food.

"Thanks to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Mr. Charles H. German, of Lehighton, Pa. "It is the only medicine that has done me any good. I tried everything I could think of to cure indigestion, and found I was only throwing away money. Then I heard of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and tried a bottle of it, and to my joy found it was doing me good. I used six bottles of it, and am now cured. It is the best medicine on earth."

This grand remedy does its work in a thorough manner; it gives the health that is all health; the strength that is solid, substantial and lasting; not flabby fat, not false stimulus, but genuine, complete, renewed vitality and life force.

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

BRYAN ATTACKS CLEVELAND BOOM

Former Presidential Candidate Considers President's Popularity a Party Menace.

CHICAGO, July 18.—William Jennings Bryan addressed several thousand enthusiastic Democrats at the Chicago Democracy picnic at Brand's Park today. He was received with cheers and waving of hats when he stepped on the platform. After a short introductory speech by Mayor Harrison, Mr. Bryan spoke and was frequently interrupted by applause. In his address he made special reference to the possible candidacy of Grover Cleveland in 1904, and the latter and his supporters were excoriated by the speaker.

The subject of Mr. Bryan's speech was, "The Democratic Ideal." He said in part:

"Surely, if there ever was a time when the preaching of the Democratic gospel ought to be opportune, now is the time. The character of our party is to be determined by the manner in which it meets an opportunity, and the manner in which it meets an opportunity will be determined by the ideal that dominates it. Will our party hesitate or take counsel of its fears? Will it abandon its championship of the people's interest in the hope of conciliating relentless foes or of purchasing a few offices with campaign contributions that carry with them an obligation to be made good out of the pockets of the people?

"The Democratic party must appeal to the democratic sentiment of the country, and this sentiment is far wider than any party. Wherever the question has been submitted in such a way that it could be acted on independently, there has always been an overwhelming majority in favor of that which was democratic, and our party can appeal successfully to this democratic spirit if we but convince the people of our earnestness and of our fidelity to those principles.

"We are handicapped just now by the fast that the last Democratic administration that we had was more subservient to corporate dictation than any Republican administration that had preceded it and the record of that administration has been a millstone about the party's neck ever since.

"The influence exerted by Wall street over the administration's policy, the use of patronage to reward those who betrayed their constituents and the employment of he most reprehensible of Republican methods, made the administration a stench in the nostrils of the people and kept in the Republican party many who were disgusted at that party's course.

"The odium which Mr. Cleveland's second administration brought upon the party which elected him did more to defeat the party than any one plank of the Chicago platform or even than all the planks that were most severely criticised. But for the repudiation of the administration it would have been impossible to make any campaign at all, and even the repudiation, thorough and complete as it was, could not completely disinfect the party.

"The greatest menace that the party has to meet today is, not the probability, but the possibility of the party's return to the position that it occupied from 1892 to 1896. This danger is not so imminent as the corporation-controlling papers make it appear, but in so far as it at all threatens, it paralyzes the energy of the party and nullifies its promises. Such a return would indicate a degradation of the party's ideals and a perversion of its purpose.

Enough has been proven to us—regarding the above case and hundreds of others—to demonstrate beyond all question whatever that any of the known forms of skin disease—any eruption or breaking out—must quickly give way and disappear under the influence of this prescription (known as "D. D. D."). Cases of Eczema, Salt Rheum, Ring Worm, Psoriasis, Barber's Itch, Acne, etc., some of twenty years' standing have been cleared off and permanently cured in a few weeks. In several cases from one to three years have elapsed and there has been no returning sign of the disease. Hundreds of cases cured since the preparation has been placed on sale show no sign at all of the previous affliction, and we fully believe they are permanent cures.

WOLFF-WILSON DRUG CO.

Have you been—or do you know anyone who has been—in a living hell of torture with a skin disease? Dispair usually seizes those so afflicted. Many imagine it is in the blood and too subtle to cure. Doctors have stood baffled and helpless against Eczema. Half of them think its worse forms are blood poison. Ninety-nine cases out of a hundred of manifestations on the skin are purely local—SKIN disease—not BLOOD disease. Healthy blooded people break out as often as any one, the blood has nothing to do with it in most cases. It is a parasite in the skin that spreads. This prescription is today completely clearing away—quickly too—and permanently curing every trace of such parasitic trouble and leaves the skin soft, healthy and perfect. Call on the above druggists and investigate the unquestionable proofs in their possession.

The prescription is sold in above drug store at $1.00 for a liberal bottle, and comes under authentic label of the D. D. D. Company of Chicago, who solely compound the prescription for druggists everywhere.

GEN. MILES' LONG HORSEBACK TRIP OVER THE SCENES OF HIS INDIAN VICTORIES

FACTS ABOUT GEN. MILES.

Gen. Miles was born in Massachusetts, Aug. 8, 1839.

Enlisted in the Twenty second Massachusetts and was made captain of a company in 1861.

In 1862 he was made colonel and in 1866 he became brigadier-general.

In 1865 he was commissioned major-general of volunteers.

He took part in most of the battles fought by the Army of the Potomac and was three times wounded.

After the close of the civil war he was sent against the Indians.

He subjugated the Cheyennes, Kiowas, Comanches, Sioux, Bannocks and Apaches.

He it was who drove Sitting Bull, that terrible fighter, across the Canadian frontier in 1876 and forced Geronimo to surrender in 1886.

He held in succession the command of the departments of the Columbia, of the Missouri, Arizona, Pacific and of the East, and in September, 1895, was promoted to the command of the United States army.

The Ride Described for the Post-Dispatch by the General's Companion, Who Confirms the Report That the Commander's Horse Fell on the First Relay and Bruised His Rider's Left Arm and Leg—Incidents of the Journey.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FORT SILL, O. T., July 18.—Gen. Nelson A. Miles' horseback ride of 90 miles from Fort Sill to Fort Reno is understood here to have been made for pleasure, and from a desire to see the wonderful changes that have taken place in the country over which he once marched to a camping ground in one of his campaigns against the Indians.

Then it was regarded as a desert. It was not a race against time. Several stops were made besides the stops at relay stations. The total time between Fort Sill and Fort Reno was 10 hours and 45 minutes.

Gen. Miles left Fort Sill at 3:35 a. m. When about eight miles north of the post the general's horse fell, bruising the general's left arm and leg. Gen. Miles immediately remounted and proceeded on his journey.

The road from Fort Sill to Anadarko was fairly good. The distance is about 40 miles, which was passed oover in 3 hours and 40 minutes.

The road from Anadarko to Canadian river was very bad, and the general rode very leisurely. He reached Fort Reno at 2:20 p. m., where the general reviewed the troops and attended a reception. He remained at Fort Reno only one hour, leaving there at 3:20. He took the north-bound train at El Reno at 4:10 p. m.

The general did not wear spurs or carry a riding whip. He usually allowed the horses to take their own gait. Only one horse showed signs of distress, and that was a horse I rode myself.

FARRAND SAYRE,
Captain Eighth Cavalry.

INCIDENTS OF THE FAMOUS RIDE.

FORT SILL, O. T., July 18.—When Gen. Miles determined to make the journey between the two forts on horseback he invited Capt. Farrand Sayre of the Eighth Cavalry to accompany him. It has been said that Gen. Miles wished to demonstrate that at the age of retirement he was still a sturdy man, but the reason he gave at Fort Sill for submitting to this test of endurance was that he wished to ride over a country that had been the scene of his Indian campaigns. Then it was little more than a desert and the general declared that it would be a pleasure for him to observe the many changes that had occurred with the progress of time.

Accordingly, shortly after 3 o'clock in the morning, the general appeared, clad in a military campaign suit, to complete preparations for his long ride. It was 35 minutes past 3 before the general and Capt. Sayre swung into their saddles and rode out of the square, followed by the lusty cheers of the cavalrymen. The weather was cool at the start, but as the day progressed it became intensely hot. The sun rose and had full play upon the riders, for the first 20 miles of the journey was over rolling prairie land, and there was no shade except in the beds of prairie streams, where there were occasional narrow strips of wood.

Thrown From His Horse.

When about eight miles of the first relay had been covered, Miles' horse fell, slightly bruising the general's left arm and leg. But this did not deter the sturdy old campaigner longer than it took him to capture his horse and remount it. There was scarcely any delay in the resumption of the journey. There was no attempt to make the fast time, and the first 20 miles was jogged off, most of the distance at a trot.

There were comparatively good roads until the third relay was reached. Here the trail followed the line of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, and the going was only fair. Soldiers were stationed at each of the relay stations and furnished fresh horses with which to continue the journey.

The fourth and fifth relays brought the general and his companions to Anadarko. During this stretch of travel the roads had grown worse. They were hilly and sandy—the latter often fetlock deep. The general did not manifest the slightest fatigue and kept his horse moving with all the vigor of a much younger man.

Up to the sixth relay the ride had been for the most part out in the broiling sun, which in combination with the fine sand dust made the going unpleasant. After leaving the sixth relay the roads in some places were very rough, but there was considerable shade that more than compensated for the roughness. The party still rode through the hills until they reached the seventh relay. From here to the finish there was practically pleasant riding. Gen. Miles and his companion were getting into higher ground—rolling upland prairie—and this condition continued until they reached the Canadian divide.

Jumped a Deep Ravine.

The eighth and last relays were in the Canadian valley. Here it was very heavily wooded, although the roads were very slow, being of thick, soft red sand.

Just south of the Canadian river Gen. Miles and his companion met a party of men who had charge of the pack teams. They had luncheon ready and the general fell to with a will and said he enjoyed it greatly. After crossing the Canadian river the journey to Fort Reno was very pleasant. There were wooded hills and prairies and generally good roads. Luncheon took twenty minutes and it is estimated that fifty minutes were spent in changing mounts and in the seven stops made for slight rests, so that the actual time consumed in making the ninety-mile ride was about nine hours and thirty-five minutes.

Gen. Miles arrived at Fort Reno dusty, but in excellent condition.

Upon his arrival he reviewed the troops stationed at the post, led the cavalry in a drill practice and compelled his horse to jump a deep ravine that one of the others chose to imitate. He was the only man at the fort that made the jump.

ARMY OFFICER COMPARES GEN. MILES' RIDE

Gen. Rodenbough Thinks Aged Commander's Achievement Truly Marvelous, Considering His Years—Other Famous Long-Distance Rides That Have Won Fame for Cavalry and Plainsmen.

NEW YORK, July 18.—"It was a wonderful personal physical achievement; it fully demonstrated the vigor of a man who will be retired from the service in a few months; it was an object lesson to our younger officers, but as demonstrating anything of practical value beyond these points it is valueless."

Gen. Theophilus T. Rodenbough, the speaker, had been asked by the Post-Dispatch for an opinion upon the 90-mile ride of Gen. Miles from Fort Sill to Fort Reno.

Gen. Rodenbough, late commanding the Second United States Cavalry, has seen the hardest kind of service. He lost his right arm upon the battlefield of Winchester, Va. He was retired from active service in 1878, and is now secretary of the military service institution and is also the editor of its bi-monthly publication. Gen. Miles was at one time president of this institution.

Marvelous Feat of Gen. Miles.

"Gen. Miles' ride is a marvelous feat for a man of his age," said Gen. Rodenbough. "It is a wonderful tribute to his physical condition, and I do not recall that any man at his time of life has ever undertaken or accomplished a similar feat.

"While there was apparently no effort to make a record, still the time was excellent, and must stand as an object lesson to our younger cavalry officers.

"It shows conclusively the result that a careful, even life may produce, even with age as a handicap, and it illustrates the physical advantages a man gains from a life spent in the saddle. It may also possibly give rise to the question: Are we not retiring our officers too soon? But that is a question that I am not in a position to discuss.

"Gen. Miles has virtually spent his life in the saddle and without the handicap of years his ride would not be remarkable. He has long been an advocate of long distance or endurance rides. I had occasion to collect some statistics of such operations, and I found that in 1877 Gen. Miles organized in Arizona practice for accustoming men and horses to severe work. This was by secret rides across the plains by a party of 'raiders,' followed by another party of 'pursuers.'

Famous Long-Distance Rides.

"The parties were usually about twenty strong, and I believe that Gen. Miles took an active part in a number of these rides.

"The 'pursuers' were not allowed to start until 18 hours after the 'raiders,' but the 'raiders' were bound to rest six hours after marching 18 hours and again after 12 more. The 'pursuers' could 'go-as-you-please,' but they were ordered not to injure their stock by hard riding. Of these rides, which were not under the spur of necessity or compulsion, there were many of interest. Troops of from 17 to 27 men covered distances all the way from 70 to 130 miles in from 20 to 24½ hours respectively.

"These rides were one-horse rides and were of practical value to the cavalry branch of the service. The relay ride is not a service ride. The one-horse ride is the service ride, and one of the most important things in connection therewith is that both horse and rider shall be brought to the objective point in such condition that they may be ready for active service.

"There have been some wonderful relay races. Take, for instance, the ride of Jimmy Powers in 1858. In San Francisco Powers rode 150 miles in six hours and forty-three minutes. The fact that he frequently changed horses only added to the splendid character of the feat, so far as the man was concerned, but it would have no value from a military standpoint. [illegible]avalry officers must have training as long distance riders. Usually when a man reaches Gen. Miles' age, some one else does his long distance riding for him.

"The ride of seven score army officers between Berlin and Vienna was interesting.

"As the crow flies, it is 325 English miles from Berlin to Vienna. By road it is estimated to be about 350 miles. Count Stahrenberg, the winner, covered the distance in some minutes less than three days."

Col. Dodge, U. S. A., on the Performance.

Commenting upon this performance from an American standpoint, Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel T. A. Dodge, U. S. A., probably the best authority on horsemanship in this country, said:

"This sounds like a wonderful performance. The horses were of the very best, and it was a go-as-you-please affair.

"The nearest approach to the Stahremberg ride by an American was that on a pony which Col. Richard P. Dodge knew. Its owner, a professional express rider, carried the mail from El Paso to Chihuahua. As the country was infested by Apaches he had to ride by night and hide by day. His practice was to ride the distance, 300 miles, in three consecutive nights and rest his pony four days between the trips. This pony, not over 14 hands high and carrying at least 200 pounds, made an equal average of speed shown by Stahremberg.

"The American plainsman thinks nothing of a fifty or hundred mile jaunt, and he keeps moving all the time. There are a number of notable rides in actual service, the data of which I have compiled. By actual service I mean where a man had to encounter all the hardships of making a long journey with one horse, traveling at times through an unknown country, where water was scarce for both man and beast and where the roads were almost impassable. The following are a few of these dusty rides:

"In 1876 Capt. Lawton rode from the Red Cloud agency, Nebraska, to Sidney, Neb., a distance of 125 miles, with dispatches for Gen. Crook in 24 hours.

"In 1873 Col. Mackenzie rode his cavalry command into Mexico after Lipan and Kickapoo Indians, beat them in a sharp fight and returned across the border, making 145 miles in 28 hours. This was a wonderful performance of a man with a body of cavalry behind him.

"In 1878 four men of Company H, First Cavalry, bore dispatches from Fort Harney to Fort Warner, 140 miles over a very bad road, 20 of it in thick sand, with little and bad water, in 22 hours—18 hours and 30 minutes of which was actual marching time.

"Gen. C. F. Roe, then second lieutenant of the First United States Cavalry, and weighing 180 pounds, 6 feet 2 inches in height, rode as post adjutant of Gen. Elmer Otis on half an hour's notice, from Camp Harney to Camp Warner to prevent an Indian outbreak. He made the distance in 22½ hours under very adverse circumstances. The sand in places, he says, was up to his horse's fetlocks.

"There are numerous other instances of hard riding in actual service that I could refer to, but these are enough to demonstrate the kind of preparation Gen. Miles has had for his recent ride. No horse should be ridden at the rate of 12 miles for more than two hours consecutively."

VANDERBILTS FAVOR UNIONS.

Young Multimillionaire Ends Labor Trouble at Newport, R. I.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 18.—Alfred G. Vanderbilt, the young multimillionaire, personally recognied labor unionism here yesterday. Mr. Vanderbilt returned from his lodge in the Adirondacks and found that the renovating of his country place had been delayed as a result of labor trouble in Newport. Twenty carpenters and as many painters had been employed on the job, but the contractors having declared a lockout work had been suspended.

Yesterday morning Mr. Vanderbilt sent word to the carpenters and painters that he would be glad if they could come to some understanding whereby the work at Oakland could be finished. Mr. Vanderbilt had the men informed that, while he knew nothing of the details of the labor troubles and consequently could not discuss them, he wished it understood by the men that he believed in unions for the laboring man, who, he thought, had greatly benefited by them.

The men resumed work under the direction of Mr. Vanderbilt's agent, who is himself a skillful mechanic.

FREE TO WEAK MEN

I HAVE made the curing of Weak Men my life's study, and have my system of treatment to such a state of perfection that I am making no failures. My remedy—the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative—will make you strong and happy again, no matter what caused you to be weak, wasted or debilitated. Bear in mind there is a root to this disease of Sexual Debility. Why not dig out the root? The aching of a tooth must be stopped or the tooth must be pulled. When your eyes grow dim from cause or age you wear spectacles that you may see more plainly. When you cut your finger you stop the flow of blood with a bandage or plaster. To do these things seems quite natural—plain duties and requirements; but they are not one whit more natural or sensible than it is and would be for you to take a recognized and unfailing treatment like the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative when you find your Physical Powers failing. The chief trouble, I find, is to get men to believe that there really is a cure for them, for nearly all men whose vigor and vitality is wasting have been imposed upon by the many quacks and charlatans who are making all kinds of claims for their nostrums. In view of the fact that there are so many of these worthless remedies (some of which are positively dangerous), I publish my affidavit herewith, stating that the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative will cure these ailments which I claim it will, and that it does not contain a single ingredient that could possibly harm you in any manner—and, to further convince men who are in need of a Vital Restorative, that I have just what they have been looking for, I have decided to send to each man writing to me and inclosing 50c, a course of the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative that he may test the treatment practically without cost, for I either return the fifty cents or credit him with it, as I do not care to charge for this demonstrating treatment, and merely make the nominal charge of fifty cents to do away with curiosity-seekers, for there are a certain class of men who write to every physician they hear of and who never did intend to take any treatment if it had to be paid for. This asking for 50c as a kind of guarantee of good faith effectually does away with these people. Now, when you send me the fi[illegible] cents I do not just send you a day [illegible] two's treatment, but send you enough to either cure perfectly or demonstrate beyond doubt that I have a cure for you. Make up your mind to treat your case right and send fifty cents for treatment today, and you will live to bless the day that you first read of the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative. This cure is entirely different in appearance and action from any remedy or treatment that you have ever seen or taken—and it does the work. In writing, be sure and address your letter plainly and carefully to the English Restorative Co., 17 to 35 Union bldg., Denver, Colo.

A SWORN STATEMENT

Can Any Man Doubt That at Last There Is a Cure for Him When Such Assurance as This Is Given?

CITY OF DENVER,
County of Arapahoe. April 27, 1891.

I, the manager of the English Restorative Company, first being duly sworn, on oath depose and say that the ingredients of the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative are known to me and that this Restorative does not contain any of the following poisonous drugs, all or a portion of which are contained in all of the supposed cures for the ailments or weaknesses which have been examined by me, and which the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative will cure, to-wit: Phosphorus, Nux Vomica (Strychnine), Cantharides (Spanish Fly), Morphine and Damiana (although Damiana is not considered a poison by some physicians). And I do most solemnly swear that the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative could be taken in full doses by a child without injurious effects; further, that I have been associated with the discoverer of this treatment ever since it has been offered the public and that I am fully cognizant of the vast number of cures that it has and is making, which number many thousands, and have investigated these cures personally and am assured that they are permanent and lasting. From indisputable evidence, from the thousands who have been fully restored and the successful action of the Restorative in all cases, I am further prepared to swear that it is an absolute and positive cure or specific for Sexual Weakness in its various forms and for Associate Diseases; and I most positively affirm that it is the only treatment in existence which will cause growth or development where shrinkage or atrophy exist. I believe this to be the only real cure that has ever been offered to men, and I make these statements voluntarily and without compensation, knowing the good this treatment will do men in need of it.

The manager of the English Restorative Company, personally known to me, appeared before me, a notary for the County of Arapahoe and State of Colorado, and duly swore to the foregoing.

MARTIN SMITH,
Notary Public.

My commission expires March 13, 1905.

This is no C. O. D. scheme as you will find most seemingly liberal offers are. I send nothing C. O. D., but do just as I say I will.

The physical failing of Sexual Debility, Varicocele, Wasting, Shrinkage or Non-Development and Kindred Nervo-Vital Complaints is becoming more prevalent every year, and I do not think that I overestimate it when I say that fully 75 per cent of all men are in need of my treatment. Let the cause of this weakness be what it may—whether from overwork, overindulgence, ignorance, dissipation or vice, the result of existing fact is just the same; and no man is treating himself rig[illegible] who is thus afflicted until he has taken a course of the Sir John Hampton V[illegible] Restorative, and then, when he is physically perfect again, will appreciate the [illegible] distinction and broad difference between a real man and a man who is wanting in vitality. A man who cannot believe that I have a permanent and lasting cure for him after he has read the affidavit I make and when I have offered to send a treatment for 50c for the purpose of demonstrating my remedy and in view of other and stronger evidence which I will lay before him, is either ignorant or he deliberately closes his eyes upon his own interests and future welfare; therefore, I have decided not to give any of my time answering useless correspondence, and will pay no attention to letters from persons who do not inclose the 50c for treatment. The Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative is not a "cure-all," and I do not recommend it for diseases other than those affecting the Sexual Organism and ailments arising from a depleted nervous system. For the Sexual System, it is a marvelous elixir—it is the Elixir of Life for the Sexual Organism, and the wonderful cures it has effected truly seem like miracles performed if my patients are to be believed when they say that they have tried "everything else" and failed to get relief until they secured the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative. The cures I am making every day with this Restorative strongly uphold every assertion I make—for Sexual Strength it is like the long life of Olden Times revived. Write today for the treatment—I send it prepaid to you, as stated above, for 50c. Delay in securing the proper treatment, once for all only means the tightening of the coils of this weakness around you, and they will grow more distressing and humiliating and relentless as time goes on. Again I will request that you be careful in addressing your letter so that it will not fail to reach me—The English Restorative Co., 17 to 35 [illegible]nion bldg., Denver, Colo. I have written [illegible] book which should prove of interest t[illegible]ou, and will be sent, postpaid, to all ordering the fifty cent treatment. Send st[illegible] postal order or other means of mo[illegible] conveyance, payable to the compa[illegible] privacy by M. E. Alkire, Treasurer.

'Twas not that we hit Garvin less, but that they hit Rhoades more."—From the Salve Merchant at League Park.

"Oh, for a lodge in some vast wilderness," sighed P. J. Donovan, as he rolled his eyes toward the score board at the end of the ninth inning rally of the Cardinals in the game with Brooklyn yesterday' where the final tally stood 8 to 4 for the visitors.

"You mean back to the tall timbers," suggested a sympathizing fan, a remark which was uncalled for, as anyone can see the two phrases are synonymous.

The "wilderness" and the "tall timbers" not being available, Donovan went to the clubhouse, where he analyzed the game to his charges in a manner somewhat too frank, and a bitpersonal.

When he finished there were three bosoms that did not fill out their shirt fronts to the former extent and Jimmy Hackett had shrunk perceptibly so that he was able to pass out the clubhouse door without disjointing himself.

Loose Playing by Both Clubs.

Donovan might have lectured both clubs profitably, as the game was loosely played in the field, the hard hitting by the Brooklyns being the principal factor in determining the issue.

Rhoades' benders were distributed in every safe place known to League Park except over the fence or into the bleachers. Fourteen safeties, three of them for extra bases, quite filled Rhoades' cup of bitterness and gave the visitors a sure hold on the game after the fourth inning.

The second round opened auspiciously for the Cardinals, after Brooklyn had walked to the field. Barclay got a life on a hard drive to Dahlen. Burke bunted toward Garvin and the lanky twirler fell all over himself trying to get it. Barclay tempted a throw while dancing about second and the ball rolled to the outfield. Barclay promptly moved up and scored when Hackett hit to Garvin, whose only chance for a play was to nail Burke at third, which he did.

In the third Brooklyn started taking liberties with Rhoades. Virgil Garvin was the most astonished man in the park when he opened his eyes after striking at the ball, to find that he had dropped a single in center. He took second in about three spreads his scissors when Rhoades shot a wild pitch past the plate. He moved up to third on Strang's infield out and scored on Sheckard's slashing double along left foul line.

In the fourth the rapping continued and another run tallied on Doyle's single, a sacrifice and a double by McCreery. Then followed a play which lit up the place for a few minutes and relieved the dull monotony of loose playing. Flood drove one at Rhoades that singed the seams of the ball it went so fast. It gave him a place on first base and put McCreery on third.

"Here," said Edward Hanlon to himself, as he sat on the bench, "is where we cop another run from these Cardinal guys," and he signaled to the runners.

How Rhoades Was Awakened.

Straightway Mr. Tim Flood began to edge away from first base. Then he ran back. He did this several times until finally one Rhoades' attention was aroused from a condition of somnolence.

Flood edged off the base again, a tempting distance, then darted down the line full tilt. The ball was already loosed to Hackett who shot it to Farrell.

Then Mr. Flood proceeded to juggle with the first and second basemen while Brain ran over to help Farrell and Hackett put him out. McCreery in the meanwhile was edging toward the plate, getting a good lead and waiting a favorable moment to dart for home.

Thinking he saw his opportunity he had a dash for the plate but Hackett had his eye on him and whipped the ball in to Burke, who threw to O'Neill, nipping the Brooklyn man by a foot. Flood took second.

Better teams than the Cardinals have been beaten on this old play, which failed to work.

No more scores were tallied by either side until the sixth though Brooklyn kept bombarding Rhoades scandalously, and all but tallied in the fifth, when attempts to steal bases caused the loss of a sure tally for the visitors.

Sheckard had singled with one out, but died stealing. Gessler followed with another safe rap off Burke's shins and Doyle followed with a safe rap that would have resulted in a score had not Sheckard attempted to steal. Doyle, too, attempted to steal and ended the round by going out in the effort.

In the sixth two bases on balls, two hits, one of the scratch order, and some very [illegible] playing by Brain, netted the visitors [illegible] runs and clinched the game.

A triple by Flood and a long fly netted Brooklyn another in the eighth and a [illegible] by Sheckard, some more bad work [illegible] Brain in receiving a throw to catch him stealing, a sacrifice and an out netted Brooklyn's final tally in the ninth.

St. Louis Woke Up Too Late.

St. Louis woke up too late in the game and began to find Garvin in the latter innings. A base on balls and a bad throw by Ritter put Barclay on third in the seventh and a single scored him.

Six runs behind in the ninth, St. Louis started after Garvin with a rush with Brain down on an infield out. Successive singles were made by Barclay, Burke and Hackett without a runner getting home. John O'Neal hit a fielder's choice, which put Hackett out of the running and Barclay scored.

Then Demont, batting for Rhoades, smashed out a beauty double, scoring Burke and things looked rosy for a rally. Farrell rounded up an infield out as his best, and the game was over.

Even Break at Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 18.—Chicago won the first game, a 13-inning contest, by superior play at critical times. The second game went against the home team, Umpire Moran calling the game in Chicago's half of the eighth inning, when the score stood 5 to 4 against the locals, in order to let the Boston players catch their train. Williams, the new Chicago shortstop, showed to advantage. Attendance 7000. Score:

WEST FOR M'CHESNEY, EAST FOR WATERBOY

Whole Country Divided Over Great Brighton Beach Race—Waterboy a Slight Favorite at 4 to 5 and Hundreds of Thousands Will Change Hands.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The match race between Waterboy and McChesney at Brighton Beach track next Wednesday is the all-absorbing topic among habitues of the race course at present. A story is printed today that E. E. Smathers will bet $100,000 on McChesney.

Never since the memorable match race between Salvator and Tenny has an event stirred the public up to such a pitch of excitement as the proposed contest between the two great champions of the East and West. Men talk of the two horses in their offices and at their homes. Each thoroughbred has a host of admirers. Regard for the horses has caused a factional feeling to arrive. It is the East against the West.

Love for these two thoroughbreds is deep-rooted. Local pride has been aroused in the Metropolis by the recent great speed of Waterboy. He stands for all that is great in a race horse—speed, courage and endurance. In his last three races this season 80 per cent of the race track patrons bet on him. And in each instance he brought home the wagers. For his unfailing honesty the Eastern public love him.

It is no wild statement to write that all the West and South adores McChesney.

Claude Will Be in the Race.

A new factor in the contest loomed up today when M. J. Daly, owner of Claude, arrived at the Brighton track and announced that he would start his colt for the rich prize. Under the conditions of the race any horse that is 3 years old and upward is eligible to start on payment of a $500 fee. Should this trio go to the post the weights will be: Water Boy and McChesney, 116 pounds each, with 114 pounds on Claude.

The race had scarcely been arranged before bets began to circulate freely among the eastern and western horsemen.

"Jack" Joyner, trainer of Water Boy, a man who is usually modest in his opinion and bets, was so carried away with enthusiasm and the prospect of a meeting between the two champions that he offered to bet E. E. Smathers, McChesney's owner, $10,000 on the result. The bet was not accepted.

Water Boy and McChesney represent two different types of thoroughbreds. The former is a black horse, with only a small white mark on his forehead as a mark. He is a big horse, but is built so symetrically that he does not look to be as large as he really is. He has a fine action, which carries him over the ground without perceptible exertion. He possesses a big turn of speed and can go a long route.

McChesney is a big, gross horse. He is a chestnut with four "white stockings" and a blaze face. He is slow to get in motion and is never fully extended until three furlongs have been covered. When once in motion he is a hard horse to beat the last part of a race. He runs best when there is a leader making a fast pace. Crowding or jostling is injurious to his chances for victory.

J. B. Haggin and E. E. Smathers, the owners of Water Boy and McChesney, respectfully, are millionaires. Both have been particularly fortunate in match races. Both have won several of such contests. Haggin is not a betting man, but at times he has been known to wager a big sum on his horses. Smathers is a plunger of the first water. He won $98,000 on a single race that McChesney won this summer. He has great faith in his colt and stated recently that he would bet $50,000 on him.

In the betting on the result Water Boy is a slight favorite over McChesney at 4 to 5.

Cincinnati Breaks Even.

"FLIP FLAP" JONES WILL TWIRL THEM

In Box for Brooklyns Today Against McFarland for Home Team—John O'Neil's Work.

Weather permitting, the Brooklyns will again "cross bats" with the Cardinals at League Park this afternoon.

"Cross bats" is used advisedly, as the bat seems to be the ultimate factor in winning ball games now.

Jones will work for the Brooklyns, who are anxious to take another game from the home club before departing into the unsympathetic land of the Reds and Pirates, where games are not handed about on trays to visiting teams.

Jones distinguished himself in yesterday's contest. His name was not on the batting list, but his presence was notable on the field. If you were there you saw him—he is the party who turned flip-flaps when the Brooklyns began to make matters warm.

No, Jones never traveled with a circus, nor was he a member of any "family" in a vaudeville show when a boy. Jones is the man who never laughs, and a flip-fap is his peculiar method of expressing hilarity. One flap is a smile, two flaps a grin and three a real hearty ha! ha! One hesitates to think what Jones might do in the acrobatic line if he ever got a case of schoolgirl giggles with his body.

McFarland for the Cardinals.

For the Cardinals, McFarland will be asked to work. McFarland got his wallops badly for the first time this season in a recent game.

David Brain signalized his return to the fray yesterday by making some very poor stops of thrown balls. His leg is still out of shape and on one single he made he had to limp around the bases.

Demont is making competition for short position very hot. His advent in the game in the ninth resulted in a smashing double that booms his chances considerably. Hitting is what is needed and if he can compete with David in that line there will be some hurying done at short before the season is gone.

John O'Neil commands the instant attention of all followers of baseball from the moment he takes his place behind the bat and gets to work. There is no nonsense about John. He is paid a salary to play ball and he plays as if there were some obligation on his part to earn it.

O'Neil exacts attention because he leaves the instant impression of being a player who knows exactly what to do. If the batter taps a little one in front of the plate, O'Neil's mask is off with the crack of the bat and he is up with many a hit that should be the pitcher's to field; if it is a foul, there is no hesitation—O'Neil is going at once and in the proper direction, seemingly by intuition, and no man can take liberties in playing off base with O'Neil behind the bat.

In fielding his position there is not a catcher in either league who has any edge on O'Neil. He is steady as a rock, fearless when it is necessary to take a chance at the plate, and is rapidly acquiring the tricks and by-plays that help steady pitchers at critical moments.

Mike O'Neil may return to his best pitching form, but John O'Neil will still be the star of the brother battery.

The Browns did not play yesterday, rain saving them from the usual ignominy. No games are played in the East on Sunday and two days' rest may enable the team to recover some of its waning spirit. Monday the club will try Philadelphia again.

Boston 5, Detroit 3.

BOSTON, July 18.—A balk by Mullin and Smith's throw to the grandstand instead of to McGuire, gave Boston three runs in the fifth inning of today's game, which, with two more added in the seventh by loose playing, gave Boston the victory, 5 to 3. Mullin was wild, but effective. Young was touched up rather freely. Crawford's hitting was the feature. Attendance 8937. Score:

CLAUDE TO TRY HIS METTLE IN THE EAST

Five-Time Derby Winner Will Probably Race Against Africander, Irish Lad, Water Boy, McChesney and Other Good Ones at Brighton Beach and Saratoga.

FORT ERIE, July 18.—The victory of Claude in the Canadian Derby a few days ago opens a new chapter in the history of the American turf. He has built for himself a unique and distinctive place in turf annals.

To win the St. Louis Derby is in itself a great honor, and the victor of this event is invariably a horse of the highest class, but when to that is added four other derbies the performance becomes one of extraordinary significance. Claude's Derby victories this year are unprecedented in the history of the "sport of kings."

He started out in his meteoric career by capturing the California Derby. This race has been always well contested but he won it with remarkable ease. A few months later he came east and at Montgomery Park, Memphis, made his preparations to battle in the Tennessee Derby.

Tennesseeans could not or would not see how any outsider could beat Rightful on his "native heath," and the Schorr colt was held at the prohibitive price of 1 to 2 while Claude was freely quoted at 3 to 1. But Claude won in an ordinary gallop by half a dozen lengths.

From Memphis he went to Nashville, where he anexed some purses for his owner. Before he left Memphis, however, he was signally defeated by Sam Hildreth's grand filly Witful, which has since been thrown out of training by reason of a very severe accident which happened her.

It was no disgrace to Claude that he was beaten by Witful, because she was universally considered to be the best of her sex in the West, and a phenomenon in heavy going. Her victory was generally forecasted when the match was made. It may be said in Claude's defense that the ditsance was not to his liking.

After his victories in Tennessee he was sent to Canada, where, on May 25, he won the Toronto Cup from a finefield of allaged horses. This is one of the most coveted prizes on the Canadian turf and the subjects of King Edward were quite chagrined over Claude's victory.

A week later he won the valuable Woodstock Plate in a canter, and the consensus of opinion among Toronto sports was that he was the best 3-year-old seen there in several years.

Then Came the St. Louis Derby.

His next important engagement was in the St. Louis Derby, and he arrived here the evening before the great race.

He got little attention from the turf critics, as the opinion was unanimous that he could not carry the weight assigned him and win. He was giving his opponents all the way from six to 15 pounds, and he had such crack horses as Jack Young, Monsieur Beaucaire and Au Revoir to contend against, yet he not only won, but his victory was the most pronounced in the history of the St. Louis Derby.

He positively made his field look cheap, and it is no exaggeration to say that he could have carried 130 pounds and won just as easily.

From St. Louis he went to Chicago, where he ran in the great American Derby. This was unquestionably the best race of his career.

While his victory in the St. Louis Derby marked him as a horse of uncommon merit, his performance in the Chicago affair stamped him as a thoroughbred of the highest qualities. Entered against 17 of the best 3-year-olds in the west, and carrying 127 pounds he was only beaten a small margin by The Picket, with 115 in the saddle.

In the first half-mile The Picket was sailing out in front with a comfortable lead, and Claude was struggling away back in ninth position. The Picket's time was 2:33, and with Claude only four lengths back he must have made it in 2:33⅘, which, considering the weights carried, was much the better performance.

The best previous record for the American Derby was 2:34, by a horse carrying only 122 pounds, and Claude's performance with 127 pounds was decidedly the best since the event was inaugurated 20 years ago.

Two days later we find him at Detroit. After his bruising race in the American Derby he was shipped at once to Highland Park, where he won the Frontier Derby by 15 lengths. One would naturally have supposed that his Chicago race would have dulled his speed, but he seems to be immune from fatigue.

He travels from California to Tennessee, thence to Missouri, on to Illinois and Ontario, winning victories as he goes along, and adding new glories to his famous sire. His next and last derby victory was the Canadian, which he won last week.

Has No More Worlds to Conquer.

Winning two derbies was considered an unusual event, but Claude has now won five, and as the last derby of the year is over he is left in the attitude of Alexander with no more worlds to conquer. His racing career, however, has just commenced.

When Saratoga opens, Aug. 1, Claude will meet with a different class of horses. The great Africander and Irish Lad will be among his opponents at the historic spa. Then will come the battles of his life.

Claude's forte is not sprints, or light-weighted contests, but long distances, with heavy imposts. I do not believe he would have a chance against either of the great eastern 3-year-olds just mentioned at any distance up to a mile, with weight for age in the saddle.

But with 125 or over and at a mile and a half or a mile and a quarter he would probably make a close finish with the best of them.

Claude comes by his speed and gameness legitimately. His sire, Lissak, was one of the best thoroughbreds of his day. Lissak was by Imported Loyalist, and he had the best blood of England in his veins.

As a 2-year-old Claude won a race at the Fair Grounds last year at the extraordinary price of 80 to 1. He was entered against a lot of cheap platers. But his owners and their friends knew he was good and played him in almost every poolroom in the country and made a great "killing" on him.

Claude's future is assured. If he never won another race, his derby victories have made him invaluable as a sire. He is rather young for the stud and Mike Daly is not the man to retire him as long as his earning power continues.

His career at Saratoga will be watched with the keenest interest by racegoers throughout the United States.

MILLIONS A DAY; IT'S ALL A DREAM

Penniless Sport Figures Out a Total of $88,000,000, Barring All Mistakes in Placing Money.

Trudging over the weary miles that separate the Skinker road from downtown St. Louis, a Delmar racetrack visitor, devoid of carfare or of the price of an evening paper, figured out the tremendous killing he could have made if he had started with his initial $5 on the right horse in the first race, and could in each subsequent race have placed on the winner his winnings in the previous event.

Eighty-eight million dollars, minus a few odd thousands, was the sum that took form in the mind of the undiscouraged form enthusiast as his busy limbs left the spires of the World's Fair in the distance. And in contemplation of the wealth that would have been his if he had placed his bets right and the bookies had had the money to cash them, he forgot that he did not possess 88 cents and that unless he could find some pawnshops which kept late hours on his return, his Sunday dinner might be limited to a free lunch.

1st Race, 16 to 1	$85
2d Race, 60 to 1	$5185
3d Race, 15 to 1	$79,775
4th Race, 3½ to 1	$279,212
5th Race, 3½ to 1	$977,242
6th Race, 15 to 1	$14,658,630
7th Race, 6 to 1	$[illegible],951,780

YESTERDAY'S DELMAR RESULTS

FIRST RACE, six furlongs—Lynch, 104 (Perkins), 16 to 1, first; Jerry Hunt, 106 (Spencer), 3 to 2, second; Prince Light, 112 (Troxler), 4 to 1, third. Time, 1:22¼.

Tennybell, Whitmore, Laronze, Pirate's Daughter, Milk Maid and Una Price also ran.

SECOND RACE, mile and seventy yards—Emma Meyer 73 (Perkins), 60 to 1, first; Goo Goo 86 (McKinney), 15 to 1, second; Venus Victrix 91 (Howell), 6 to 1, third. Time 1:56¼.

Lelia May, Pearl Diver, Miss Eon, Galanthus, Helen Hay and Pamplona also ran.

Won driving by a length.

Emma led all the way and was never in trouble.

THIRD RACE, five and one-half furlongs—Atlas 108 (Bell), 15 to 1, first; Wigwam 108 (Hall), 10 to 1, second; Check Morgan 108 (Troxler), 12 to 5, third. Time 1:15½.

Don O'High, Maxrose, Athena, Matt Wadleigh and Hugh McGowan also ran.

Won by a head.

FOURTH RACE, six and one-half furlongs, Mound City stake—Miss Golightly 100 (Smith), 7 to 2, first; Fitzkanet 108 (Bell), 8 to 5, second; Jordan 110 (Austin), even, third. Time, 1:27½.

The prevalent opinion before the judges hung up the winner's number was that it was a dead heat, won by a whisker.

FIFTH RACE, seven furlongs—Stand Pat 100 (Austin), 6 to 5, first; Bas d'Or 100 (Bridwell), even, second; Deutschland 108 (Kelly), 7 to 2, third. Time, 1:36.

Won in a desperate drive, by a nose.

SIXTH RACE, mile and seventy yards—Hook See Oka 89 (McKinney), 12 to 1, first; Hegira 92 (Higgins), 10 to 1, second; Henry of Franstamar 101 (Shilling), 11 to 5, third. Time, 1:55¼.

Charley's Dream, Pyrrho, Maghoni, Tickful and Broodler also ran.

Won easily.

SEVENTH RACE, one and three-sixteenths miles—W. B. Gates 107 (Troxler), 6 to 1, first; Light Opera 101 (Austin), [illegible] to 5, second; Mance 105 (O'Brien), 10 to 1, third. Time, 2:12.

Carrie Hope, One Way and Gin Spray also ran.

Won by a head.

CRICKET CLUB IS GOING TO CHICAGO

Will Take Part in the Tournament of the Northwestern Cricket Association.

The St. Louis Cricket Club will leave for Chicago Sunday evening to take part in the tournament of the Northwestern Cricket Association, which will be held on the Wanderers Grounds, Parkside, next week.

Those expecting to attend are Dr. A. Murray, captain; W. S. Newhall, vice-captain; Rev. E. Duckworth, manager; Rev. P. B. Eversden, W. D. Robinson, Joe Fletcher, A. E. Winsor, W. J. Price, F. W. Radcliff, D. O. Cunningham, A. M. Powell, G. F. Townley, J. E. Flagmier and L. Clark.

Teams from the following cities will compete: St Louis, Chicago, Pittsburg, Omaha, Minneapolis, Denver and Winnepeg, Canada.

After the tournament the St. Louis club will invade Canada and play at Detroit, Hamilton, London, Chatham and Toronto and probably other games will be arranged after the tour begins.

As the team is stronger this season than it has been in previous years they hope to win the tournament and a majority of the Canadian games.

The match between Rev. Duckworth and L. Clark sides resulted in a victory for the former by 17 runs. For the winners Dr. A. Murray 30 and H. Holmes 23 were the top scores. For the losers, Robinson hit very vigorously for 28.

"RUBE" WADDELL SUSPENDED.

Attack on Spectator in Grandstand Causes Disciplinary Act.

NEW YORK, July 18.—President Johnson of the American Baseball League, arrived from Philadelphia today and announced that he had suspended Pitcher Waddell of the Philadelphia Athletics for five days for his attack on one of the spectators in the grand stand during the game between the St. Louis and Philadelphia teams today.

Gun Club Tournament.

The eleventh annual tournament of the Progressive Gun Club will be held at their grounds at French Village, Ill., Sunday, July [illegible]. The program consists of 12 events, of 10, 15, 20 and 25 targets each.

LONG SHOTS HAVE DAY AT DELMAR

Series of Unpleasant Surprises to the Speculators and Owners of Favorites.

ALMOST A DEAD HEAT IN STAKE

Miss Golightly Adjudged Winner Amid Great Confusion Among Grandstand Spectators.

BY R. D. WALSH.

DELMAR RACE TRACK, July 18.Yesterday was a day of long shots and of the wholesale slaughter of favorites. It was also a day of wonderfully exciting finishes, and those of the public who were content to view the races from the grand stand and avoid speculation got full value for their money.

The feature event of the day was the Mound City Stake at six and a half furlongs for 3-year-olds and upward, worth about $1500. Only three horses competed, the other candidate, Hilee, having been withdrawn because of his well-known antipathy to heavy going.

Jordan opened a pronounced favorite in the betting at 4 to 5, but went to 11 to 10 at post time because of a strong and determined play on Fitzkanet. The latter opened at 2 to 1, went a point higher and then sharply receded, until the best obtainable against him at post time was 3 to 5.

The start was the prettiest seen at Delmar this year. When the barrier went up they were all moving on even terms, and for an eighth of a mile a blanket would have covered them, so closely were they together. But around the back stretch Miss Golightly moved forward and took command.

She appeared to have the race at her mercy at the head of the home stretch, but Bell brought Fitzkanet up with a rush on the outside, and at the eighth pole they were on even terms. From this point to the wire a terrific duel ensued. Men and women jumped on their chairs and screamed.

Came Near Being a Dead Heat.

The writer, who was close to the wire thought the race resulted in a dead heat, but the judges, whose opportunities of seeing the finish were better, decided that Miss Golightly had won. The verdict was a popular one, and the victor was fully entitled to the prize.

Jordan was outrun after the first quarter and finished several lengths back of the winner.

There was another triangular duel in the fifth race, resulting in an equally sensational finish with the stake event. In this case the victor won by a head.

Bas d'Or opened favorite at even money, and Stand Pat was quoted at 3 to 2. The latter got the stronger support, and was played down to 6 to 5. It was another fine start in this race, but Bas d'Or gradually forged to the front.

At the head of the stretch he seemed to have the race won, as he led at this point by seven lengths. But Bridwell seemed to have lost his usual acumen. He evidently thought he had the race won, and slightly eased his mount. This was a fatal mistake and cost him the race.

Stand Pat was coming with all sails set and in a terrific finish just managed to beat the Mulkey horse at the wire by a short head.

Hook-Se-Oka, at the false price of 15 to 1, made all the running in the sixth race and won handily.

Henry of Franstamar was favorite and was very badly ridden by Shilling. He could have been second anyway, but when Shilling saw that he could not win he eased up his mount and allowed Hegira to get the place. This is a most reprehensible practice on the part of certain jockeys.

Jockey's Lassitude Was Criminal.

In this case yesterday there was a strong play on Henry for place, and it was little short of criminal on the part of Shilling not to make an effort to secure it, which he certainly did not.

Tickful got strong support here, and she ran well for a first out, easily getting show money.

Capt. Rice is taking a party of friends to view the new race track at Hot Springs and needed a little spending money, and his old gelding, W. B. Gates, did the Good Samaritan for him in the last race. He would hardly have won had it not been for the magnificent ride of Roscoe Troxler.

Light Opera was a strong favorite, but he made his run too late, and the best he could do was to get second money.

The first race was won by Lynch at odds of 16 to 1, but Jerry Hunt was best. He got a slovenly and incompetent ride from Spencer, who seems to have made no improvement in the last few years. Spencer's time was occupied in watching Troxler, who was on his right, and he failed to see Lynch on his left until it was too late. A jockey should always look straight ahead and have his eyes glued on the wire, instead of watching his opponents.

The longest shot of the day won the second race. Emma Meyer was good as 100 to 1 at one stage of the betting, but the pikers kept nibbling at her until she went down to 50 to 1, at which price she closed. She led all the way and won easily from the 25 to 1 shot, Goo Goo.

All things are overlooked on a bad track, but the victory of Atlas in the third race was, to say the least, a remarkable improvement on her recent races. The fact that she was at 15 to 1 in the betting may have had some connection with her speed.

There was an unusual large attendance present, Secretary Martin having estimated the crowd as about 12,000. The day was delightfully cool, the thunder showers of the early morning having cleared the atmosphere.

CORBETT NEVER TRAINED SO HARD

In Spite of His Years He Is Confident of Besting Big Jim Jeffries.

HAS NEW TRAINING WRINKLES

Jeffries Is Hunting Deer Now, but He Will Begin Boxing With Fitzsimmons This Week.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 18.—Jim Corbett is probably training harder for the battle with Jeffries than ever before in his life. He is a confident chap, and for a man who has seen thirty-seven summers come and go, and who has seen life from all points he is splendidly preserved. No more is noticed the pallid "stage face," with the dull eye. There is color in his cheek and California's son has bronzed his skin. He has the quick step and the lively way of moving about that denotes health.

He has his training camp at Alameda, and it is different from the camps usually run by fighters. Mrs. Corbett is present and she is next in command to the ex-champion. Things are peaceful and quiet.

Some ask: "Is not Corbett over-training?" A look at him furnishes the answer, no. Then Corbett is asked if he is not too strenuous. He smiles and with an air of confidence replied: "I know myself. You can trust me to do the right thing by Jim Corbett. I will be better than ever before."

Then he walks to the scales and tipping the beam says:

"Look—184 to the ounce." At that weight he will fight Jeffries.

In training he has some new wrinkles. He wanted strength and weight and he figured that parallel bars close to the ground would give them. The result is his chest is larger, his arms stronger and his shoulders firmer. He believes in diet and his wife cooks every meal.

In the morning he spends an hour in his gymnasium punching the bag, working the rowing machine, wrestling with big Yank Kenny and hopping, skipping and jumping. He doesn't don the gloves.

There is a let-up at noon and a light lunch. Twelve miles on the road at a stiff clip follows. Then baseball is played and Corbett plays hard. Back to the gymnasium, a rub down, and then Corbett picks up the gloves.

"Early to bed and early to rise," is Corbett's plan this time. He says he will not be overtrained, and Mrs. Corbett says so, too.

"I will knock him out," he says. "Don't be surprised. Jeff is hunting deer, I understand. I will be hunting Jeff in a few weeks."

Corbett doesn't care a rap what sporting men are saying.

Over at Harbin Springs Jim Jeffries, Bob Fitzsimmons and Billy Delaney are engaged in shaping up the champion. Jeff hasn't been doing hard work yet. Monday will see him put on the gloves with Fitz for serious training. When he came Jeffries was as big as a bullock. The scales registered 242 pounds. "Too much," said the big fellow, "[illegible] will be about right."

"To the woods" was decided on. Rough work, hard work, lots of work was what he decided on. Mountain climbing was first tried and it did the work.

Long runs up and down hill came next, and a week ago Jeffries weighed 230 pounds. "Slow, but sure," he said. Delaney, watchful as ever, began dieting him. He looked better in two days. Gymnasium work then, and for a big man his activity was wonderful. "Boxing next week, Jeff; and, Fitz, get ready to give it to him," added the trainer. For three days the outfit went deer huting.

That Delaney is thoroughly satisfied with Jeff's present condition there is no question. He has indulged in just enough exercise to please the old trainer.

This will be thesecond meeting of the men. Over three years ago Corbett fought Jeffries at Coney Island, N. Y., and after giving a wonderful exhibition of boxing, making Jeffries look like a novice, was knocked out in the twenty-third round. Corbett's showing was a revelation to sporting men. He was supposed to be a "has been."

Corbet hasn't fought since 1900, but Jeffries has whipped Ruhlin and Fitsimmons since then.

The two men are opposites—one the ideal boxer, the other the ideal fighter. Corbett can hit faster and get away quicker than any boxer that ever lived, while Jeffries, a fair boxer, can hit harder than any man that ever stepped into a ring. Corbett has been knocked out, while Jeffries has never been knocked down. This is the point which the sharp men of the ring point to. "You must be able to knock a man down before you can whip him," is an old ring maxim.

Corbett hasn't boasted of how quick he would whip Jeffries, but Jeffries and Fitzsimmons assert that Corbett will not last ten rounds. Corbett claims he is as fast as ever, and his hitting powers increased 20 per cent. Fitz says Jeffries is a greatly improved boxer and that Corbett will meet a surprise right at the start.

TROLLEY LEAGUERS AT C. B. GROUNDS

First Game There Today Between Kerns and Eisenstadts—Teams of League Evenly Matched.

The first Trolley League game to be played at Christian Brothers' College campus will take place this afternoon, when the Kerns and Eisenstadts come together at that place.

The race for the leadership in the Trolley League is now becoming very close and exciting. For the first time this season the Kerns have a clear lead, but are followed closely by Alton and East St. Louis and a few games one way or the other will put either one of these three clubs in the lead again. The Eisenstadts are a dangerous proposition and are going to make the leaders hustle.

Club.	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Kerns	7	2	.778
Altons	7	3	.700
East St. Louis	6	3	.666
Eisenstadts	4	6	.400
St. Charles	2	6	.250
Bellevilles	3	9	.250

Other Trolley league games scheduled today are:

St. Charles vs. Belleville at St. Charles, 3:30 p. m. Umpire Ringe will have charge he game.

lton vs. East St. Louis at Alton, 3:30 n. Umpire Volz.

e East St. Louis Club will play no contests on the East Side grounds owto poor patronage, according to Sec- Cahill of the league.

Christian Brothers' College campus e the scene of all engagements which een scheduled for the East St. Louis.

JACK RATTLIN, 25 TO 1, A WINNER

Reversal of Form Causes Surprise in the Washington Park Handicap.

CHICAGO, July 18.—In a marked reversal of form, Jack Rattlin, at 25 to 1, won the Wheeler Handicap at Washington Park today over a heavy track.

The race was the feature of the closing day of the meeting. Like most of the fixed events, it proved to be a big upset. The winner was never considered as likely to land, and was not given the slightest attention in the betting ring. Jack Rattlin won by a head. Gold Bell made a game bid at the end and would probably have been first with a stronger rider than Reed. The winner ran last on Friday to poorer horses than he beat today. Jack Rattlin led all the way. The pace was so slow that the race was turned into a sprint at the end. Jack Rattlin is purely a sprinter, and won for that reason.

At the head of the stretch Jack Rattlin had a lead of three lengths. Both Gold Belle and Flying Ship closed on him, but could not catch him. Lucien Appelby, the favorite, was never a contender. He ran near the end of the field all the way and finished next to last. The Wheeler Handicap was worth $8060 to Gorman and Bauer, who own the winner.

The Lakeview Handicap, the closing 2-year-old stake event, went to Captain S. S. Brown's colt Proceeds, a good mudder, who found the track easy to negotiate. He accepted the pace of his stable companion, Auditor, for a half mile, and then went into the lead and won handily by a length from Flo Bob, with Peter Paul third. Proceeds and Bob Franklin were the winning favorites. On the latter a killing was made. He won the fifth after being backed from 4 to 1 to 5 to 2. He is owned by J. W. Pugh of Covington, Ky.

Presiding Judge Morse lifted suspensions on Jockey Henry, Adkins, Wonderly and Treanor, who were set down for rough riding. Summary:

First race, five furlongs, purse—Rainland 118 (H. Phillips), 7 to 1, won; Commodore 108 (Helgesen), 3 to 1, second; Mast 108 (Ezzell), 6 to 1, third. Time, 1:04.

Tufted, Pat Hammon, Tyon, Ondon, Martius, Watermelon and Gayasa also ran.

Second race, six furlongs, purse—Bardolph 117 (Landry), 4 to 1, won; Oronte 104 (L. Wilson), 7 to 1, second; Abola 102 (Richardson), 4 to 1, third. Time, 1:17 2-5.

Christine A., Beautiful and Best, Americano, Luckett and Floral Wreath also ran.

Third race, the Lakeview Handicap, gross value $3570, for 2-year-olds, six furlongs—Proceeds 119 (Helgesen), 8 to 5, won; Flo Bob 121 (Wonderly), 5 to 1, second; Peter Paul 119 (J. Winkfield), 7 to 2, third. Time, 1:18.

Jerry Lynch, Auditor, Lonsdale, Ed Tierney, Batts and Soldier of Fortune also ran.

Fourth race, Wheeler Handicap, 3-year-olds and upward, gross value $9095, one and one-quarter miles—Jack Rattlin 100 (S. Bonner), 25 to 1, won; Gold Bell 95 (Reed), 8 to 1, second; Flying Ship 95 (H. Philips), 7 to 2, third. Time, 2:12 3-5.

Lucian Appleby, Aladdin, Bad News and Six Shooter also ran.

Fifth race, one mile—Bob Franklin 88 (L. Wilson), 5 to 2, won; Echodale 103 (H. Philips), 5 to 1, second; Evelyn Byrd 103 (Adkins), 8 to 1, third. Time, 1:46 2-5.

Balm of Gilead, Little Duchess II, Moabina, The Kentuckian and Lord Touchwood also ran.

Sixth race, one mile, purse—Warte Nicht 98 (W. Knapp), 3 to 1, won; Esherin 99 (B. Davis), 3 to 2, second; Mary Glenn 89 (L. Wilson), 9 to 5, third. Time, 1:46.

Travers and Hot also ran.

FIREATER DEVOURS IROQUOIS STAKES

Favorite Gallops Home at Brighton Beach Ahead of a Poor Trio.

NEW YORK, July 18.—On a track that was ankle-deep in mud, Fireater galloped home a winner in the Iroquois stakes at Brighton Beach today. He was favorite in the betting. Cardinal Wolsely was second and Monte Carol third. This stake is for 3-year olds, and is worth $5000. A poor class of colts faced the starter, only four going to the post. They were off to a good start, with Cardinal Wolsely in the lead to the paddock turn.

Bullman sent the favorite to the front and gradually increasing his lead to the finish won, eased up, by two lengths. Eighth lengths seperated second and third. The winner belongs to August Belmont.

The Venus stake for 2-year-olds was won by Turquoise Blue, a 20 to 1 shot, with Inquisitive Girl, another 20 to 1 shot, second, and Audience third. Marjoram, favorite, was fifth.

The rain, which began as a fine mist, turned into a terrific storm, coming down in torrents. Not a dry place was to be found in the grandstand.

E. E. Smathers, owner of McChesney, arrived in New York today. He hoped that Wednesday would be a clear day and the track in good condition. McChesney also arrived today and was safely quartered at the Gravesend track. He is apparently in good condition, having stood the long journey from Chicago in fine shape.

The summary:

First race, six furlongs, handicap—Young Henry 124 (Odom), 2 to 1, won; Salvatelle 90 (Connolly), 30 to 1, second; Ingold 105 (Burns), 7 to 1, third. Time, 1:15 2-5.

Gay Boy, Rosetint, Minotaur, St. Daniel, Flying Buttress, Locket and If You Dare also ran.

Second race, steeplechase, about two miles, the Curragh—Walter Cleary 153 (Ray), 1 to 2, won; Gum Honey 132 (A. Jackson), 5 to 1, second; May Harrison 130 (C. Wilson), 12 to 1, third. Time, 4:47.

Lord Radner also ran.

Third race, five furlongs, Venus stakes—Turquoise Blue 99 (Willerson), 20 to 1, won; Inquisitive Girl 99 (Redfern), 20 to 1, second; Audience 101 (O'Neill), 6 to 1, third. Time, 1:01 4-5.

Pierautte, Marjoram, Monsoon, Petunia, Glad Smiles, Semitic, Sweet Gretchen, Memorian, Cyprienne and Flammula also ran. Dancing Belle left at post.

Fourth race, mile and one furlong, the Iroquois stakes—Fire Eater 111 (Bullman), 11 to 20, won; Cardinal Wolsey 108 (Gannon), 9 to 2, second; Monte Carlo 108 (Odom), 5 to 1, third. Time, 1:58 3-5.

Illyria also ran.

Fifth race, mile and one furlong, handicap—Lord Badge 107 (Fuller), 8 to 1, won; Courtenay 106 (Gannon), 10 to 1, second; Sambo 118 (Burns), 5 to 1, third. Time, 1:56 3-5.

Daly, Peninsula and Hunter Raine also ran.

Sixth race, mile and one-sixteenth, selling—Rostand 101 (Gannon), 1 to 2, won; Satire 111 (Hicks), 10 to 1, second; Star and Garter 94 (Larson), 15 to 1, third. Time, 1:50.

Tribes Hill, Irish Jewel, Arden, Nutcrock and Squid also ran.

Irish Giant Won in Third.

George Lawler, the Irish Giant, knocked out his opponent at Valley Park Friday evening. Walter Campbell won from his opponent on points after four rounds of fast work, the decision being well received by the audience. Several other bouts are expected to take place in this suburb during the summer.

Leander Wins Motor Race.

BOSTON, July 18.—George Leander of Chicago defeated De Guichard and Nat Butler in a 15-mile motor-paced race at Charles River Park this afternoon. Leander won by one and three-fourths laps over De Guichard. The time for the 15 miles was 18m. 29 3-5s.

A three-mile motor race between Ruden, Schultz, Hunter, Champion and Hoffman, was won by Ruden, with Schultz second and Hunter third. Time, 3:24 2-5.

Stewards' Rulings at Brighton.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The stewards of the Brighton Beach Racing Association have ordered that the entries of R. H. Brown, owner of If You Dare, be refused, and have referred his case and that of Trainer Lee Brown to the Jockey Club for further action. H. F. Meyer was fined $200 because his horse, Star and Garter, was late in getting to the paddock for the last race.

WASHINGTON PARK IS FASTEST TRACK

No Less Than Nine World's Records, Five Made This Meeting, Are Held There.

CHICAGO, July 18.—With the close of the race meeting here yesterday, the Washington Park track now leads all circular tracks throughout the United States in the number of world's records held by it. Prior to this meeting Brighton Beach was in the van. The standing of the circular tracks' records is as follows: Washington Park, 9; Oakland (California), 5; Harlem, Saratoga and Brighton Beach, 3 each; Sheepshead Bay, Morris Park and Kinloch Park, 2 each. The nine are held by Washington Park to date are world's records, and are as follows:

6 fur., Dick Welles, 3, 109, June 30, 1903..1:11 4-5
6¼ fur., Jane Holly, 4, 99, July 3, 1903...1:18 3-5
7½ fur., Rag Tag, 4, 104, July 1, 1903.....1:32 1-5
1 mile, Allan-a-Dale, 4, 110, July 1, 1903..1:37 3-5
1 mile 20 yards, Macy, 4, 107, July 2, 1898; Maid Marian, 3, 101, July 10, 1893.1:40
1 mile 50 yards, Florenso, 3, 93, July 6, 1898 ....1:42½
1 1-16 miles, Glassful, 3, 101, July 2, 1903.1:44 3-5
1⅜ miles, Sabine, 4, 109, July 5, 1894....2:18¾
1½ miles, Goodrich, 3, 102, July 16, 1898.2:30¼

Date—	Horse.	Dist.	Old.	New.
NEW TRACK RECORDS.
June 29	Golden Rule	13-16	1:19 3-5	1:19 2-5
June 29	Semper Vivum	15-16	1:33 2-5	1:33
June 29	Hargis	11-16	1:45½	1:45
July 2	Fred Leppert	½	:48	:47
July 2	Sylvia Talbot	13-16	1:19 2-5	1:19
July 4	Peter Paul	⅝	1:00	:59 3-5
NEW AMERICAN RECORDS.
June 30	Dick Welles	¾	1:12	1:11 4-5
July 1	Alan-a-Dale	1	1:37 4-5	1:37 3-5
July 1	Rag Tag	15-16	1:32¼	1:32 1-5
July 2	Glassful	11-16	1:44 4-5	1:44 3-5
July 3	Jane Holly	13-16	1:18 4-5	1:18 3-5

Some doubt has been cast upon these marks by those who do not know the facts in the case and the work of the timers discredited. As a matter of history, however, Washington Park has always been a fast course.

This season there was abundant cause for its increased speed. Between seasons the management spent an almost fabulous sum on the track, running over $100,000. After the substratum of the track had been prepared a layer of tan bark was spread over the whole track and on top of this a layer of soil. The whole was worked with for weeks, until it became a veritable springboard.

The marks made at Washington Park this year will doubtless stand for several years, as that of Ten Broeck, made there, stood for 13 years.

WAINSCOTT IS THE FAVORITE

Betting Choice in M. and M. Stakes at Detroit Drivng Club Meeting to Be Best Held.

DETROIT, Mich., July 18.—The annual blue ribbon meeting of the Detroit Driving Club, which opens at the Grosse Pointe track on Monday and continues through five afternoons, gives promise of being the best of the nineteen racing carnivals conducted by the club. The entry list is large and the class of horses is exceptionable.

The first of the big stakes is the Chamber of Commerce—$5000 for 2:24 pacers, which will be contested on the opening day. On form, Dr. Madara will be the betting choice, as he stepped a mile in 2:04¼ last fall and had plenty left when he won at Columbus this week in 2:09¼. Those to meet this one are Page Hal, Pan Michael, Tom Keene, Trilby Direct, Kingmore, Miss Georgia, Ebony King, Elastic Pointer, Ella Hal, W. O. Foote and Five Points.

The Merchants' and Manufacturers' $10,000 stake for 2:24 trotters on Tuesday, the classic, which is the features of the meeting, will have a field of thirteen or fourteen from the present outlook. On the strength of winning in 2:10¾ at Windsor this week, Wainscott is favored, with Nervana, Robert McPachen Maid, Jim Ferry, Shady Bettie and Robisola liked by many who have seen them race. There are also John Taylor, Bonnie Russell, King Simmons, Johnny, Miss Jeanette, Hie Boy and Cole Direct in this event. Experts consider it the most open M. & M. ever raced.

BANK STREET WINS AT ERIE

Buffalo Stakes, the Feature, Run in Rain and Mud—Talala Second and Soothsayer Third.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 18.—The Buffalo stakes for 3-year-olds and upwards at one mile, and worth $1500, was the feature at Fort Erie today. Bank Street, coupled with Taxman, won very easily from Talala, which was the pacemaker to the middle of the stretch. Soothsayer finished a distant third.

Rain and mud prevailed. Summary:

First race, one mile, selling—Kiwasa won, Briers second, Fairbury third. Time, 1:48¼.

Second race, substituted, six furlongs, selling—Reeves won, Aratoma second, Nellie Forest third. Time, 1:19.

Third race, mile, selling—Barnacle won, John J. Regean second, Neeburban third. Time, 1:49½.

Fourth race, the Buffalo stake, value $1500, selling—Bank Street won, Talala second, Soothsayer third. Time, 1:48¼.

Fifth race, four and one-half furlongs, for maiden 2-year-olds—Harmoine won, Too Many second, Lara third. Time, 1:00.

Sixth race, steeplechase, about one and three-quarter miles, handicap for 4-year-olds and upward—Presgrave won, Provost second, Trenet de Moc third. Time, 4:00.

AGED JUDGE WANTS HIS JEWELRY BACK

Lewis D. Dent Says He Only Lent the Ornaments to "Nice Actress Friend."

CHICAGO, July 18.—A man's vanity may be the keynote to the dramatic tale of stolen gems which wil be told in Justice A. G. Adams' court in Englewood this morning.

Miss Viola Carlstedt, who until two years ago was a member of the Frank Daniels Opera Company, promises to make former Judge Lewis D. Dent, 823 Sixty-third street, sorry he told of his grievance against her and accused her of keeping his jewelry.

"My daughter never has kept anything that did not belong to her," said Miss Carlstedt's father, who lives in a house at Normal and Englewood avenues, which is quite plastered over with signs telling how voice culture can be procured by stepping inside. The father has the title of "professor" on his business card.

The former judge had Miss Viola arrested because she refused to return a ring, some amber beads, and a bracelet which he said he had loaned to her. He happened to think they were the property of his deceased wife and so asked for a recall. The constables went after them, but secured neither the trinkets nor the young woman.

"No," the professor explained to an inquirer yesterday, "my daughter isn't a bit to blame—that old man thinks he is irresistible."

"Father," came a voice from the upper stairs, "father, you musn't talk—that will all come out in the papers."

The professor resumed:

"He gave my girl that ring when she was 17 years old, and she lost it. Then he gave her $3 or $4 worth of beads."

"Father, father, you must not say that," again came the voice.

Says She'll Arrest Him.

"Well, for the Lord's sake, what shall I say?"

"Say the truth, say we are going to have him arrested in the morning—isn't that enough?"

"Is that your daughter Viola speaking now?" the professor was asked.

"Oh, no; she's down town with her mother," was the reply.

"He's 80 if he's a day," was offered by the mysterious voice once more.

"Will Viola give back the gems?" the visitor asked.

"No. Why should she? They were given to her. They are hers."

"Did she wear any of them last season?"

"Well, she hasn't been on the stage for two years. She's been studying elocution."

Professor Carlstedt then said that former Judge Dent had been such a frequent caller at his home that it bothered him to a marked degree, and finally he requested the Judge not to call back and more. This, he said, angered the former jurist.

"Father, father," once more came down the stairs. "The papers will have all those things you are saying."

"They are true—the old man is sore because I wouldn't let him hang around here any more, but I did right. I know how he talked about other girls."

Former Judge Dent bases his suit on the following agreement, which, he says, was signed July 9, 1898:

Agreement on Which He Bases His Suit.

"As an act of friendship, I, Lewis D. Dent, lend to my nice girl friend, Miss Viola, my double diamond ring to wear and to be returned to the owner, Dent, when requested of Miss Viola by said Dent.

"VIOLA ASHTON CARLSTEDT.
"LEWIS D. DENT."

The aged judge was seen at the Princeton Hotel, Princeton avenue and Sixty-third street, last evening. He said:

"After having lent Miss Carlstedt the ring I also lent her an amber set of jewelry, including a comb, earrings, necklace, bracelets and breastpin. I had not seen her for nearly two years, and on July 6 I made a demand for the return of my property, which had belonged to my dead wife, and to this demand she paid no attention. We were alone on the front porch of her home, at 600 Englewood avenue, at the time.

"I have been very good to this family. Carlstedt and his wife had both told me that they would see to it that I got my jewelry back, but that Viola moved around so much in New York that they did not know her postoffice address. I sent letters to both the New York Mirror and the New York Clipper, but they were returned to me as uncalled for. Mrs. Carlstedt, however, was wearing the amber set the last time I saw it, which was at a party at their house, and I was talking with her about it at the time.

"There was no love affair between Viola and myself. The second time I ever met her I told her I was not looking for a wife, and never would marry again. We were just merely good friends, like a brother and sister—that was all—and I am the same friend to her now that I ever was. I only want back the jewelry which belonged to my dead wife. There is no spite work in this suit."

EXMOOR CLUB WINS AGAIN

Another Victory for Chicago Golfers Will Entitle Them to Possession of Marshall Field Trophy.

MILWAUKEE, July 18.—The Exmoor Golf Club of Chicago today for the second year took the Marshall-Field trophy and if the club can take the cup next year it will remain in its possesion. Twelve clubs were entered but only nine started and one of these, Riverside of Chicago, was forced to drop out because of the indisposition of Bliss, its star left hand player.

The contest was of individual against bogy, which is 40 for the course. The Exmoor club finished 45 down on bogy and the nearest competitor, Midlothian, was 59 down.

The Exmoor players were: W. E. Egan, H. E. Egan, R. H. McElwee, W. J. Osborne and B. F. Cummins.

The score of other clubs follow: Ontwentsia, 62 down; Milwaukee, 68 down; Glenview, 80 down; Kenosha Golf Club, 82 down; Auburn Park, 92 down; Racine Golf Club, 99 down.

EDWARDSVILLE

The funeral of Mrs. Frank T. Campbell of Maryville took place yesterday afternoon. She died Wednesday, after an illness of a year. Her husband and one child survive her.

Sheriff G. Frank Crowe, accompanied by Deputy J. A. Barnett, took four patients of the county hospital to the state institution at Anna this week and brought back five. The action is necessitated by the increasing number of inmates at the latter place. Those found incurable are returned to the counties from which they came in order that new patients may be treated. Fifteen will in this manner be returned to the care of Madison County.

M. W. Drislane of St. Louis, president of the Tobacco Salesmen's Union, was an Edwardsville visitor this week.

Mrs. S. Demuth, probation officer at Alton, will make application in the county court at Edwardsville this week to have four colored children in a Bluff City family taken from their parents and sent to Geneva.

Highland is at war with the Vandalia Railroad for sending its fast trains through the town at full speed. Mayor Robert Kamm took the matter up and served notice on the company that the city would pass an ordinance requiring a watchman at every crossing if the trains were not run slower. Since then the speed has been reduced.

The Edwardsville city council has by resolution decided to turn into the funds of the local fire department direct one-half of the money received from the 2 per cent tax on foreign insurance companies.

H. C. Maasberg, chief engineer at Leclaire, has gone to Pinckneyville to spend a few days with relatives.

Miss Margaret Coffey departed yesterday for her home in Waverly, after a visit with the family of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Vallette.

Mrs. J. F. Hillsketter has returned from Alto

NEWS IN NEARBY CITIES

JOSEPH KNISER, MAN OF IRON

Machine Weighing 5000 Pounds Rolls on Him, but Does Not Hurt Him Much.

Joseph Kniser of Edwardsville, figured in an accident yesterday which has earned him the title "The Iron Man."

Kniser was engaged with Adolph Noll of Pine Oak, in assisting to operate the latter's threshing outfit. The machine was being worked through Liberty Prairie and had just been removed from the Bratton place to that of Con Arbuthnot when an accident occured.

After a stop for water Mr. Kniser noticed as it started that a hose had been left in front. He stooped to pick it up and slipped. The machine ran across his legs and up into his body before the engineer could stop it. It weighed 5000 pounds and the men found it necessary to back it off the body.

They rushed forward to pick up the supposed dead man, but he arose and limped unassisted to the house where a friend hitched up and brought him to town. He was examined by a physician who found that no bones were broken and that his bruises were trival.

O'FALLON

Albert Hamilton has left for an extended trip to Chicago and Lake Michigan summer resorts.

Mrs. E. Profdt, who has been seriously ill, is improving.

Mrs. Mary Kuntzmann of Troy was the guest this week of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Neville.

O. J. Ebert will sell all of his personal property at an auction sale Wednesday, July 29, and will remove to Colorado.

William Casperson of Lensburg has purchased the property of Mrs. Leopold Schmidt for $600.

William Reidenberger spent Friday in St. Louis.

Mrs. M. O. Lydell and sister, Mrs. Gertrude Rider, of St. Louis are the guests of Dr. F. Rider.

Herman Hansleben, whose arm was torn off by being caught in the belt of a threshing machine, is recovering, and has returned to his home from the sanitarium in this city, where he was under the care of Dr. Varney.

Mrs. Mary Herman of Lebanon is the guest of her cousin, Miss Flora Abrour.

Kelso Cartwright was a St. Louis visitor Friday.

Jacob Ogle, who has been seriously ill, has recovered.

The Marines of St. Louis will be the attraction at Athletic Park Sunday, where they will cross bats with the O'Fallon baseball team. As the Marines are a strong team, a good game is expected.

DR. M'ARTHUR AT PIASA.

Season Is Proving Prosperous, With Many New Features.

The season is now in full swing at Piasa Bluffs Chautauqua Assembly. All of the cottages are ocupied, many tents have been put up and the hotel is having difficulty in accommodating all the guests who apply.

The transient attendance has been rapidly increasing and during the ensuing week and the week to follow a few special days will bring the attendance to the crest for the season.

The classes and departments have never been so well attended as they are this season, nor has the interest ever been so great. This is true from the kindergarten al the way to the ministerial conference.

The kindergarten, which is under the direction of Miss Emma Clerc, had a picnic yesterday morning under the trees near the Kindergarten hall, to which other children and older persons were invited.

Attendance is greater at the school of health than anywhere else, with the possible exception of the bathing beach. Dr. Carolyn Geisel, who gives the lectures and demonstrations, has large audiences forenoon and afternoon at the auditorium. Her lectures scintillate with wit and she attacks prevalent dietary transgressions with a keeness and relentlessness which are at times picturesque.

The school of health proper is held in the forenoon, but it is supplemented by a cooking school in the afternoon. Dr. Geisel's engagement wil terminate Thursday, at which there is genuine regret among the women who have been listening to her.

Yesterday was Dr. Robert S. MacArthur Day. There was a good attendance. Dr. MacAuthur lectured in the afternoon on "The Story of the Louisiana Purchase."

Last night, after music by the Doubt orchestra, solos by Prof. Sheffield and impersonations by Prof. Herbert Leon Cope, a poetical recital was given by Prof. W. W. Pfrimmer, the Kankakee poet.

The sermon this morning will be preached by Dr. MacArthur, following the Sunday school. Vesper services will be held at 7:30, and will be followed by a sacred concert.

ALTON

Mrs. Frank Katchum of 440 East Second street fell down a flight of stairs at her home yesterday morning. Her right arm was fractured and she received dangerous internal injuries.

Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Whiteneck gave a kitchen shower Friday evening at their home in honor of Miss Bessie McAdams, who will be married to Prof. J. H. Dickey Wednesday evening. The guests gave presents useful in a kitchen.

The farmers on the Illinois river highlands state that their wheat crop this year is the poorest in the history of that country. In most instances the yield is only about 10 bushels to the acre.

The Alton Naval Reserves have had the picture of Congressman Rodenberg and the recommendation from Washington praising their work at East St. Louis, framed and placed on the walls of the armory. The members of the company prize the recommendation from Washington very highly, and give Congressman Rodenberg credit for it.

The Epworth League of the German Methodist Church has announced that it will give its annual excursion on the steamer Spread Eagle Wednesday evening.

One hundred members of the Order of Eagles of Alton will go to Springfield at 8 o'clock this morning, to aid in the installation of a new lodge of the Eagles there. The delegation was headed by John Berner.

The East St. Louis ball team will play the Alton Blues in Alton this afternoon. The Blues and East St. Louis are fighting hard for second place in the Trolley League. Alton has it now.

Arthur Smith, who lives on the sandbar, was arrested yesterday for refusing to remove his houseboat from the bar, in accordance with an order issued by the police. Smith defied the police to move him. He contended that his boathouse was clean, that he was not disturbing anyone, and that he had a right to live on the sandbar for the reason that it belongs to no one. His may be a test case.

The union services of the different Protestant churches in Alton will start this evening. The first one of these meetings will be held in the Presbyterian Church, and Rev. M. H. Ewers, pastor of the Methodist Church, will preach. The meetings will be made evangelistic, and will be continued throughout the summer.

John Moore arrived in Alton this morning from Wichita Falls, Tex., to visit his father, Maj. Franklin Moore. Maj. Moore will give his annual campfire next week, and all of the boys in his old regiment who can attend will be in attendance. His son has come for the express purpose of attending.

The windstorm of Friday night did considerable damage in Alton. Several of the steamers in the harbor were washed upon the bank by the strong wind. Trees were broken in many places in the city, and several houses were tipped over by the wind.

Rheumatism Is Not a Skin Disease.

Most people have an idea that Rheumatism is contracted like a cold, that the damp, chilly air penetrates the muscles and joints and causes the terrible aches and pains, or that it is something like a skin disease to be rubbed away with liniments or drawn out with plasters; but Rheumatism originates in the blood and is caused by Urea, or Uric Acid, an irritating, corroding poison that settles in muscles, joints and nerves, producing inflammation and soreness and the sharp, cutting pains peculiar to this distressing disease.

Exposure to bad weather or sudden chilling of the body will hasten an attack of Rheumatism after the blood and system are in the right condition for it to develop, but have nothing to do with the real true causes of Rheumatism, which are internal and not external.

Liniments, plasters and rubbing will sometimes reduce the inflammation and swelling and ease the pain for a time, but fail to relieve permanently because they do not reach the seat of the trouble. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism because it attacks it in the blood, and the Uric Acid poison is neutralized, the sluggish circulation stimulated and quickened, and soon the system is purified and cleansed, the aching muscles and joints are relieved of all irritating matter and a lasting cure effected.

Bowling Green, Ky.
About a year ago I was attacked by acute rheumatism in my shoulders, arms and legs below the knee. I could not raise my arm to comb my hair. Doctors prescribed for me for over two months without giving me any relief. I saw S. S. S. advertised and decided to try it. Immediately I commenced its use I felt better, and remarked to mother that I was glad I had at last found some relief. I continued its use and am entirely well. I will always feel deeply interested in the success of S. S. S. since it did me so much good.

OFFICE BUILDING AND AUDITORIUM

Planned to Take the Place of One-Story Buildings at Twelfth and Locust.

TENANTS NOTIFIED TO VACATE

City Hospital to Be Temporary World's Fair Hotel and After That Will Be Transformed Into a Warehouse.

The Mercantile Trust Co. has given notice to the tenants of the premises at the southwest corner of Twelfth and Locust streets to vacate. This is taken to mean that the Corner Realty Co., which only a few weeks ago acquired a 99-year lease of the property of Isaac H. Lionberger, will immediately replace the one-story buildings which now occupy the site, and speculation is rife in realty circles as to the future of the corner. By the text of the lease, the lessee is required to erect a building to cost not less than $150,000, and of a character which will insure the annual net rental of $12,000 called for in the lease.

Mr. Lorenzo E. Anderson, vice-president of the Mercantile Trust Co., stated yesterday that there were no definite plans for the improvement of the corner, the action to obtain possession being to render the premises immediately available.

According to reliable information, plans for a 12-story office building with auditorium have been under consideration for some time, but the plans have been held in abeyance pending the outcome of negotiations with theatrical interests in New York for a lease of the auditorium. In this connection Mr. Anderson is said to have made several trips to New York, and it is understood that he has finally concluded arrangements providing for the improvement of the property along this line. Mr. Anderson would not admit, however, that his trips to the metropolis had any significance in this regard.

The new theater, it is reported, will be entirely independent of the theatrical syndicat. Weber & Fields, who will star Willie Collier and four other prominent people, among others, are mentioned as the possible lessees. They are now recognized as the front of the Independent Booking Agency, of which Hackett, Mrs. Fiske, Henrietta Crossman and Belasco are the chief attractions.

Mr. Lionberger stated yesterday that New York theatrical interests, prior to his deal with the Corner Realty Co., had made a proposition for the property with plans for a theater, but that it was obviously a World's Fair scheme, and he turned it down with visions of a white elephant on his hands after the big show.

The lot has 100 feet on Twelfth street by 140 feet on Locust street, and is considered one of the most valuable corners in the downtown district. It is the only vacant plot on the west side of Twelfth street, between Olive and Locust streets. The proposed improvement will complete the solid construction of this half block and will carry out the symmetry and be fully equal in character to the new $2,000,000 Jefferson Hotel and other improvements in course of construction on Twelfth street.

The Corner Realty Co., of which Festus J. Wade is president, is composed of local capitalists, and has operated with much success in corner property in the business areas of the city.

The Mercantile Trust Co. sold the property to Mr. Lionberger about a year ago for $238,000 on behalf of the Belmont Investment Co., and the lease which it has made for Mr. Lionberger to the Corner Realty Co. gives the property a market value of $300,000, vindicating Mr. Lionberger's judgment and making him a very satisfactory real estate investment.

City Hospital to Be a Warehouse.

Mr. Lionberger stated positively yesterday that the temporary City Hospital, occupying the block bounded by Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Chestnut and Pine streets, which he recently purchased through the Mercantile Trust Co., would be used as a temporary hotel during the World's Fair, after which a mammoth warehouse, costing in the neighborhood of $500,000, would be erected to embrace the entire block. "The premises will be vacated by March 1, 1904," said Mr. Lionberger, "and the work of changing and adapting the present buildings for hotel purposes will begin without delay. The report to the effect that I have plans for a big permanent hotel is entirely erroneous. I had the warehouse in mind when I bought the property, for which purpose I deem it most available, owing to its central location and proximity to Union Station. St. Louis is badly in need of storage facilities and the warehouse which I have planned, embodying the ideas of the largest and most complete warehouses of New York and other large cities, of which I have made a study, will meet all requirements, being a boon as well as a credit to the city. I have invested every loose dollar I have in St. Louis realty through the Mercantile Trust Co., and all my investments along this line have been eminently satisfactory."

Two Important Olive Street Deals.

The general real estate market has been quiet during the past week, the only noticeable feature being the demand for Olive street property, which does not diminish.

The most important deal of the week was through the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. by which Louis J. W. Wall secured a 99-year lease of the Emilie building at a rental of $4000 per annum for first 10 years and $5000 per annum for the remainder of the term. The property has 88 feet 7½ inches on the south side of Olive street, 93 feet east of Jefferson avenue, by a depth of 109 feet, and is improved with three-story brick building, Nos. 2328, 2330 and 2334 Olive street.

The lease provides for the improvement of the property within five years.

This lease is significant as indicating the growing demand for St. Louis real estate as fixed investments.

The negotiations on the part of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. were conducted by Mr. Eugene Benoist, real estate officer of the trust company.

Another important transaction involving property on this street was the purchase by Judge Finkenburg, through Hildenbrandt & Noble, of No. 1407 Olive street, 25x107, consisting of a four-story brick business building, for $35,000. The sale was made on behalf of A. P. Ghio and the investment is regarded as a most advantageous one at this price. Mr. Ghio was represented by Cornet & Zeibig.

Grand Avenue Hotel Rebuilt.

J. I. Epstein, acting for A. S. Aloe, president and treasurer of A. S. Aloe & Co., closed a lease of the southwest corner of Grand avenue and Olive street, known as the Grand Avenue Hotel, yesterday, to the Joseph Gerardi Hotel Co., for a term of five years. The building will be remodeled and thoroughly renovated, 20 new bathrooms will be added and other improvements are contemplated.

Joseph Gerardi, manager of the hotel, announces that the improvements will be completed and the hotel opened for the accommodation of guests Sept. 1, 1903.

FRANK J. DOUGHERTY.

Reports the sale of 5122 Ridge avenue from Mr. James F. Stege and wife to Mr. Robert Kinrisch for $3000, who bought for a home. Mr. Stege was represented by Wooley & Fish.

Mr. Dougherty also reports the sale of a 11-room house on Laclede avenue, particulars to be reported later. Mr. Dougherty is new in the business, but he has the aggressiveness that wins success.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TRUST CO.

The real estate department of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. report a very satisfactory week's business.

They report the closing of a 99-year lease from the Emilie Realty Co to Louis J. W. Wall of 88 feet 7½ inches on the south side of Olive [illegible]eet, 93 feet east of Jefferson avenue, by a [illegible]h of 109 feet and 1 inch, at a rental for the [illegible] years of $4000 per annum and $5000 per [illegible] for the remainder of the term. The present improvements consist of the [illegible] 3-story [illegible] known as No. [illegible] and 2334 Olive street. The lease provides for the improvement of the property within five years.

They also report that the demand for suburban property is fairly good, and that during the past week they have sold lots 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 of central addition to Midland Heights in St. Louis County to J. C. Hatfield and Celia E. Doherty, who will immediately improve with a splendid country residence. The consideration was $2000, or $400 per lot. The sale closes out this beautiful county subdivision which was put on the market by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. less than a year ago.

They also report sales in South Overland Park as follows: Lots 27 and 28, in block 14, fronting 200 feet on the north line of Hawthorne avenue, by a depth of 220 feet, to William Krebs, for $350. Mrs. Krebs has already begun the erection of a handsome home on this property. Lot 11, in block 20, fronting 100 feet on the north line of Emerson avenue, by a depth of 180 feet, to Mrs. Semma M. Ehrlich, for $375. This lot is Mrs. Ehrlich's second purchase in South Overland, and adjoins her former purchase on the east.

The Mississippi Valley Trust Co. also report the sale of the two-story six-room residence known as No. 5126 Ridge avenue, from Rev. G. D. Fower to E. R. du Rosey, who purchased for a home, the consideration being $3200.

REALTY NOTES.

A. W. Syrett, subdivision manager of the Mercantile Trust Co., left Friday night for northern resorts.

Sam M. Lowenstein is at Mackinac Islands.

C. H. M. McMillan left Wednesday night for Atlantic City and eastern resorts.

NICHOLLS-RITTER.

Nicholls-Ritter Realty & Financial Co. have had a very fair inquiry during the week and have sold the following properties:

To Allen J. Dubach, the six-room brick house with lot 25x100 feet, 3959 Kennerly avenue, for account of A. N. Craig, for $2500. This is one of the four houses which Nicholls-Ritter R. & F. Co. have left for sale on the north side of Kennerly avenue, west of Vandeventer, having six rooms—three rooms on the first floor and three rooms and bath on the second floor. Mr. Dubach bought with the intention of making this his home in the very near future.

They also sold to Gustav Nehse the three-room frame house and lot 25x135 feet, 4136 Green Lea place, for account of Graig and Woodson, for $775. This property was purchased by Mr. Nehse for a home, and is the third house Nicholls-Ritter R. & F. Co. have sold in this location within the last few weeks.

They also made several loans at 5 and 6 per cent and made two other sales which cannot be reported this week.

CHAS. F. VOGEL.

Charles F. Vogel reports the following sales:

No. 3036 Rutger street, southeast corner of Cardinal avenue, a two-story brick dwelling containing 11 rooms, finished basement and cellar, lot 25x125 feet, for $3350, from Mary Jane Hannigan to Mrs. Wilhelmina M. Schwarz, who purchased for a home.

Also No. 3017 North Twentieth street, between St. Louis avenue and Hebert street, a two-story brick residence containing six rooms, bathroom and all conveniences, lot 25x180 feet, for $2850, from F. J. Deicke to Charles J. Hoyer, who purchased for a home.

Also No. 4110A Carter avenue, between Fair and Harris avenues, a 1½-story brick cottage containing four rooms and cellar, lot 50x145 feet, for $2300, from Francis A. Schaeffer to John E. and Margaret Zellweger, who purchased for a home.

Also No. 4112 Lee avenue, between Clay and Fair avenues, a 1½-story frame cottage containing five rooms, lot 15x125 feet, for $750, from Frederick L. Harms to Mrs. Maria A. Meyer, who purchased for a home.

Charles F. Vogel also reports the sale of a 1½-story frame cottage containing six rooms, bathroom, furnace and cellar, lot 75x270 feet, situated on the north side of Oak avenue, at Selma, St. Louis County, Mo., for $2500, from R. L. and Clarice King to Mrs. Emma Retzer of Chicago, who purchased for a home.

JAMES M. FRANCISCUS & CO.

James M. Franciscus & Co. report having made the following sales:

Sold in Lindell Park subdivision a lot of ground, 37½ feet on the north side of Greer avenue, between Garrison and Glasgow avenues, for Wilbur F. Boyle, trustee, to Ernest Eikoff, for $1425. Mr. Eikoff will improve with a handsome residence at once.

Also report having sold some business property located at 2806 Shenandoah avenue, consisting of a store on first floor and 6-room flat above, with fine stable in rear, for Miss Helen Caldwell to a client for $6000.

Also report having closed three loans aggregating $15,100 and report a fair inquiry on residence property.

J. I. EPSTEIN.

J. I. Epstein reports the following sales for the past week:

A lot in Rosedale Heights, a subdivision in St. Louis County, having a frontage of 50 feet on the south line of Rosedale avenue, 100 feet east of Adelaide avenue, from Nels P. Nelson to Sarah Luke, for $1250. The purchaser will erect a home on this property.

Also an elegant piece of property located on the northwest corner of Cote Brilliante and Grand avenues, having a frontage of 127.6x124 feet. This property contains four houses and 50 feet of vacant ground on the corner. The property was sold for account of the Slattery estate to Mrs. Mary Burke for the sum of $1400.

Also 80 feet of vacant ground on the south side of West Pine boulevard, 338 feet west of Sarah, from George E. Lange to Mary Nicolson, for the sum of $8000, or $100 per foot. Mrs. Nicolson will immediately erect three choice residences on this property.

Also sold for account of the Waldauer heirs, represented by Hildenbrandt and Noble, one-half interest in the Beethoven Conservatory property, located on the northwest corner of Twenty-third and Locust streets, having a frontage of 80 feet on Locust street, by a depth of 155 feet, to the present proprietors of the Beethoven Conservatory of Music, which already owned an undivided interest. The price paid for the half interest was $20,000.

LOUIS J. BROOKS.

Louis J. Brooks, formerly of Tennessee, who made heavy purchases of St. Louis realty early in the year, has closed a deal for the remaining half-interest in Nos. 116, 118 and 120 Center street, consisting of six flats, Nos. 4045, 4047 and 4049 Cozens avenue, and a business lot on the south side of Easton, near Sarah, 50x118 feet. The amount of the purchase was $16,700.

RUTLEDGE & KILPATRICK.

Rutledge & Kilpatrick Realty Co. report having sold No. 5566 Maple avenue, an eight-room house with bath and furnace, lot 30x153, from the Olive Realty Co. to David E. Morrow for $5000. Also No. 556[illegible] Vernon avenue, an eight-room house with bath and furnace, lot [illegible]x153, from the Olive Realty Co. to William J. Gilles for $4250. Mr. Gilles was represented by the Mercantile Trust Co.

Also sold No. 1921 O'Fallon street, being a three-room brick house with lot 25x84, from the St. Louis and Kansas City Land Co. to A. Kaminski for $1300.

ALBERT T. TERRY.

Albert T. Terry & Co. report the following sales closed for the week:

The nine-room, modern, two-story brick residence, 4444 Washington avenue, lot 35x150 feet to alley, for $9000, from Rozier Investment Co. to Cerro Gordo Blevins and Judge Blevins, who purchased for a home, taking possession of the premises immediately.

Also on the north side of Waterman avenue, 100 feet west to Union avenue, 70x212 feet, from Lizzie Hull to Albert J. Nulsen of the Nulsen, Krause & Kline Paint Co. for $7800, Mr. Nulsen intending to improve the place as a future home shortly.

OPEN AIR CURES CONSUMPTION

Naval Surgeon Is Well Again After Fifteen Months of Outdoor Life.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 18.—A confirmed consumptive two years ago, Surgeon Thomas A. Berryhill, U. S. N., has just returned to duty completely cured by his own treatment, he says.

Dr. Berryhill is now surgeon of the United States Cruiser Baltimore at the navy yards. At the time of his discovery that he had consumption, he was on the staff of the naval hospital.

A swift reduction in weight, from 167 to 127 pounds, accompanying other characteristic symptoms, prompted Surgeon Beryhill to go before a board of survey. He was retired from active service at once.

He went to Michigan where he camped out until the fall. He then went to the Indian Territory and lived on a ranch until midwinter, improving in health all the while.

Southwestern Texas next attracted the surgeon, and in January, 1902, went into camp with a young banker from New York, who was also a consumptive.

The two lodged in a tent 1,100 feet above the sea level, constantly in the open air, hunting by day and sleeping with the flaps of their tent wide open.

The surgeon came East at the expiration of 15 months, and although his condition was that of perfect health, it was decided that he should spend six months more in the open. Now he is back at work, cured, he says.

SUPREME JUDGE BREWER DEFENDS INJUNCTION IN LABOR DISPUTES

"Shall It Be Said of Law That it Abandons Work of Preventing Wrong and Contents Itself With Punishing It?"

DES MOINES, Io., July 18.—Vigorous use of the injunction by the courts was advocated by Justice David J. Brewer of the United States Supreme Court in an address before the State Bar Association on "The Triumph of Justice." He declared it would not do to suggest that capital and corporations may be enjoined, but labor and labor organizations may not. The address throughout was of unusual strength, and Justice Brewer was overwhelmed with applause and congratulation by the attorneys.

"We hear a great clamor against the power of injunction," said Justice Brewer. "It has been made a political question and issue and government by injunction is the popular phraseology. Never was there a time when such full and vigorous power meant more to a nation than now. As the population becomes more dense and the business interest of the country larger and more complicated the restraining power of a court of equity is of far greater value to the nation than the punishing power of the court of law. What is needed is prevention rather than cure.

Law Must Prevent as Well as Punish.

"Shall it be said of law, which is supposed to be the embodiment of all human reason, that it abandons the work of staying or preventing wrong and contents itself only with punishing wrong? To take away the power of injunction from courts of equity is a step backward toward barbarism rather than a step forward toward that perfect civilization toward which we are striving.

"I know that labor organizations especially are sensitive on this matter of injunctions, believing they are made against them and their interests, but there is no thought of disturbing them so long as they are peaceful in the exercises of their rights. Injunctions are only to restrain violence and disorder. We have the example of the great Debs strike settled peacefully by a judicial injunction. Later there is the Wabash Railroad strike.

"Nor will it do to suggest that capital and corporations may be enjoined, but not labor organizations. We cannot discriminate thus. One portion of the people cannot be exempt and others not. Then, there is the question that it might be obnoxious to the constitution, such an exemption, but this need not be settled here. The preventive force of a court of equity should be strengthened and enlarged rather than weakened. The cry of government by injunction will spend itself. At least it will be felt by all that the power of injunction is exercised when necessity demands it and that the limit of restraint is only that which equity and justice demand."

Drainage Canal Case an Example.

Justice Brewer referred to the drainage action brought by Missouri against Illinois as an instance in which it would be a sad commentary on the wisdom of the law if the canal discharged disease germs as charged and there was no power to prevent it.

Attempts at concealment in the courts, especially in the divorce courts, was denounced. Justice Brewer declared that justice should always seek the light of day and it was better there should be no divorces than those obtained by secret judicial hearings.

A strong plea was made that judicial life should be separated from politics. Pardon boards and public hearings on all pardon applications were urged. The universal acceptance of the arbitration idea was eloquently favored.

World's Fair Glee Club.

Several officials and employes of the World's Fair at the administration building plan to organize a singing society to be known as the World's Fair glee club. There are a number of fine voices among the exposition employes and the object in forming the club is to keep in practice and improve this natural gift as well as to promote a closer social relation. Prof. Paul Mori, choirmaster of St. George's Episcopal church, has volunteered his services as organizing director, and Francis M. Chase will be the club's manager pending permanent organization.

SUNBONNET COST WOMAN HER LIFE

Alice Anderson Could Not See Nor Hear Approaching Electric Car.

HER SKULL WAS FRACTURED

Died Two Hours After the Accident at City Hospital Without Regaining Consciousness.

A sunbonnet which prevented her from seeing an approaching street car or hearing the gong was responsible for the death of Alice Anderson, 50 years old, of 1523 Washington avenue.

The woman was struck by an eastbound Washington avenue car at Fifteenth street yesterday afternoon and died two hours later at the City Hospital, without recovering consciousness. Her skull was fractured.

She was walking across the street toward her home when the car struck her. She did not see it and paid no attention when the motorman rang the gong.

A sunbonnet tied close about her ears kept out sound as well as sight.

Little is know nregarding the woman, as she had been at the Washington avenue address only three weeks, and the police have been unable to learn where she lived previous to that. She is believed to have been a hotel or restaurant cook.

Her name was ascertained from insurance papers found among her effects in her room.

Her hair, which she wore short, was gray.

I CURE CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISONING

I Have Discovered the Marvelous Secret of Nature and I Give It Free to You.

My Mysterious Compound Startles the World With Its Wonderful Cures—With This Marvelous Secret No Man or Woman Need Suffer From Syphilis and It Is My Mission on Earth Henceforth to Restore All Suffering Men and Women to Perfect Health.

Send No Money—Simply Send Your Name and Address and This Marvelous Compound Will Be Sent to You By Return Mail, Prepaid, Absolutely Free.

I have found the marvelous secret of Nature in restoring perfect health to men and women suffering from syphilis, in any stage. To me it has been given to bring to the weary, sore, worn-out brothers and sisters the knowledge of this priceless boon, and even to the uttermost ends of the earth I send my message of love and peace and hope and help. Unbelievers may scoff and cry "fake," but I heed them not. My work has just begun and I am saving men.

The secret of this mighty healing power, this marvelous fluid, is known to me alone. It is mine to give to whom I will and my works go before me. Doubt not! I ask no man to believe me, but I give to every man free this priceless boon and it restores him instantly to perfect health. With this marvelous mysterious compound, which I have discovered only after a lifetime devoted to search through all the realms of science, and the archives of the ancients, it is possible to heal at once the awful sores, clear the complexion of the copper spots, dry up the mucous patches, heal the ulcers and leave the body clean and healthy and wholesome. With this mysterious compound no man or woman will ever again be troubled with syphilis or any of its evil effects.

Remember it matters not what stage your case may be in. It matters not how long you have had it, how you got it or when you got it. It matters not what doctors or scoffers say. This is no ordinary drug or medicinal method of treatment, but it is the vital life spark itself, and it matters not how many remedies or doctors have failed I have repeatedly and instantly cured the worst old cases, healed the sores and caused the mucous patches, copper colored spots, and other evidences of this terrible poison to disappear like magic. My secret compound never fails, and its cures are lasting; never again are any of my people troubled with Syphilis. My private address is Dr. C. Sargent Ferris, 8070 Strawn Building, Cleveland, Ohio, and I urge every person suffering from syphilis to send to me and I will forward by first mail, prepaid, a package of my marvelous discovery. My wondrous discovery has startled the world by its miraculous effects, and yet I seek not fame or glory. It suffices me if I may be the humble instrument of Nature's greatest power in bringing all men to the enjoyment of perfect health and I do it free. In the time allotted to me here on earth I shall do all that in my power [illegible] my fellow-men the benefit of this [illegible] and my reward shall be in the know[illegible] I have done unto others as I would [illegible] should do unto me.

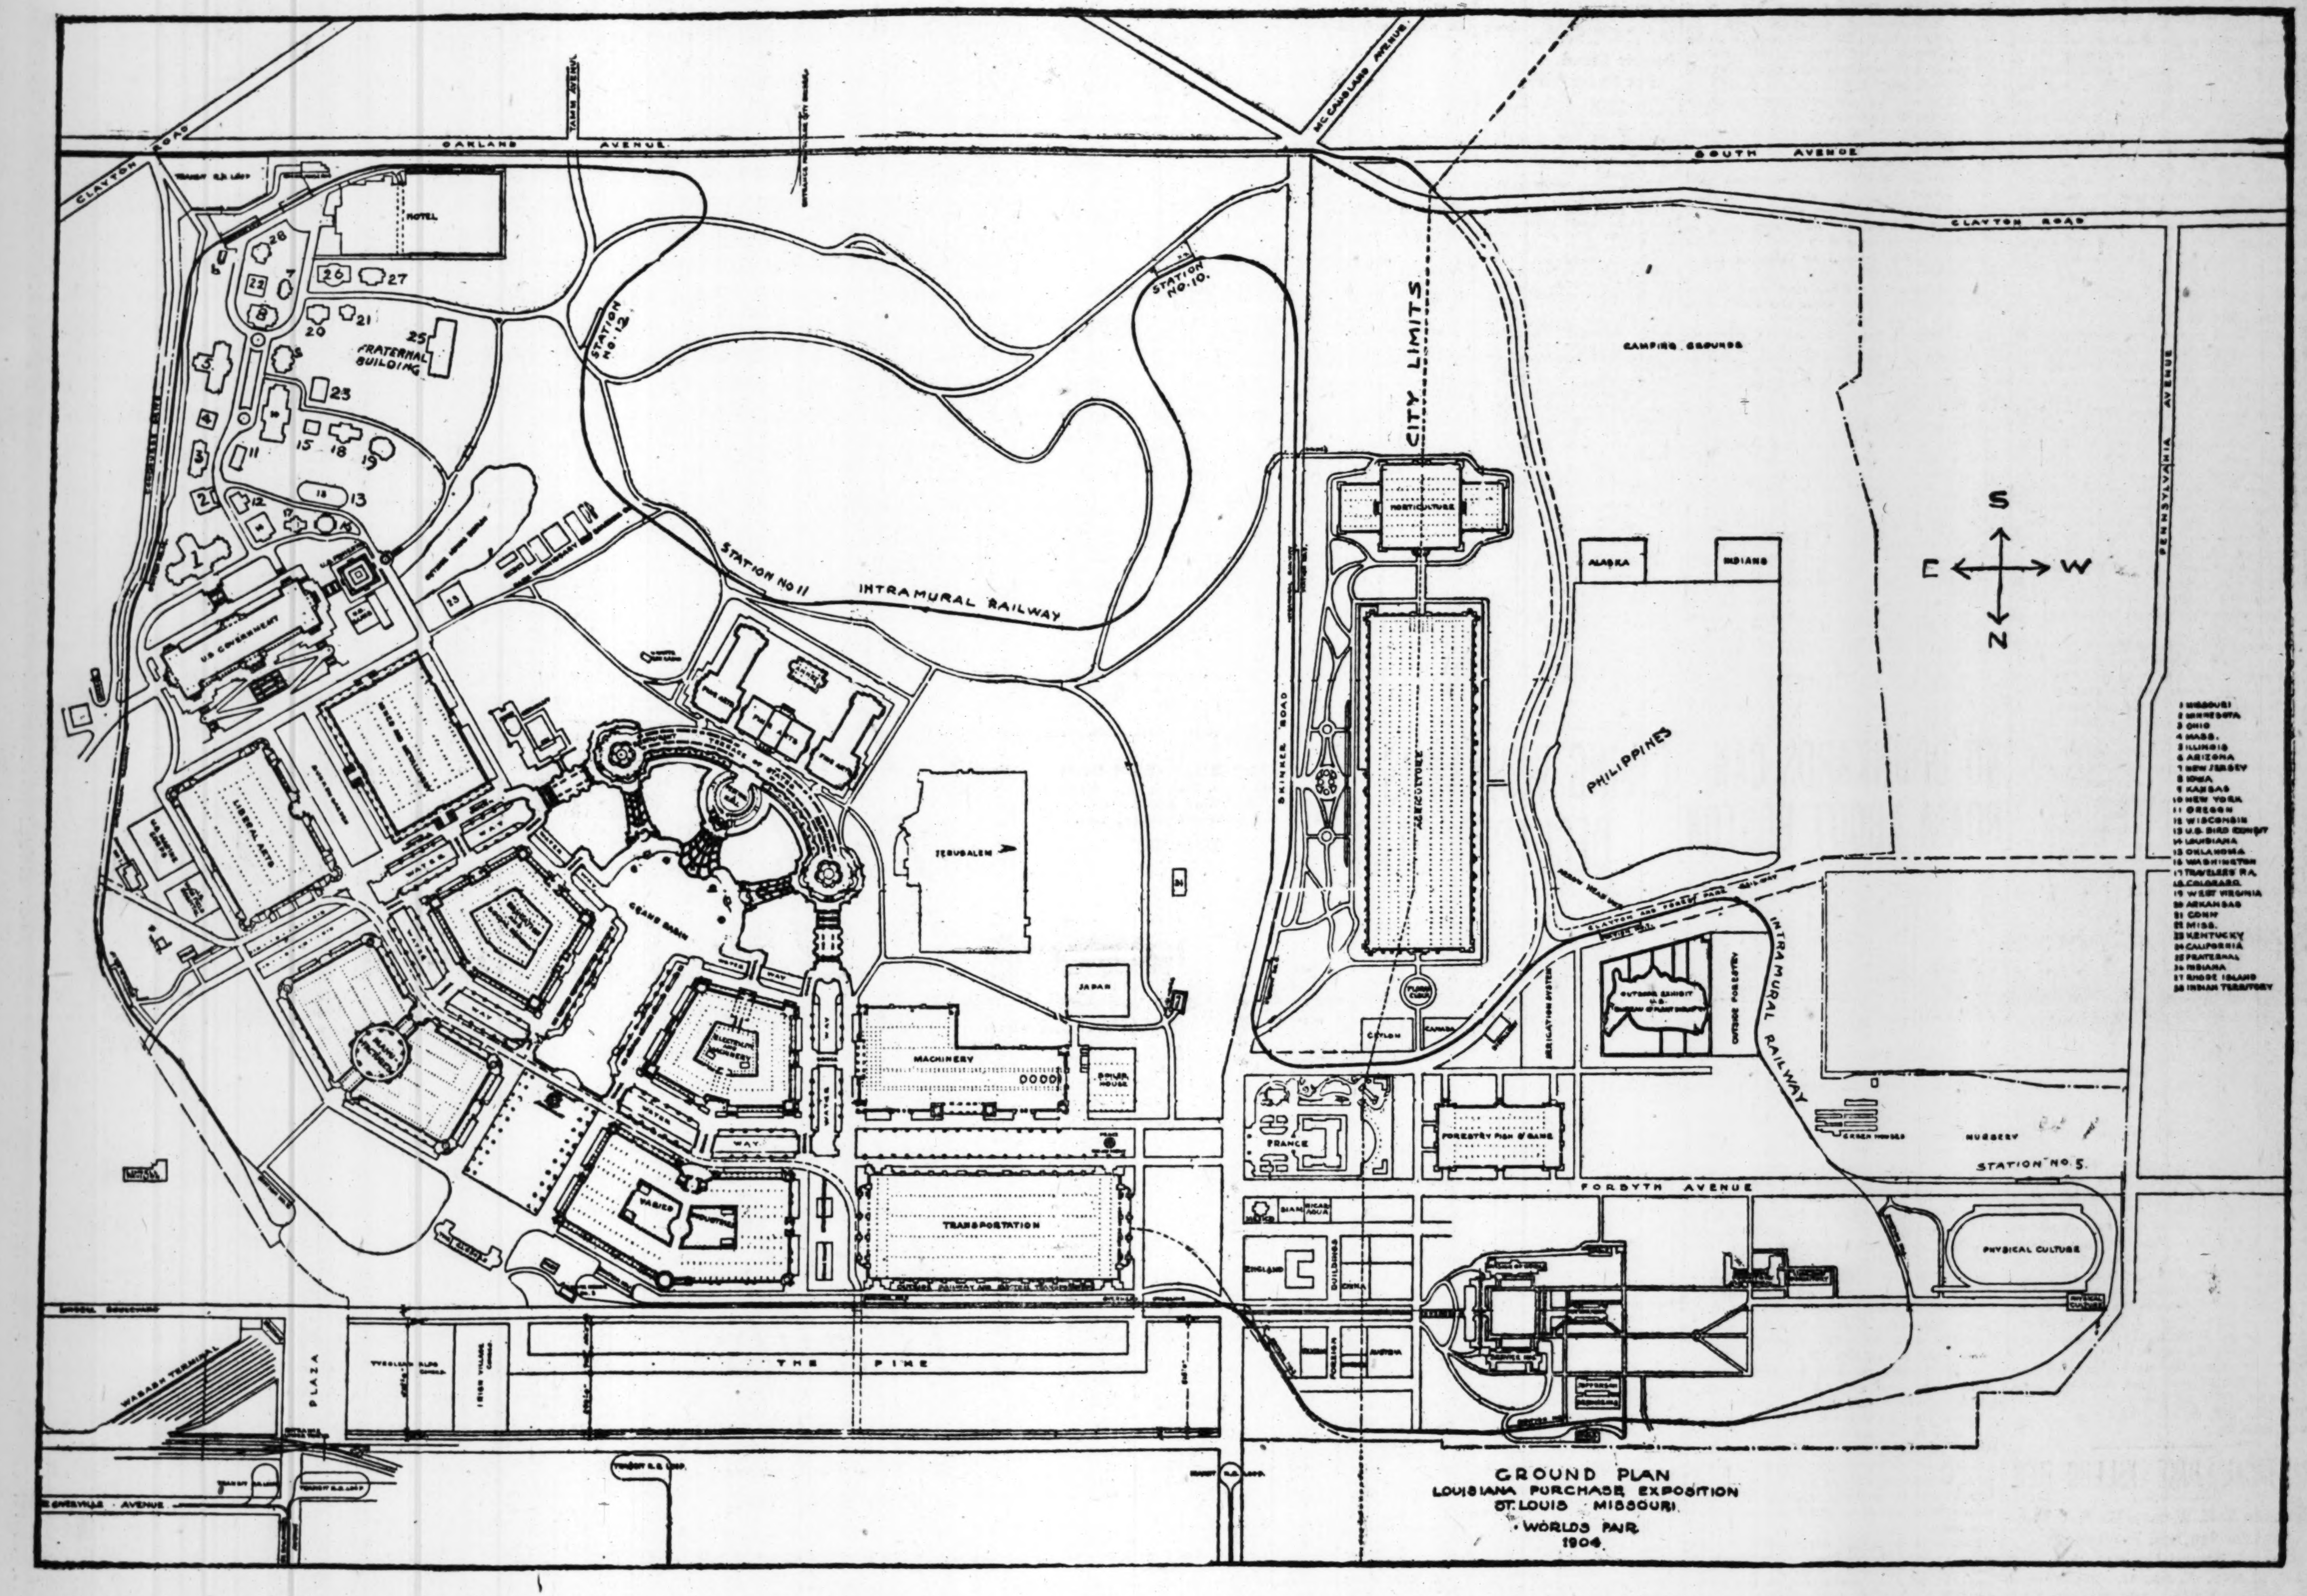
HERE IS THE MAP OF THE WORLD'S FAIR WITH EVERY STATE AND FOREIGN BUILDING



The ground plan of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition has been completed and approved by the board of directors. The accompanying map shows the location of each building as fixed in this plan.

Not only the locations of the main exhibit buildings, but also those of all the state and foreign buildings are designated, and most of the sites have been inspected by the commissions which will have charge of the buildings.

The plan was finally adopted only after several provisional drafts had been made and studied. In each a few changes were decided upon as necessary, and this arrangement is considered the best that could be made, and most satisfactory to all the interests having buildings or concessions at the Fair.

Several changes of sites of state buildings were made, but everybody is satisfied with the perfected plans.

WAS AGED WOMAN VICTIM OF POISON?

Son-in-Law Is Held Pending Inquiry Into Manner of Her Death.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ANNA, Ill., July 18.—Riddle Coats is in jail at Jonesboro awaiting the investigation of the coroner's jury of the death of Caroline Quinlan, his aged and feeble mother-in-law.

Coats went to a doctor's office Monday afternoon and got medicine for Mrs. Quinlan who was complaining of feeling bad but was not in bed.

The same afternoon he bought strychnine in C. L. Otrich's drug store "to kill a dog," he said.

Five doses of medicine were given to Mrs. Quinlan and shortly after she took the fifth, she died in great agony.

The dog to kill which Coats said he bought the medicine has not been found.

The body was exhumed yesterday, and the stomach was removed on the order of coroner Grear and State's Attorney Lingle, who will take it to a chemist for analysis.

Coats has a wife and children, the latter living with Mrs. Quinlan. He and his wife have been separated for some time. She is employed in the insane hospital here.

Saddlery Convention Here.

COUNTESS FORGIVES FOOTMAN WHO WOOED AND WON HER AS PRINCE

Mable Russell Takes William Brown Back, Despite His Deception, Because Like Lady Deschapples, of Lyons, She Loved Him for Himself.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

LONDON, July 18.—William Brown, former footman and foreign husband of Countess (Mabel) Russell, who pleaded guilty recently to having wedded her under false pretenses, calling himself Prince Archibald Stuart de Modena, has now given out the following statement:

"My wife, Mabel Countess Russell, and myself have decided to forgive and forget the horrors of the past few months.

"The innumerable accusations and reports regarding myself made to the countess by supposed friends caused the greatest distress. But, unlike most persons, she has behaved as a true, noble-hearted woman in hearing the other side of the accusations.

"I trust I may be able to repair the past by devoting my life, heart and soul to her.

"Reports regarding any other marriage I am supposed to have contracted are utterly false and without foundation, as also are innumerable others, such as that I am supposed to have been in league with others in a conspiracy to injure her. This is a base falsehood.

"It is the wish of my wife that I am to be addressed by the name of Archibald Stuart."

The statements that the Countess ignores include, among others, that there were nine previous convictions against her hero. The Countess said to the Post-Dispatch correspondent:

"I wish you to make it clear that I do not lose my title by marriage."

The Post-Dispatch correspondent remarked that she was one in a thousand to overlook the wrong done her. Her reply was:

"Yes, it is true, I have been wronged, but we loved each other. He (the husband) and I have much to forgive, but I now freely forgive him everything and thereby give him a chance to start afresh and give evidence of his love toward me."

The Countess added that she was to be joined by her husband at her home at Maidenhead today.

In thus becoming reconciled to her plebian love, the Countess has realized the heroine of Bulwer Lytton's romantic play, "The Lady of Lyons."

WHIPPED A MINISTER.

Women Compel His Consent to His Daughter's Marriage.

TOLEDO, O., May 18.—Rev. Martin Harris, a Baptist preacher in the Metamora district was whipped with mule whips until he consented to the marriage of his daughter to Harvey Carter. Rev. Mr. Harris is a widower and told young Carter it was a daughter's place to care for her father, and refused to consent.

Carter's two elder sisters met the preacher and demanded that he give his consent. He refuse and they plied the lash until he cried r mercy and consented. The wedding w take place early in August.

WOULD STOP SALE OF TOY PISTOLS

Deaths From Tetanus, Caused by Cartridge Wounds, Bring Declaration From Coroner's Jury.

The sale of toy blank cartridge pistols, such as have been the immediate cause of so many deaths from tetanus, ought to be prohibited in the opinion of the jury that investigated the death of Morris Finkelstein, Jr.

The Finkelstein boy died of tetanus at the City Hospital last Friday, the result of a Fourth of July blank cartridge wound. He was 11 years old and lived at 923 North Fourteenth street.

Finkelstein is the fifth victim of tetanus from blank cartridge wounds since July 4. A few days ago in Philadelphia legal pressure was brought to bear against shopkeepers who sold the death-dealing toy pistols. Following out this idea, the St. Louis coroner's jury in its verdict recommended the passage of a law prohibiting the sale of such weapons.

The jury's recommendation is as follows: "In view of the many cases of death due to tetanus following wounds from the explosion of blank cartridge pistols, we recommend that a stringent law be passed prohibiting the sale of such weapons under severe penalty."

"Didn't they start at once on their wedding journey?"

"No. There was a mistake about the railway tickets."

"What sort of a mistake?"

"Why, it seems that her father didn't understand that the bridegroom expected him to pay for them."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

EASTERN BOYS TOO SOFT FOR WORK IN BURNING KANSAS WHEAT FIELDS

Director of Wheat Employment Bureau Wants No More Students or Clerks to Come West—Needs Hardy Hands Accustomed to the Strain.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

TOPEKA, Kan., July 18.—T. B. Gerow, director of the Kansas wheat employment bureau, today received the following letter from C. H. Brass, field secretary of the Ness County Farmers' Association:

"It is no use to send eastern boys, students, clerks, etc., to the harvest fields of the West. They can't stand the work. Oppressive heat and heavy grain knock them out. Some of them have been very ill. They are a discouraged lot and regret that they came.

"Many did not bring enough money to take them home. Those who have relatives or friends to draw on are wiring for help. They have had their experience, and are ready to quit. We are trying to find light jobs for the soft-handed so that those who have no resources will be able in a short time to pay their fare back home.

"Many easterners with money quit the harvest fields after the first day. They are paying board and will rest in the shade till the harvest is over, when they will return to their eastern homes with stories of their prowess in the Kansas wheat fields."

This is fair sample of the letters Director C w is receiving from the wheat belt. A lority of the harvest hands from the Ea are clerks and students out to see the untry and for a time they found work in abundance and tackled it with a will, but now, after less than a week of work, most of them are ready to confess that they are "all in." The whole business of importing harvest hands from eastern cities is regarded as a joke. The humor of the situation appeals to the eastern young men and they enjoy the joking they receive because of their failure to follow the harvest pace set by the farmers' daughters.

Yale Freshman Made a Record.

C. W. Law, whose father is a coal mine operator at Scranton, Pa., made a record in Ellis County. He began pitching wheat at 7 a. m. with a number of experienced hands and kept up his end until 6 p. m., stopping only 30 minutes for lunch.

"When night came," said Law, telling of his experience, "I had a fierce appetite and put away a lot of food, but this morning I was a wreck. My hands were blistered and every muscle in my body was stiff and swollen and it was with difficulty that I could move. I had to lay off today for rest, but I shall tackle the job again. INDEPENDENCE DAY'S AWFUL DEATH LIST

Fifty-Two Persons Were Slain Outright and 167 Have Died of Lockjaw.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

Chicago, Ill., July 18.—A man who has been busy gathering statistics of Fourth of July fatalities in the Middle West finds that, while only 52 persons were killed, 167 have since died from lockjaw caused by slight wounds received on Independence Day.

The injured list foots up 4000.

Almost all are boys between the ages of 6 and 16 years.

Up to last night 41 deaths from lockjaw alone had taken place in Pennsylvania.

Henry Watterson's charge that we killed 500 persons a year to make a holiday would not appear a startling exaggeration.

PARIS IS SHOCKED.

Rich Baron Is Arrested and His Companions Flee.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

PARIS, July 18.—Paris has been shocked this week by a scandal recalling the Oscar Wilde episodes and erotic poetry.

Baron Aldersward, rich, young, handsome and about to be married, had his apartment on Avenue de Friedland fitted up like a chapel, where, it is averred, that under cover of religious rites atrocious improprieties were practiced. The Paris papers are devoting columns to the case. The baron has been arrested and many of his associates have fled.

"SHE HAS NERVE" SAYS SANTOS DUMONT

Tells the Post-Dispatch How Miss De Costa Learned to Navigate the Air.

AT WORK ON AIRSHIP FOR 12

His Sailing Over Longchamps at the Grand Military Review Brought Him the Greatest Cheering.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

PARIS, July 18.—"I think I have demonstrated pretty thoroughly what I can do with my No. 9 airship," said Santos Dumont today to the Post-Dispatch correspondent. "Now I am going to work on my mammoth balloon, the one big enough to carry 12 persons, and shall have it in the balloon shed next week. From then onward my experiments ought to have the greatest value and if people will go up with me ballooning will get a popular impetus."

"How about your understudy and pupil, Miss Ada De Costa?" the Post-Dispatch correspondent asked.

How Miss De Costa Learned Sky-Sailing.

"Oh, she has sailed for her home in New York," answered Santos. "What nerve that girl had. A Cuban by birth, 19 years of age and beautiful, she came to the aerodrome one day with her mother. I put her in a balloon basket and drew her around the shed, showing how the apparatus worked. Later we tried a modest ascent in the field about the shed. After a week of trials I allowed her to go the Bagatelle in the Bois de Boulogne, directing the balloon herself. I had balanced it so she could not rise higher than 100 feet and had drag ropes trailing, though she had full management of the balloon and steering apparatus.

Though accustomed to public plaudits, Santos had the ovation of his life this week when he sailed over Longchamps during the military review July 14, France's Independence Day.

At the same time the adventure was followed by a new experience for the Brazilian aeronaut, for the next day, for the first time in his career, disapprobation was voiced in the press. The Journal des Debats, the most conservative daily newspaper in Paris, said:

"Though he is king of the air, Mr. Santos-Dumont highly appreciates the mortals of mere earth, and at the review his frail balloon must have shivered in vibrating to the sounds acclaiming him. From the lofty position the little Brazilian evidently took himself for Jupiter. Consequently it did not occur to him that he was indiscreet in disarranging by his sudden arrival a ceremony to which he had not been invited.

"The gods are heedless of such details. It was a matter of indifference to him if he threw out ballast on the troops below or knocked off their helmets with his guide rope.

Thundered With Two Revolvers.

"Then recalling that Jupiter always thundered, and wishing to carry out the similitude, he began firing revolvers with both hands. How contented he looked, perched on high and acclaimed by thousands! If his vanity was gratified, what cared he if the nation's review was disturbed?

But Gen. Andre (France's minister of war) was not so pleased. How small he looked on his white horse compared with Santos in his balloon.

Santos himself called the Post-Dispatch correspondent's attention to the article, which did not seem to annoy him, for he commented with a smile: "It is true that I was not invited, but the papers had been saying for three months that I would be there, and that other balloons would be present. So I felt obliged to go."

Santos took the Post-Dispatch correspondent to his bedroom to explode the popular notion that he uses small balloons for pillows. The correspondent can testify that his pillows are "like those of ordinary mortals."

PRACTICAL JOKE KILLED HER

Policeman Told Woman He Had Warrant for Son, and Excitement Proved Fatal.

CLEVELAND, O., July 18.—The death of Mrs. Betcha Hanna, an aged woman, last night, is attributed by her children to excitement caused by a practical joke.

On Thursday morning a policeman went to her home before daylight and inquired for her son. The officer said he had a paper for Hanna. It was only a joking notice of the arrival in the city of a delegation of visiting officials from Detroit.

Mrs. Hanna asked what the paper was, but the officer refused to tell her. Mrs. Hanna was alarmed, not knowing what the officer wanted of her son and after the policeman's departure, she became ill. Yesterday, her ilness took a serious turn, and at night she died.

She was a pioneer resident of the city and had lived in the dwelling where she died, for the greater part of her life.

DYNAMITE MAGAZINE EXPLODES

Two Killed, Sixteen Injured and Over Hundred Others Shocked by the Concussion.

ROANOKE, Va., July 18.—By the explosion of a large quantity of dynamite and blasting powder stored in a magazine near Pearishburg, Giles County, this afternoon, two men were killed outright, 16 were more or less injured and about 100 others severely shocked.

Westbound passenger train No. 1, on the main line of the Norfolk & Western, was going at full speed past the magazine, which was located 200 yards from the tracks, when the explosion occurred. The windows of the train were broken and the coaches were in other ways damaged.

Not a single person on the train escaped injury or shock.

The dead:

JAMES PHILLIPS, Blair, Va.

GEORGE NOEL, Elliston, Va.

Phillips an Noel were laborers and their mangled bodies were found near the wrecked magazine.

A special train with surgeons on board conveyed the wounded to Bluefield, where they were placed in a hospital. It is not known what caused the explosion.

POPE HAS NO CANCER.

ROME, July 18.—A representative of the Associated Press having asked Dr. Rossoni if it was true that the Pape has cancer of the pleura and that mortification had set in, he answered with the following laconic but emphatic written statement:

"EUGENIO ROSSONI."

COMET LOOKS LIKE LACE HANDKERCHIEF

To Rose Marion It Seems That One Corner, Knotted, Makes the Star and the Other Corner, Trailing, Makes the Tail.

BY ROSE MARION.

Like a thin lace handkerchief, with one corner knotted and the other trailing behind—that's the way the new comet looks.

I saw it last night just at 9 o'clock, not so far away from the zenith.

Looking for comets is a neck-breaking amusement. While the sky was still red with the sunset last evening I began to watch for the comet.

The sky paled, twilight came, but it was still too light to see even bright stars.

Time wouldn't go. Darkness seemed to be on a late train. I went indoors and studied star maps and ecliptics and talked about other worlds until I didn't know whether I lived on one of the rings of Saturn or on the dark looking planet of Mercury.

Darkness came at last, and the stars began taking squints at us to see if we were alseep or comet-watching.

We searched the heavens—the man who knows about stars, his wife and I. The man was busy locating Cygni—really, I think that constellation owes something to the comet for causing it to receive so much free advertising, folks'll be thinking it's a summer resort next.

I was trying to get my eyes used to the darkness and the stars when the man's wife said: "This looks like a comet."

Her husband didn't listen. He went on saying, "Now, there's Alpha Cygni," as he pointed to a bright star at the head of the cross formed by the stars of the constellation. I looked at Alpha Cygni.

His Wife Was Stellar Columbus.

But my eyes sneaked off and looked upward a bit. I saw the lace handkerchief arrangement. It didn't look like stars. It was too pronounced to be part of the Milky Way.

"Wonder what's this off in there?" I asked, pointing to the splotch of light.

"That's the comet," shouted the man who knows stars, after looking at it for an instant. It was the same object his wife had discovered a few minutes before.

I wanted to bow to the comet, or at least wave my hand.

It's comet No. 1 in my experience. It wasn't exactly what I expected. When I was a little girl my pictures of a comet consisted of a six-pointed star with a thin tail, on the order of a streak of lightning.

Nothing starry looking about this one. Not a point to be seen, and as for a tail you might as well call it an elongated fan.

The man who knows stars began to get his telescope ready at once. He pointed it directly at the comet. It must be hard to be a comet, and always having folks stare and point at you. Wonder if the inhabitants on the other planets are just as inquisitive as we are?

Half way down in the sky the Big Dipper was shining brightly. Its pointers, like light posts, showed the position of the North Star.

Had any one been able to walk straight across the sky from the North Star to bright Vega of the constellation Lyra, he could have touched the comet on his way. It was slightly down from a line that would connect those two stars from our point of vision.

Comets Stand Pat Under Gaze.

The comet had traveled some distance away from Cygni. With Vega and Alpha Cygni it formed a pretty sky triangle, itself serving as the apex. The base of the triangle was set in the center by one of the stars that form the arms of the cross of Cygni.

Little stars were scattered about in the neighborhood.

The man that knows stars arranged his telescope and looked at the comet. He confirmed his previous identification and fixed the glass that I might look.

Comets stand pat under fire. They don't dodge opera glasses or telescopes. Mr. Borelli's comet looked as pretty as it could in its star setting. Once I fancied that I could see a star through its meshy tail, but I'll not testify positively to that. It makes one a bit fanciful to watch heavenly things long.

It looked larger, of course, through the glass. In fact, it seemed to cover the whole glass. The man who knows stars said it looked as large as the moon.

It may have two tails, but I couldn't distinguish them. I was glad enough to know that I was right when I concluded that its head was pointed toward the northwestern horizon.

It seemed as bright as a star of the third magnitude. Compared to Vega it was pale.

This paleness was more noticeable through the telescope than with the naked eye. The comet through the glass reminded me of a big piece of bread and a little bit of butter. Supposing, of course, that the sky is the bread and the comet the butter, spread as thinly as possible.

As we watched the comet it seemed to move. The man who knows stars says that it will be well on its way Friday night. It will be nearer, apparently, to the North Star. It was not nearly half-way between Vega and the North Star Thursday.

Personally I think Mr. Borelli's comet is a nice comet. It arranges that there shall be a clear sky the first night of its appearance in St. Louis. Could you ask more?

NO DRUNKARDS CAN ROAM ABOUT BOSTON

Arrests Made by Wholesale Under the New Police Regulations.

HAS A WHOLESOME EFFECT

BOSTON, July 18.—It looks as if Boston would add another to her many claims to distinction—that of being a city where drunken men and women are not seen.

This is due to the efforts of the new chairman of the police board, William H. H. Emmons, who has announced that he will absolutely rid the streets of intoxicated persons.

These efforts have already gone to such a point that it is commonly said that a man whose breath smells of liquor is liable to be lugged off to a cell. It is a fact that dozens of men have recently been arrested who were apparently only very slightly intoxicated.

Soon after Mr. Emmons took office on May 1 he announced that thereafter the police would arrest every person who was in the slightest apparent degree under the influence of liquor. Mr. Emmons had for years been a judge in the East Boston police court, and he had an idea that by being more severe with the offenders he could reform them to some extent.

There was another important reason for his action. It had become impossible for sober people who live in the no-license suburbs of Cambridge, Shelsea, Somerville, Brookline, etc., to get home late Saturday nights without riding in cars or trains with gangs of drunken and boisterous men.

The first Saturday night after the new order of Mr. Emmons went into effect the policeman evidently thought he did not mean it, for they arrested only the normal number of drunks, about fifty.

Monday Mr. Emmons called all the captains to headquarters and told them they must order their men to obey the new edict more strictly. The next Saturday night 133 men and women werearrested.

This did not satisfy the chairman, for he had spent Saturday evening about the city and had seen many men who, in his opinion, should have been put in cells. He again reprimanded the captains and patrolmen, and the following Saturday the arrests numbered 265.

This was more satisfactory to Mr. Emmons, and he told the police to keep up the good work, at the same time predicting that the arrests the next Saturday would be considerable fewer. This prediction was based on the belief that the men who were in the habit of getting drunk, especially on Saturday night, would fear arrest, and at least keep off the streets.

His prediction was well founded, for the arrests the next Saturday were only 199. A week later they were 138, and it began to look as if the crusade against drunks on the streets was really a most valuable temperance measure, although Mr. Emmons disavows any temperance motive in his action.

The following Saturday, however, the total of arrests jumped to 236, but as it was a holiday (July 4) this may have explained the increase.

The judges of the police court have given Mr. Emmons only partial support in his crusade, about 60 per cent of the drunks being released, but the chairman says he does not care if the court discharges every one of them; he will keep on arresting them.

An interesting fact in connection with the crusade is that about half the men arrested for intoxication under the new orders are residents of the no-license towns and cities about Boston. Incidentally, it has become possible for a woman to get home to Cambridge or any other suburb at midnight without being insulted or frightened by some drunken man.

TROLLEY TRIP TO BARRACKS.

Daughters of Revolution Had Delightful Outing Last Night.

LIVING WOMAN IS DECLARED DEAD

Pennsylvania Supreme Court So Rules in Accordance With a Law Recently Passed.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 18.—Pittsburg lawyers are interested in a decision handed down by the supreme court of Pennsylvania this week, in which a woman, though alive, is declared legally dead. The decision reverses the opinion of the superior court and the common pleas court of Berks County, which declared an act of 1885 unconstitutional. A number of similar cases have been pending.

The litigation was started in Reading, Pa., when the Berks County orphans' court, under the act of 1885, declared that Mrs. Margaret Cunnius of Reading, who in 1888 had disappeared and, being never heard of afterward, was legally dead. This was done in 1897. She had a dower interest in some property and the money was paid to the administrators.

In 1889 intelligence came from San Francisco that the woman was alive and living there. She employed Attorney Caleb J. Bieber of Reading to recover her dower interest. Suit was brought and Judge G. A. Endlich decided that the woman was alive and entitled to her dower. The case was appealed and the superior court sustained Judge Endlich. Again the defendant appealed and this time was sustained by the supreme court. The case attracted widespread attention in this and other states, because of the legal principle involved—the right of courts to deprive persons of their property.

Under the act of 1885, after an absence of seven years without any intelligence being received of a missing person, the courts may appoint an administrator of the missing person's estate, and the person be adjudged legally dead. The common pleas and the superior courts, in deciding that the woman was alive held that the act of 1885 was in opposition to the fourteenth amendment of the United States, and therefore void.

Since the act of 1885 has been in force several adjudications have been made under it in western Pennsylvania. Under the ruling of the supreme court these proceedings can be revoked by the parties interested through due process of law.

KILLED BY TERMINAL TRAIN.

Aged Man Crushed, Legs Cut Off and Skull Fractured.

Seven cars of a Terminal switch train passed over the body of Fred Brinkmeyer, 60 years old, who lives at 824 Buchanan street, last night.

The train backed toward Brinkmeyer, who was walking on the tracks near Hall and Buchanan streets and he stepped directly in front of the moving cars. Conductor Henry Young of 2913 North Eleventh street heard his cries and gave the signal to stop to Engineer Thomas Cummings. When B[illegible]nkmeyer was picked up he was dead. [illegible]th legs were severed and his skull was [illegible]actured. The body was taken to the M[illegible]ue.

FATAL FAMILY ROW AT SOUTH M'ALESTER

One Woman Killed and Husband of Her Slayer Seriously Wounded.

SOUTH McALESTER, I. T., July 18.—As a result of a fight between two men and their wives at Hartshorne Saturday evening Mrs. George Hart is dead and C. W. Cole is lying fatally wounded at All Saints' Hospital here, and George Hart and Mrs. C. W. Cole are in the federal jail, where they were lodged to await the termination of the injuries of their respective spouses.

It is claimed that Mrs. Hart tried to whip Mrs. Cole on the street because of alleged slanders she had circulated about her. Mrs. Cole, who had started for a journey and had her grip with her, opened it and drew a pistol, shooting her assailant. The trouble brought the husbands of the women to the scene, and a general fight with pistols followed, with the result mentioned.

Hart and Cole are miners and both they and their wives have been on very intimate terms until a few days ago. Hart was taken from the jail this afternoon to the hospital to witness an operation on his wife. She died a few minutes after the completion of the operation.

PARIS ON THE PIKE.

World's Fair Grants Concession on Anniversary of Bastile's Fall.

On July 14, the day which all France, and especially Paris, celebrates as a national holiday to commemorate the fall of the Bastile, the concession for a "Paris" on the Pike at the World's Fair was made to Albert Bare.

The name of the exhibition, which is capitalized at $75,000, has not yet been definitely decided upon. It will be called "Glimpses of Paris" or the "Parisian Dream City."

The facade is to be a reproduction of the Grand Opera, with the famous grand staircase. Inside there will be a cafe with Parisian singers and dancers. An elaborate garden will fill the interior court, where statuary and paintings will add to the beauty of the general effect. A troop of 50 ballet girls from Paris will give local color to the exhibit.

AS THE SEWING
SEAMED,

JOHN E. KNOTT

She seemed rather gay,
For ruffling and felling and tucking were play.
Said, "Work I have found,
P.-D. Want Ads I tried,"
And smiling, contented, her needles
she plied.

Seamstresses seeking employment are sure of satisfactory results through the great help medium—the Sunday Post-Dispatch—the home paper of St. Louis.

You write the want ad,
The druggist will phone it,
The P.-D. will print it,
A million will read it.

DR. FITZPORTER, 1516 Chestnut st., treats female complaints and chronic diseases; private hospital; 30 years' experience; hours, 9-12 a. m., 2-5 and 7-9 p. m.

DOCTOR DENNIS 2639 Washington av., regular licensed physician, expert specialist in all female troubles and delicate diseases of women; First-class, private, refined and respectable sanitarium for ladies before and during confinement. I employ trained nurses only, and give all my patients my personal care and attention. Ladies, this is positively the only place where you can enjoy the luxuries of an elegant private sanitarium and yet have every comfort of home. I make special arrangements for out-of-town patients, and call for them at the boats or station. Adoption if desired. My home is absolutely private and affords perfect secrecy and seclusion. Ladies, when in need of a friend and first-class physician and surgeon, come to me. I have 20 years' experience and have made your ills a life study. A great many of you have been injured for life by trusting yourself into the hands of unscrupulous women who advertise themselves as "licensed physicians" in order to deceive the public. If you will look up the records of the Board of Health you will find that they are midwives only. My license as "physician" is recorded on page 9 in book 1. If you have been treated elsewhere without success come to me and I will take your case with a full guarantee.

SQUARE PIANO SALE.

WE NEED THE MONEY AND ALSO THE ROOM THAT THEY TAKE UP, and are going to close out this week every square piano in the house if low prices and easy terms can do it. On account of a great many rented pianos being sent back for storage during the summer we must get rid of our square pianos to make room and as we have a large number, some in very fine condition, and all the best standard makes, this is an opportunity to get a piano for practice at a very low price. Any of these pianos can be turned back and the amount paid allowed on an upright piano whenever you wish. We have some pianos in this lot which will go as low as $12, other better ones for $25 and upwards. Bradbury Piano Warerooms, F. G. Smith, Mfr., 1012 Olive st., A. E. Whitaker Mgr.

38th Year In St. Louis

PROF. W. J. MARTIN,
THE OCCULT WONDER

PERMANENTLY LOCATED In His Own Home,

2620 WASHINGTON AV.

"TRUTHFUL IN HIS PREDICTIONS, RELIABLE IN HIS ADVICE."
No matter what troubles you may have with yourself or others, come and he will guide you. He advises you with a certainty higher than human power.

PROF. MARTIN IS RECOGNIZED BY THE PRESS.

Medical fraternity and scientists generally as the foremost medium in the country, and should not be classed with card readers, fortune tellers, palmists, astrologers and similar humbugs.

Prof. Martin, the brilliant star of his profession, acknowledged by the press and public of two continents as the most remarkable medium and clairvoyant, is permanently located in St. Louis, and may be consulted from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. daily and Sunday. Prof. Martin's past record and strictly honorable dealings are sufficient guarantee for his future work, and have won him the good will of the press and people.

HONEST, FEARLESS AND CAPABLE.

He is the foremost medium of the day. He fully understands the responsible position he is placed in by the remarkable gift he is endowed with, and he will try his best to help those who need help, and advise those who need advice, and do all in his power to show all his honest callers plainly and in forcible language how to gain happiness and prosperity.

HIS REVELATIONS ARE MOST WONDERFUL and acknowledged to be of the highest order, not made to satisfy idle curiosity only, but intended to give those who seek the truth a permanent benefit. He does not cater to the superstition of the ignorant, credulous people. If you are in doubt that he can and will perform all he claims, feel yourself invited to call, and he will give you a more substantial proof of his marvelous power than you have ever before received from mortal.

If marriage, sickness, deaths, changes, travels, divorces, separations, law suits, business transactions, wills, deeds, mortgages, lost or absent friends interest you; if you desire to be more successful; if you desire to have your domestic troubles removed, your lost love returned, your bitterest enemies converted into stanch friends—in a word, whatever may be your troubles, suspicions or desires,

CALL ON THIS GIFTED MAN

And he will send you away happier, wiser and bolder than before.

ALLEGED SLAYER'S EYES HIS NEMESIS

Miss Thomasch Identifies a Negro as Charles W. Roxbury's Slayer Through Them.

PICKS HIM FROM EIGHT MEN

Pretty Manicurist, Who Was With Victim When He Was Slain, Saw Only Slayer's Eyes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Miss Lillian Thomasch, a pretty manicurist, picked Charles Jackson, a negro, out of a line of eight men, white and black, this afternoon and positively identified him as the man who struck down Charles W. Roxbury in the Bronx eight days ago, while she was walking with him.

It was not at first Inspector Titus' intention to submit Jackson for identification by Miss Tomasch today, but, as the prisoner was being led from the station house several photographers took snapshots of him.

Fearing that Miss Thomasch might see reproductions of these in the papers and threby lessen the value of her testimony, Inspector Titus ordered the prisoner to be brought back and then sent for Miss Thomasch.

The inspector secured four negroes and stood them in line with four of his plain-clothes men, and Miss Thomasch, accompanied by her brother, was brought in.

"Is there a man in that line who resembles the one that struck Mr. Roxbury?" asked the inspector of the young woman.

Miss Thomasch stepped forward and scrutinized the features of the three men nearest her without showing any signs of recognition. Jackson was the fourth man. When the young woman looked at him she stepped forward until within a few feet of the prisoner and then gave a little jump back.

"That is the man I saw that night," she said firmly.

"Are you sure?" asked the inspector and a half dozen others in the room.

"Yes," said the young woman. "Go up to the man you identify and touch him," said the inspector.

Put Her Finger on Man She Accused.

Miss Thomasch, with some show of repugnance, walked up to Jackson and placed her finger on his right shoulder. Not a muscle in the negro's face moved.

Miss Thomasch was led away by her brother, slightly overcome by the ordeal. The prisoner was then taken to the Tombs.

Inspector Titus has worked up what appears to be a strong case. The watch stolen from Roxbury was pawned by Jackson. He admits it, and the pawn ticket was found in the possession of the woman who passes as his wife.

The pigskin card case in which Roxbury carried his money was found in Jackson's home. And a motive for the crime is revealed by the woman.

According to her statement, the rent was due and the installment had not been paid on the furniture. Everything of value had been pawned. There was no money in the house. On July 10, the landlord notified Jackson that he would be dispossessed unless the rent was paid in 24 hours. On the same day, the furniture collector announced that, unless back payments were made, the stuff would be removed.

Jackson left his home that afternoon at 5 o'clock. He told the woman that he would try to "find" some money. She says that he got back at 10 o'clock at night. He had a gold watch and $10 which he said he had "found."

The next day, the gold watch was pawned for $15 and, through this, Jackson was traced by clever detective work. The most conspicuous feature of Jackson's appearance is his eyes, which show an unusual amount of white.

Miss Thomasch, who was with Roxbury when he was attacked, only saw the gleaming eyes, and so overshadowing were they that she could not even realize that the assailant was a negro.

Circumstances of the Murder.

The highwayman who robbed Roxbury while he was with Miss Thomasch, brutally assaulted his victim with a section of a pickaxe handle and robbed him of his gold watch and a wallet containing papers and two $5 bills.

Miss Thomasch, greatly frightened, ran home, and Roxbury, dazed and weakened by loss of blood, wandered to his home, a mile and half away, and died in a few hours without being able to tell how he was assaulted.

Jackson had a voluble explanation of how he came into possession of the watch. He had been employed, he said, by the Barnum & Bailey circus and was with it at Danbury, Conn., two days before. After the performance, he said, he found the watch under the dollar seats.

He said he knew nothing about the murder until he heard somebody talking about it in a barber shop last Sunday. He denied that he had ever been in the Borough of the Bronx or knew anything about that section of the city.

In an hour he had tangled and contradicted himself so thoroughly that the detectives were morally certain they had the right man.

He explained the scratches on his face by saying that his wife had opened a door just as he was about to enter and that the door struck his face.

The wife said that he had been thrown down while trying to stop a runaway horse. Jackson said he found the pigskin purse on a Tenth avenue car three weeks ago and gave it to his wife. The wife says he gave it to her last Monday.

The woman was detained as a witness, and it is not unlikely that a charge of assisting Jackson in the murder of Roxbury will be made against her later on.

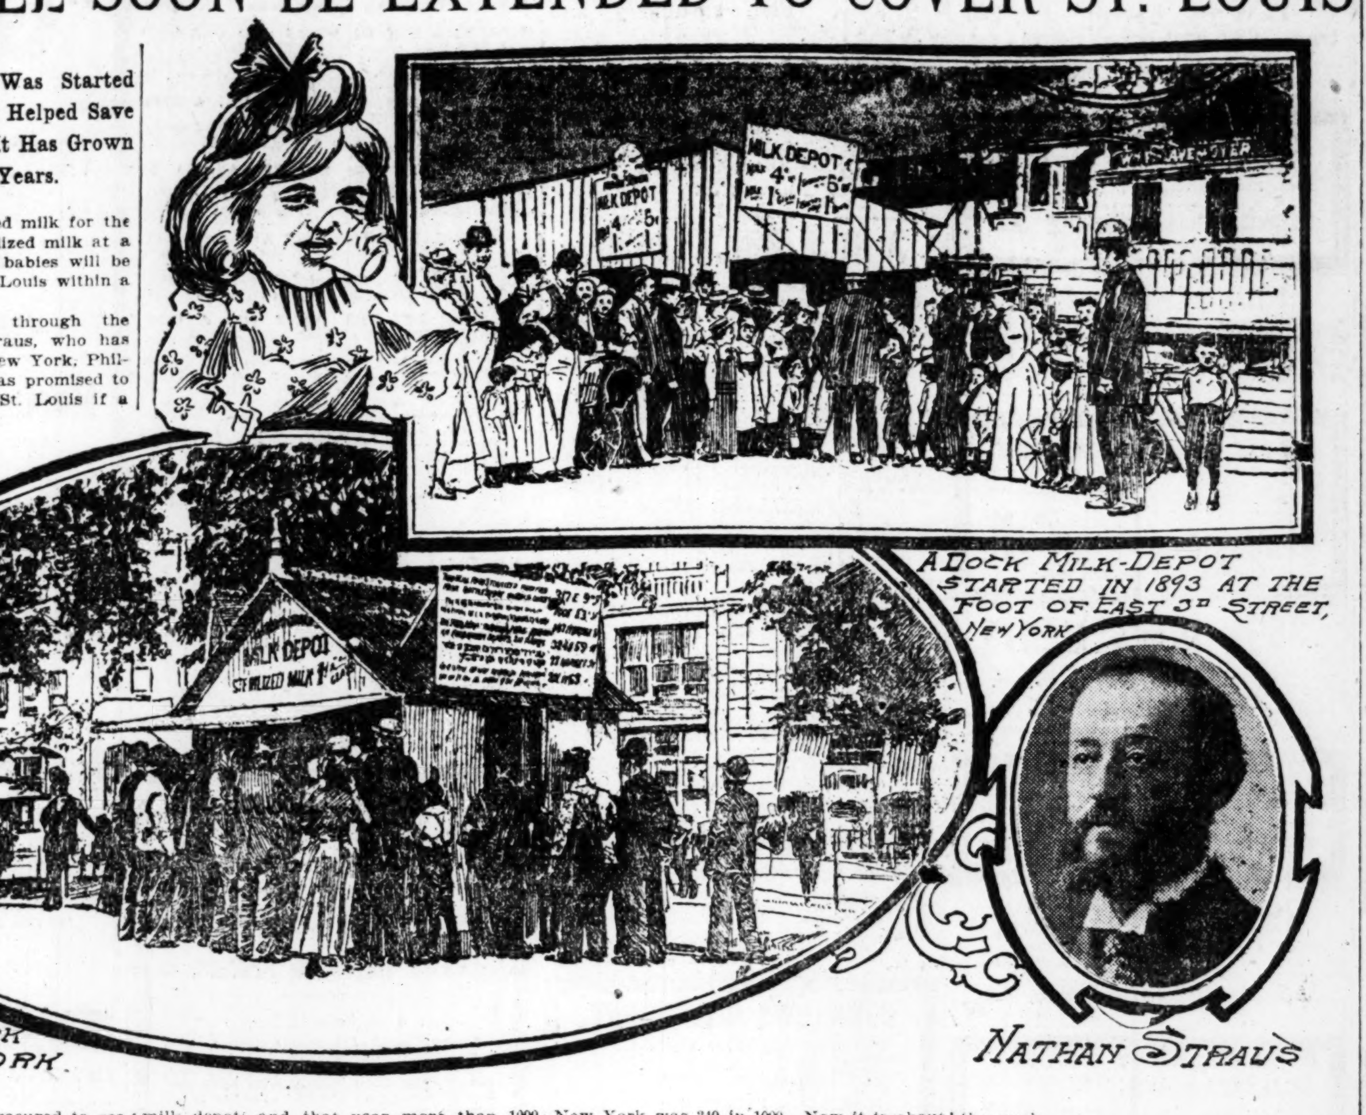
NATHAN STRAUS' STERILIZED MILK CHARITY WILL SOON BE EXTENDED TO COVER ST. LOUIS

How the Philanthropy Was Started in New York, How It Helped Save the Babies and How It Has Grown During the Past Ten Years.

Free Pateurized or sterilized milk for the babies of the poor and sterilized milk at a small price for all kinds of babies will be an accomplished fact in St. Louis within a short time.

It will be made possible through the philanthropy of Nathan Straus, who has founded such a charity in New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. He has promised to erect a sterilizing plant in St. Louis if a suitable organization can be secured to see to the free distribution. That such an organization will be found there is no doubt.



A DOCK MILK-DEPOT STARTED IN 1893 AT THE FOOT OF EAST 3rd STREET, NEW YORK

NATHAN STRAUS

The Straus sterilized milk charity is looked upon in New York as one of the most valuable philanthropies in all that great city. It has been in operation there since 1893 and last year distributed 1,200,000 bottles of sterilized milk. This year the amount will be still greater, as the number of booths where it may be obtained is greater.

Last year there were 15 booths in New York. This year two more booths were added. In these booths, or depots as some of the larger are called, Pasteurized milk may be obtained at 1 cent a bottle or glass, or free on the prescription of a physician, if one does not possess a cent.

In the preparation and distribution of this milk in New York the greatest care is taken to secure not only the best quality of milk, but the utmost care is exercised in seeing that the milk is kept intact from any contamination after it is sterilized. To this end the milk distributed by the Straus charity in New York is bought on farms in New York state, where there are healthy herds of common grade cows, and averages 15 per cent cream. Upon its arrival in the city it is taken to the great sterilizing laboratory at 151 Avenue C and placed in ice boxes, where it is kept until sterilized.

After it has been cleaned by a separator it is put in 16-ounce bottle and placed in the sterilizing apparatus. This consists of a copper boiler with a set of cylinders, in which the bottles stand in water heated to the boiling point.

The bottles remaining in this boiling water for 30 minutes, the heat necessary for sterilization being 167 degrees Fahrenheit. When the heat has been turned off the cylinders are placed in a tank of running cold water and the milk cooled quickly, to prevent it from souring. The bottles are then placed in ice water, where they remain until taken to the booths, where they are placed in an ice chest.

The new milk booths are models of sanitary construction. The two new ones are in Central Park and Tompkins Square. They are 13x19 feet in diameter and are built of wood on brick foundations. The principal feature of the booths, however, is their sanitary arrangement. The interior is composed of metal, glazed tiles, concrete and marble, so that they may be cleaned like a dish. In the concrete floor of each is a drain so the walls and furniture may be washed daily with steam and hot water from a hose, in order that the propagation of germs and fermentation from spilled milk will be impossible. The chief consideration in designing the buildings was absolute cleanliness.

In front of each building is a porch to protect the public from the weather. The milk is served over a marble counter, and no one save the attendants are allowed in the booths. Back of the counters are the ice boxes in which the milk is stored, and beneath each counter are sinks for washing the bottles and glasses. The sinks are of porcelain and every condition is the most sanitary possible.

Milk, as a beverage, is sold for 1 cent a glass and modified milk, as the infant foods are called, are distributed free to those who cannot afford to pay, on a deposit of 3 or 2 cents a bottle, according to size, which is refunded on return of the bottle.

Permanent Charity. Intends It for

This distribution is an individual charity carried on at the sole expense of Mr. Straus, under his own management. It is his intention that the work shall be perpetuated after his death. His intention was first directed to it while he was president of the New York health department, by the enormous death rate of children (under 5 years of age, every summer, due to cholera infantum and other stomach and bowel troubles. He found that during the three years from 1889 to 1892, inclusive, there were 135,602 births recorded, and the death rate of children under 5 years of age was 52,213. From 15 to 18 per cent of these deaths occurred in the period between the first week in July and the last week in August. These deaths were nearly all traceable to a cause associated with the poisons bred in cow's milk. He began to consult with physicians and to experiment with milk in an endeavor to [illegible] less harmful [illegible]

In [illegible] milk depot and that year more than 1000 babies were fed on pasteurized and modified milk. Most of the children were suffering from cholera infantum and their recovery under the new milk diet was immediate and amazing. The people were quick to realize the superiority of the sterilized milk, which was furnished at a lower price than they had been paying for adulterated and tainted milk. Since then the work has grown steadily.

With a keen appreciation of the good done by the sterilized laboratory and depots, the cities of Philadelphia and Chicago began making investigation, with the result that Mr. Straus has presented to these cities the apparatus necessary for the establishing of plants.

City Chemist Walter Bernays of St. Louis, seeing what Mr. Straus had done for other cities, wrote to that gentleman asking what he would be willing to do toward helping St. Louis. Immediately the reply came back that he would do the same for St. Louis that he had done for the other cities if a proper organization could be secured to look after its management. That such an organization will easily be found there is no doubt. In discussing the matter Mr. Bernays said:

Effect of Bad Milk in St. Louis.

"The want of pure milk in the heated term causes the death of many infants. In St. Louis at present there are absolutely no facilities for securing good milk for the poorer classes, and if Mr. Strauss' offer can be taken advantage of I have no doubt that many lives will be saved.

"In 1900 in this city there were 402 deaths of infants from bowel diseases, caused by the lack of pure milk; 221 of these were in the summer time. In cities where pasteurized milk can be secured at a reasonable price the infant fatalities have been reduced one-third, and there is no reason to believe that the same could not be the case in St. Louis."

It is more than 10 years now since Mr. Straus started the work for which he has been so highly praised by medical men and others. In 1893 the output was 30,000 bottles. The following year, the charity being better known, 10 times as many bottles were supplied, the output being over 300,000. The next year the output doubled and reached a total of 600,000 bottles, while last year no less than 1,200,000 bottles of milk were supplied, besides an enormous quantity sold in glasses on the premises.

It is a noteworthy fact that since Mr. Straus started his work the death rate among the infant population of the tenement districts has steadily decreased. Ten years ago the mortality among children in New York was 240 in 1000. Now it is about 158. For the four hot months, when sickness among the poorer classes is much greater, the death rate has fallen from 320 in 1000 to 195. Medical authorities ascribe this decrease partly to the efforts of Mr. Straus and similar workers for the benefit of the poor and to the improved conditions in which the tenement dwellers live, brought about at least in part by the work of the Tenement House Commission.

There are over 150 persons working for the Straus milk charity during the summer every year. Mr. Straus' representatives say he has never stopped to count the cost of the work.

While the distribution of the sterilized milk is a charity, Mr. Straus has so conducted it that those who wish to reap the benefit of the work could do so without losing their self-respect. He has put the price of his milk so low that it is only occasionally that the persons desiring it, have not the money to buy. To these the physicians' prescription takes away the necessity of asking, as every prescription is filled without comment.

Just how the distribution will be made in St. Louis and what price will be charged for milk are details to be worked out after the laboratory shall have been obtained.

COCKRAN'S SPEECH TO BE REPRINTED

British Liberal Federation Will Use It as a Free Trade Campaign Document.

(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

LONDON, July 18.—Bourke Cockran's speech at the banquet given in his honor in the National Liberal Club, when Earl Carrington was in the chair, is voted by those who heard it to be the best, most convincing argument for free trade they ever heard.

The attacks on Mr. Cockran in the Evening News for his sympathy with Irish home-rule and his advocacy of the Boer cause fell flat and he was most enthusiastically received, the company cheering nearly two minutes when he finished.

His speech is to be printed in pamphlet form by the National Liberal Federation and circulated broadcast through the country for electioneering purposes by the free traders.

"Dear Sirs:—Please accept my sincere thanks for yours of recent date. I have given your treatment a thorough test and the benefit has been extraordinary. It has completely braced me up. I am just as vigorous as when a boy and you cannot realize how happy I am."

"Dear Sirs:—Your method worked beautifully. Results were exactly what I needed. Strength and vigor has completely returned and enlargement is entirely satisfactory."

"Dear Sirs:—Yours was received and I had no trouble in making use of the receipt as directed, and can truthfully say it is a boon to weak men. I am greatly improved in size, strength and vigor."

All correspondence is strictly confidential, mailed in plain, sealed envelope. The receipt is free for the asking and they want every man to have it.

SPENT $3000 FOR A STEER WORTH $30

Two Wealthy Missouri Farmers Have Fought in the Courts for Four Years.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MACON, Mo., July 18.—Two wealthy Missouri farmers are sounding the tocsin of their respective clans, preparatory to lining up for the battle of their lives. The black flag has been run up and quarter will be neither shown nor asked.

When farmers John Massengale of Macon County and Elijah E. Rise of north Chariton County went into a Bee Branch justice's court in November, 1889, over a $30 steer, they never dreamed that in July, 1903, they would still be fighting, with increased fierceness, over the same miserable scrub. But that's the unfortunate situation.

The case is now before Judge John A. Hockaday of the ninth judicial district, and will be called for trial at the July term of the Howard County Circuit Court, which begins at Fayette Monday, the twentieth. The case is there on change of venue from the Chariton County Circuit Court.

These two determined Missouri farmers and their army of witnesses have confronted juries four times in justices' and circuit courts, and the case has been to the Kansas City Court of Appeals. The costs now amount to more than $3000 and are still growing like interest on a past due note. The coming trial will be the sixth. Both sides are ready and the Howard County seat town is arranging for the unusual tax to be made upon its facilities for accommodations.

The history of the trials is in a printed record of 241 pages. Every word spoken by the witnesses is in this volume, and they will have to travel with keen remembrance to keep from stepping outside their previous testimony, and if they fail an alert lawyer on the adverse side will not let the slip go unnoticed.

John Massengale, the plaintiff, is a typical westerner. He is about 60, large, energetic and endowed with a disposition that brooks no suggestion of coercion.

If a poor man came along and wanted to take a couple of steers from his farm until he could raise the money to pay for them the chances are that Massengale would give them to him without other security than a belief in his honesty.

If a regiment of soldiers undertook to remove from his premises a yellow dog that Massengale knew belonged to him he would stand up and empty his Winchester at the soldiers until he was shot down. In Macon County no citizen stands higher for rugged honesty and courage.

Mr. Rice, the defendant, is a good citizen, has made money by thrift and enterprise, and is possessed of much of the tenacity that characterizes his rival.

It is simply a case of an honest difference of opinion, and it has grown into a vital principle that must be maintained at all hazards.

AMERICAN SHIP HOISTED FLAG

LONDON, July 17.—According to authoritative dispatches received here, an American warship recently visited a number of islands on the northeast coast of Borneo and hoisted American flags and erected American tablets on seven of the islands, all of which are said to be British.

The Baguan, Taganac, Bakkungaan, Lihiman, Boaam, Sibaung and Lankayan.

Two of the islands, Taganac and Boaam, command the harbor of Sandakan (the capital of British northern Borneo). All the islands are uninhabited, but are shown on the admiralty charts.

The affair is regarded here as being capable of easy adjustment, being, it is asserted, without doubt the result of a misunderstanding on the part of the commander of the American man-of-war.

DREAMED OF THIEF AND KILLED WIFE

Man Saw Negro About to Stab Him and Fired at the Shadow's Heart.

BALTIMORE, July 18.—With her two little children as chief mourners, Mrs. Josephine Manoley, whose husband killed her while dreaming of burglars, was buried today in London Park cemetery. Frank Manoley, the dreamer, was still locked up in the Western police station, and detectives were seeking everywhere for precise information as to when and where he obtained the pistol with which he fired the fatal shots.

Manoley's sister and brother, who are here, and who have talked with him in his cell, are determined to spend their last cent in defending him. They say his mind was seriously affected by the continous smoking of cigarettes and by the reading of detective stories. Tony Manoley says his brother not only had a passion for these things, but for the carrying of firearsm.

Since being in his cell Frank Manoley has been quizzed time and again by the police. He was violently agitated when first arrested, but by now he has become somewhat calmer. The story he tells of just how his wife was killed is exceptionally weird.

"On Thursday evening," says Manoley, "my wife and two children went to Carroll Park to hear the music. While she was away, I, being tired, sat and smoked a cigarette. They returned about 10 o'clock, and not long afterward my wife and I retired.

They Had No Quarrel.

"We had no quarrel or dispute of any kind on this occasion. We had always lived happily togeher.

"My wife and I generally slept in different rooms, but on this evening while I was just dozing off to sleep I remembered that my wife came into my room and remarked that she had a severe toothache. I opened my eyes and saw her standing before the glass putting oil of cloves in her mouth. She must have got in bed with me after that, though I have no recollection of her having done so.

"I dreamt that burglars had entered the room and that they were approaching me. I saw a dagger uplifted above me in the hand of a big burly negro. The man stood on my wife's side of the bed and he seemed to be reaching over to get at me. I remember in my dream having grabbed the revolver from underneath my pillow, raising myself up and resting on one elbow and then shooting.

"I do not know how many shots I fired. The police say there were four, but I know nothing about them. I simply know that I was suffering from a terrible nightmare. When I awoke I was dazed. I then relaized what I had done and that the man with a dagger was only a dream. I shook my wife and called out, 'Josie! Oh, my God, what have I done?'"

Walked in His Sleep With Pistol.

Manoley said that five or six weeks ago he awoke one night to find himself walking the floor with a revolver in his hand. That frightened him, he says, and he put it in his desk. On July 4 he had it out to fire blank cartridges, and after that he put it under his pillow again.

The experiment was made by Detective Bradley today with a view of seeing what truth there is in the prisoner's story that he shot his wife while leaning on his right arm in bed. The woman was shot four times on the left side of her head. Two of the bullets, it is said, took an upward course and passed through the woman's brain. It has puzzled the detectives somewhat to understand how Manoley, resting on his right elbow, and his hand consequently elevated, could send four bullets into the head of his wife, two f which entered at diferent angles, while her head was partly buried in the pillows.

SAVES HER BABE FROM BEAR

Mrs. Frank Gray Shoots Animal Dead While It Fled With Her Child.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., July 18.—The brave act of a frightened mother, under trying circumstances, saved the life of her child from a terrible death near Prescott yesterday. Mrs. Frank Gray, with her family of four children, were engaged in picking berries near her home when a large black bear put in his appearance, having journeyed into the open field from his hiding in a nearby woods. Frightened by the animal, the three older children ran from the field into the house and left behind the baby under a tree.

The bear had picked up the child and started off with it when the frightened mother rushed to the house, secured a rifle and shot the animal dead. The child escaped with slight injuries, having only been hugged by the bear.

GHOST IS JEALOUS OF SECOND HUSBAND

Man and Wife Are Rival Mediums and the First Husband Disturbs Them.

CHICAGO, July 18.—This is the true story of a ghost who will not let his wife live with another man, and to carry out his base design he dominates her—distates to her from spirit land, and makes things very uncomfortable for the present husband of the woman, who possesses a former lord, now among the immortals.

The husband who is living to tell the tale is M. L. Schaeffer of 822 Madison street, pastor and sole sponsor for the Church of the Soul.

Until a month ago he had a helpmate who assisted in services, slate reading, and tests of all kinds. Now another placard farther down the street at No. 861 tells another story—"The Rev. Mrs. Schaeffer, business and test medium."

There has been a separation, and the present affinity blames a former spouse by the name of McIntire for the disappearance of the love element.

This revelation came about Sunday, when Mr. Schaeffer, "the inspirational poet, lecturer and test medium," went out near the Concordia Cemetery, in a beautiful grove, to give a few readings and to do a bit of good work for the Lord, as he confidentially expressed it.

"Brothers and sisters, let us have a stirring song. I will start it—my favorite."

And he did.

Rival Songs Were Sung.

When they arrived at the words, "We shall come rejoicing, bringing in the sheaves," there was a loud cry and a woman's voice nearby was heard singing the strains of "Nearer, My God, to Thee, Nearer to Thee."

"Louder!" cried Mr. Schaeffer; "it is the devil—my wife—trying to run me out."

"Louder!" called Mrs. Schaeffer; "that is my husband, and he's no gentleman. Louder! I say, louder!"

"She will not be here again," said the he-spiritualist after the meeting.

"I guess he's bad enough," echoed the she-spiritualist.

When the man was seen at work in the tailor shop on West Madison street, he said without hesitation: "My wife did that purposely; she did it to be mean. She knew it would break me up."

"Has she left for good and all?"

"Yes, she has other affinities sanctioned in the spirit world."

"What is the reason for this?"

"It is not altogether her fault. Her first husband is in the spirit land, and he is very, very jealous. He makes her suffer whenever she associates with other men."

"So you think he controlled her when, as you say, she tried to break up your meeting."

The Ghost Is a Queer Fellow.

"I know he did: he's a queer fellow. But my guides are strong. Why, look at this picture here. Now, Garfield is my lecture guide; do you think he'll let my wife, with all her McIntire influence, rattle me? He didn't, and that is Princess Marie, bless her soul. I tell you she has been a good friend. And there is good Queen Victoria, who never goes back on me. That other lady is Madeline Watson, of the 'Golden Rule;' she usually talks in verse, and the poetry she writes—well, you can't believe it. The boy is my son by a former wife—both now in the spirit land.

"Garfield was my friend through all of Sunday's experience. He didn't let McIntire and my wife feaze me at any stage. He was a 'Johnny-on-the-spot,'" he continued.

"In your divorce you can't name McIntire as the cause of your trouble, can you?"

"I don't know yet; I think so. He has caused it, hasn't he?"

"Well, could you sue for alienation of your wife's affections?"

"Possibly not, because I don't think he has her affections. He's an awful nuisance, though; he's always putting in his nose. I never had any real comfort with her."

Thereupon the "inspirational poet, lecturer and test medium" picked up his shears and resumed work on a pair of light summer trousers selected by a mundane customer.

BEAT WIFE WHILE CHILD DIED

Brutal Act of a Trusted Employe of Locomotive Works at Hammond Nearly Causes Lynching.

HAMMOND, Ind., July 18.—James Highberg, a trusted employe of the United States Locomotive works of this city, was nearly lynched between East Chicago and Indiana Harbor, for brutally whipping his wife. She was caring for her 8-months-old baby boy while it was dying, when Highberg beat her, and later in the night the child died. Highberg left his wife in destitute circumstances and she has no money to pay the funeral expenses of her baby. It is reported that the young woman is the daughter of wealthy parents in Chicago, who refused to have anything to do with her when she married Highberg.

Professor Thompson, who is a statistician of reputation, has discovered that in the city of New York each family of five persons consumes on an average four eggs a day. In Chicago, if it is accepted that the city has reached a population of 2,000,000, the ratio of egg consuming is higher and every person in the city manages to consume one whole egg each day in the year.

IF I WERE ONLY YOUNG AGAIN

WEAK MEN

After Investigating all Known Methods we Believe There is Nothing to Equal

"CALTHOS"

It Cures at Home.

To Prove It, Full 5 Days' Trial Treatment Will Be Sent Free to any Needy Man. Send for It Today. No C. O. D. or Prescription Scheme.

This paper is authorized to say that if any middle-aged or old man who does not feel himself as capable today as when he was in his twenties, or any young man who is not as perfect as he knows he ought to be, will write in confidence to the Von Mohl Co., of Cincinnati, they will be glad to send each man who writes them, a full 5 days' trial treatment of "Calthos," the great remedy for weak and nervous men, discovered by that celebrated French scientist, Prof. Jules Laborde. This is the very remedy that has cured so many thousands of men of all ages, who through errors in youth, excesses in later life and still other causes, had become weaklings of the most embarrassing kind. It instantly restores to them this power which they had lost and gave them back again the vigor, confidence and ambition of younger days, and all privately in their own home. It is the only remedy of its kind sanctioned by the French and German armies, and the Von Mohl Co. has the sole distributing rights for America.

There is nothing whatsoever behind this offer to send you a 5 days' trial treatment free. It means that and nothing more. It is no C. O. D., prescription or deposit scheme, as this concern is too large to resort to such nefarious methods. And while others are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars every year in advertising, the Von Mohl Co. puts its spare money into free trial treatments, which it sends out broadcast to all men who send their name and address, and in this way they not only prove the value of Calthos, but they do mankind some good. You surely need this great discovery if you suffer from Lost Manhood, Emissions, Prematurity, Spermatorrhoea, Varicocele, Enlargement of the Prostate Gland, Lack of Virile Power, Hydrocele, Impotency; if you are bashful, timid in the company of ladies, if you lack confidence in your powers, if you are not socially as attractive as you used to be, if you are getting to be a "woman hater." Calthos will get your blood to circulating to the desired spot, your nerves to tingling with renewed ambition, your muscles enlarged with increasing power; it will stop the drains, create healthy life force, invigorate the flabby parts and make you once again see life as you saw it in your prime, and as every vigorous man sees it throughout life. It will be a permanent cure and accomplished privately in your own home.

You may think you have tried your level best to be cured, you may have spent money on this thing and that without good results, but until you send for the free trial treatment of Calthos and see for yourself what wonderful good it does you, you cannot say with a clear conscience that you have done your full duty to yourself. Calthos has permanently cured thousands who have tried "everything else." It will cure you if only you will be thoughtful enough to send for it. Do so today sure and they will send you free, besides the 5 days' trial treatment, many interesting illustrated books on the subject, all in plain wrapper and sealed against inspection. Do not hesitate to write, as they are only too glad to do this for any suffering man and you should not rest content until you find out by actual trial if Calthos can cure you. Write today in full confidence. Address

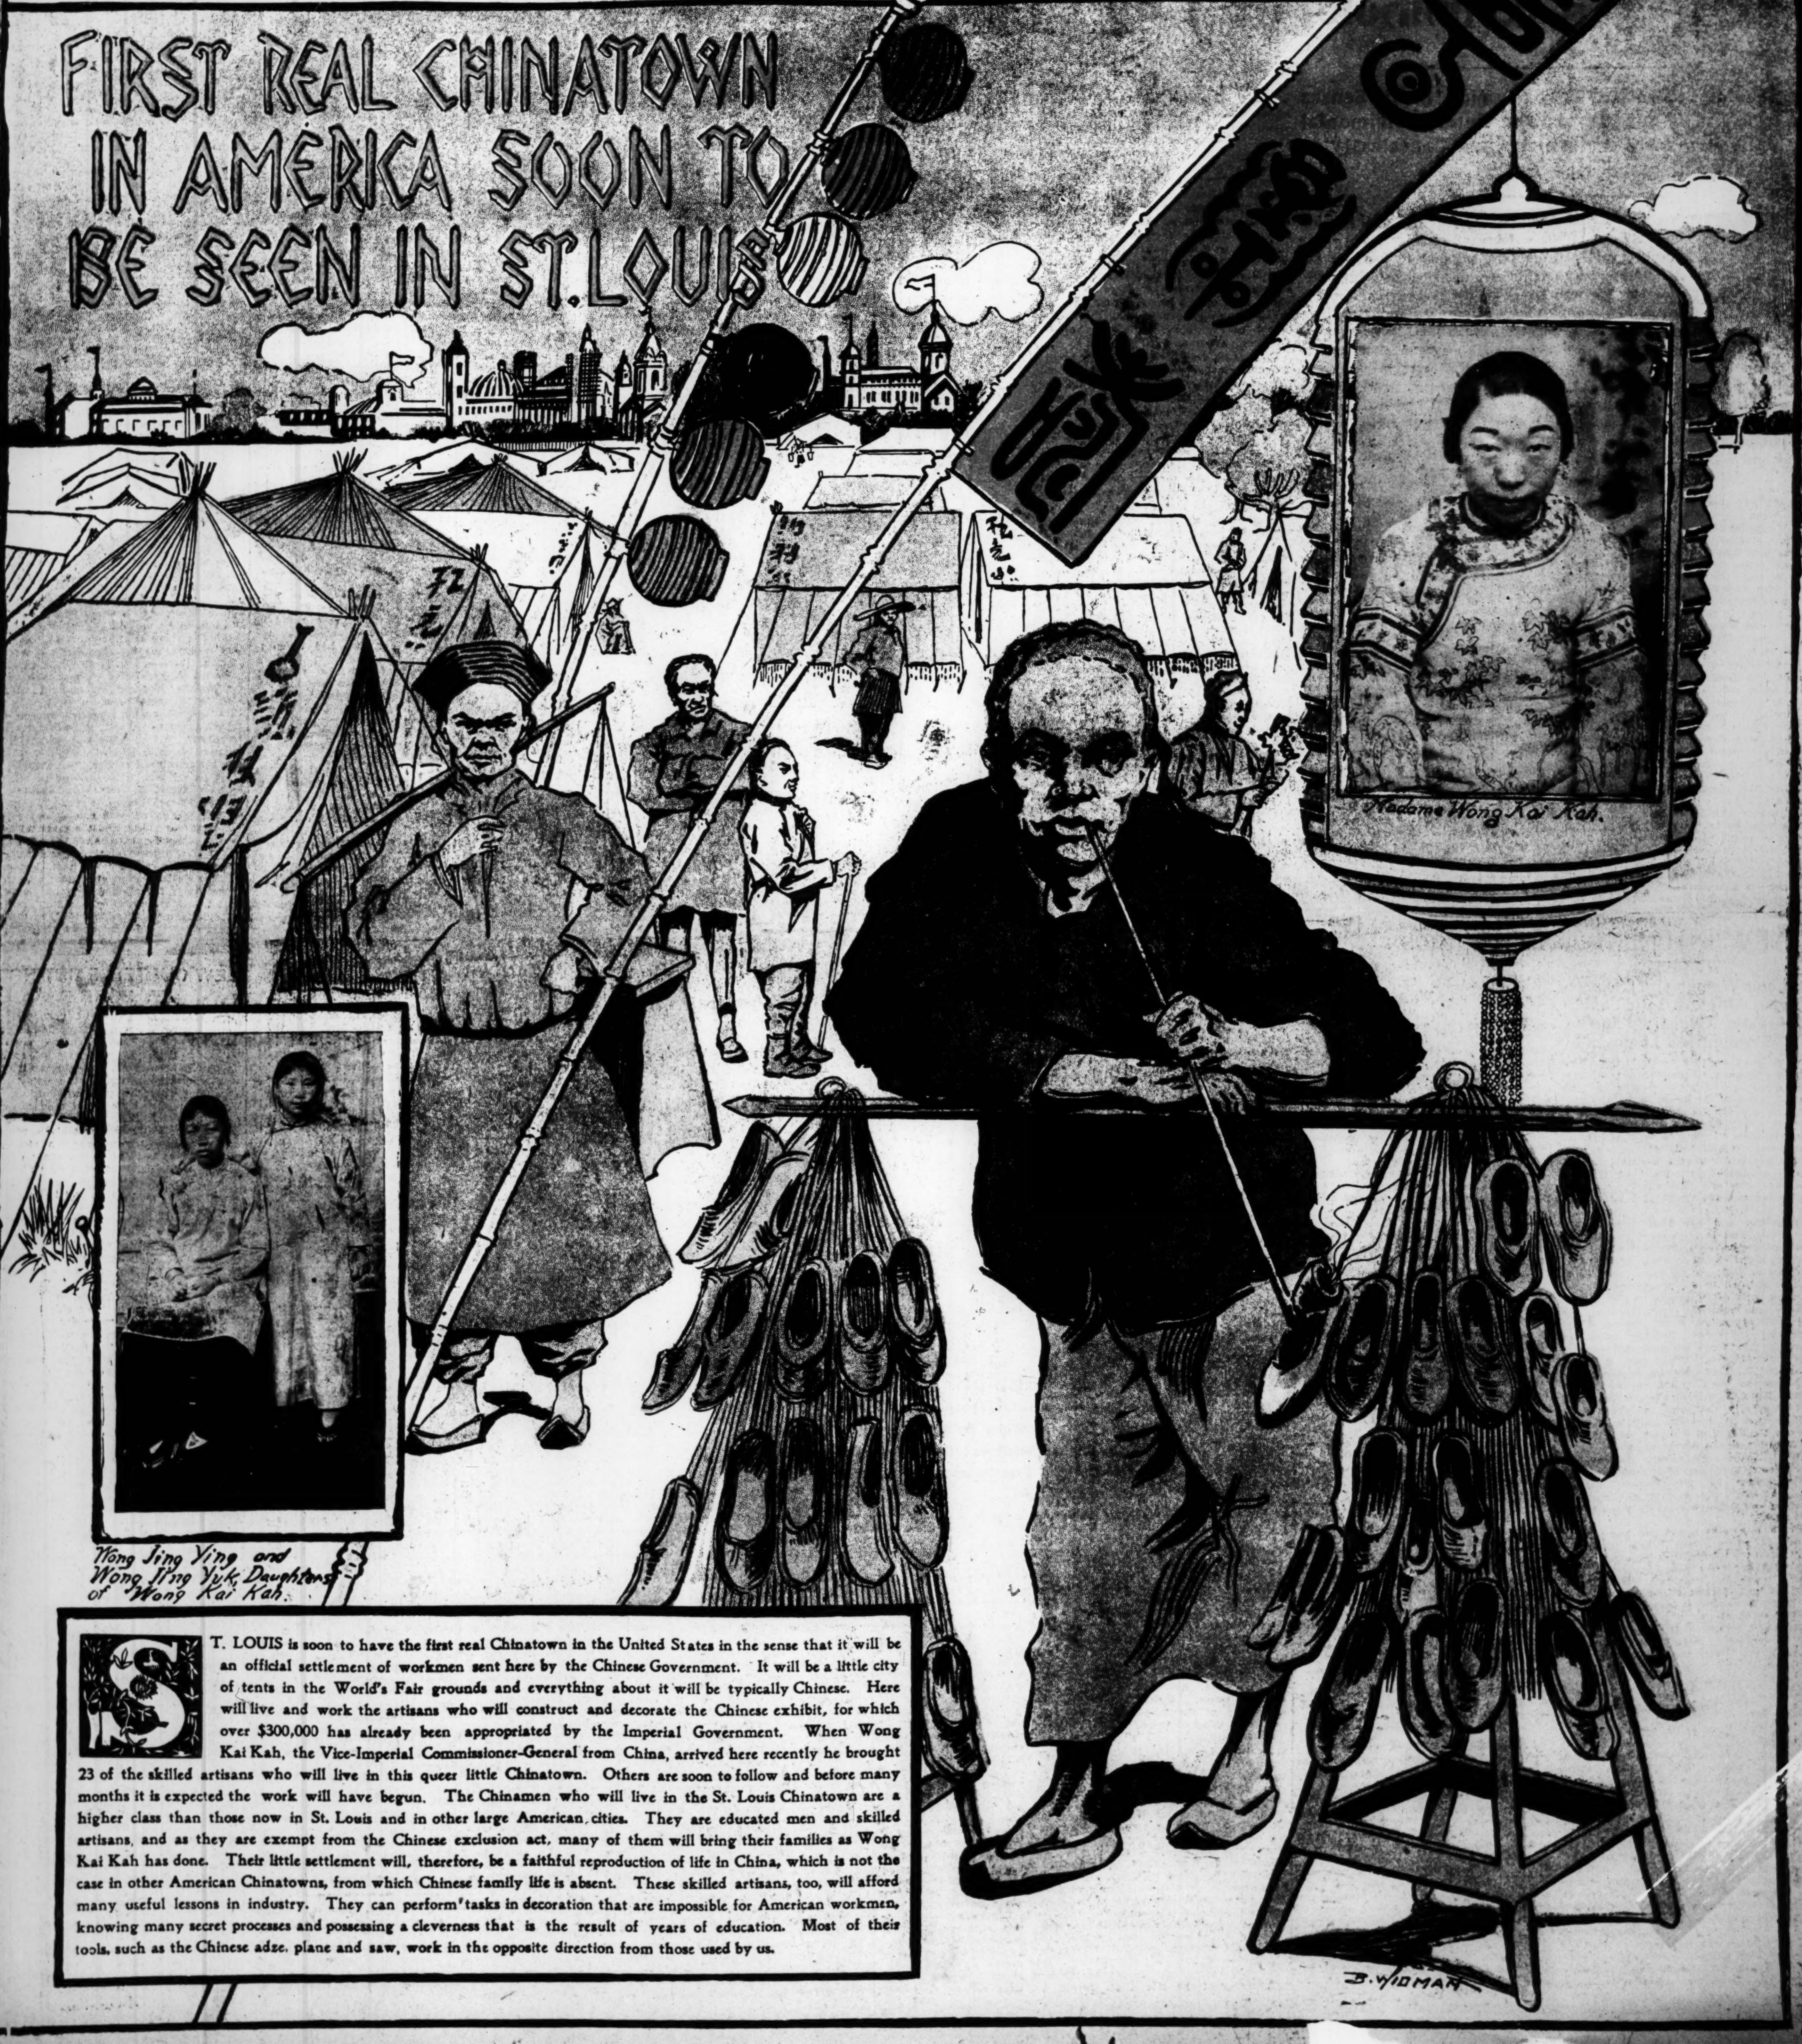
FIRST REAL CHINATOWN IN AMERICA SOON TO BE SEEN IN ST. LOUIS



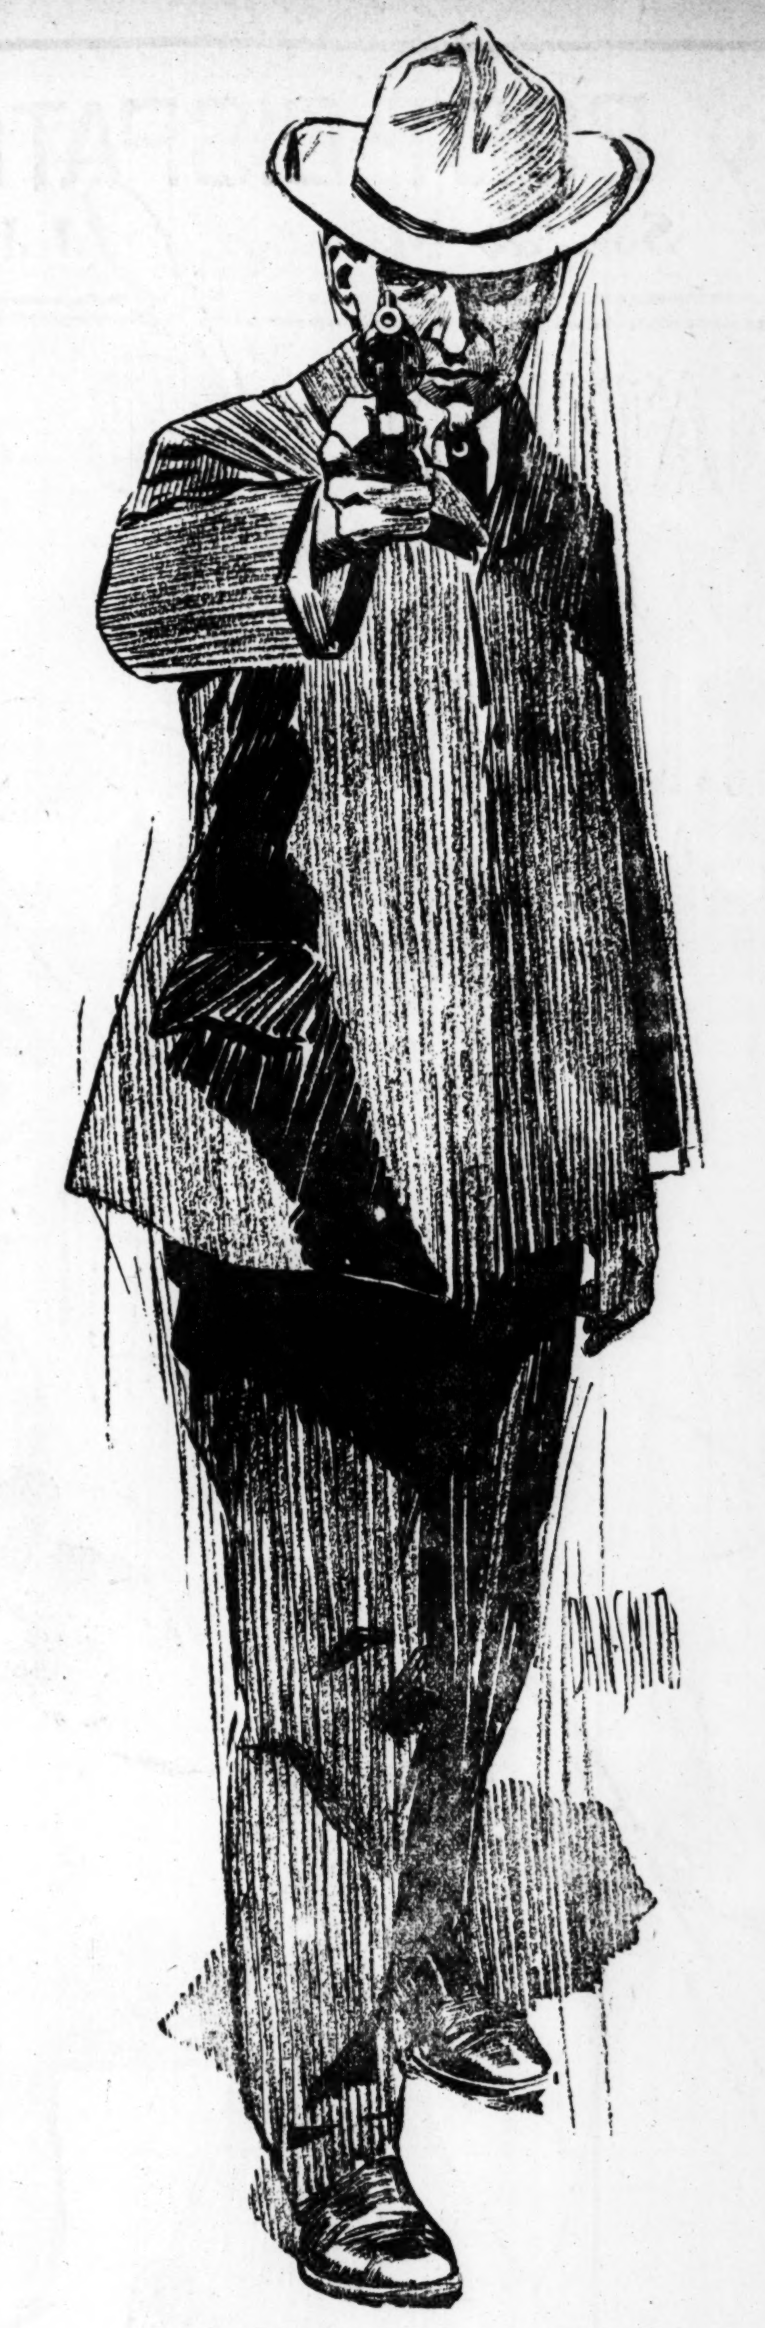
Madame Wong Kai Kah.

Wong Jing Ying and Wong Jing Yuk, Daughters of Wong Kai Kah.

ST. LOUIS is soon to have the first real Chinatown in the United States in the sense that it will be an official settlement of workmen sent here by the Chinese Government. It will be a little city of tents in the World's Fair grounds and everything about it will be typically Chinese. Here will live and work the artisans who will construct and decorate the Chinese exhibit, for which over $300,000 has already been appropriated by the Imperial Government. When Wong Kai Kah, the Vice-Imperial Commissioner-General from China, arrived here recently he brought 23 of the skilled artisans who will live in this queer little Chinatown. Others are soon to follow and before many months it is expected the work will have begun. The Chinamen who will live in the St. Louis Chinatown are a higher class than those now in St. Louis and in other large American cities. They are educated men and skilled artisans, and as they are exempt from the Chinese exclusion act, many of them will bring their families as Wong Kai Kah has done. Their little settlement will, therefore, be a faithful reproduction of life in China, which is not the case in other American Chinatowns, from which Chinese family life is absent. These skilled artisans, too, will afford many useful lessons in industry. They can perform tasks in decoration that are impossible for American workmen, knowing many secret processes and possessing a cleverness that is the result of years of education. Most of their tools, such as the Chinese adze, plane and saw, work in the opposite direction from those used by us.

Is Barrington Crazy?

What a Criminologist finds.



Conclusion Is Reached That No Man in His Senses Would Commit Crimes and Enter Matrimonial Alliances so Blunderingly and Causelessly as This Englishman Has Done.

IT has been stated during the past few days that there is likelihood of the defence of insanity being made when "Lord Barrington" is brought to trial for the McCann murder. In the opinion of many able criminal lawyers who have studied the case, this offers practically the only hope of saving Barrington from the gallows, the evidence against him, although purely circumstantial, being of the strongest possible character. Although insanity has been frequently set up as a defence in murder cases upon frivolous grounds, there are, in the opinion of lawyers, many reasons to justify it in the present instance. A distinguished criminologist has devoted much thought and study to Barrington, and in the following account he gives with much detail his reasons for believing that the bogus lord is out of his mind.

HAVING gone carefully over the career of Lord Barrington, and considering it from a scientific as well as from a legal point of view, I am convinced that many of his acts are incapable of being reconciled with normal sanity. In fact, the further back you trace the career of this extraordinary criminal, the more convinced are you that he is at least subject to temporary fits of insanity if he is not altogether unbalanced. Running through the whole career of Barrington there is a continuous thread of erratic and unreasonable conduct.

I call him Lord Barrington for convenience, being well aware from the man's manner and speech that he is merely one of the English lower classes, in fact a typical English servant. He has had so many aliases during his criminal career that it is most convenient to designate him by the name under which his St. Louis record has been made.

Taking this St. Louis record alone, and looking at it in its large aspects, there are many things which show that he was acting under some extraordinary delusion. No sane man would have gone into the Cochran marriage enterprise, which landed Barrington in the workhouse, upon the knowledge in his possession at the time of the wedding. What had Barrington to gain from marrying Miss Cochran? Assuming that he did so purely as an adventurer, it is impossible to see how he could have hoped to benefit from such an enterprise.

The Cochrans are not rich people, and the most casual investigation by Barrington would have shown him that there was no money to be secured in that quarter. The claim has been made that Barrington married Miss Cochran under the belief that she was the daughter of a wealthy Kansas City pork packer. As a matter of fact, he well knew that this was not so. He knew that any blackmailing scheme he might put up on the Cochran family would be of no avail, for the simple reason that none of them was wealthy and there was no money to be gained by such a line of conduct.

Miss Cochran believed Barrington's fairy tales about his wealth and position, his castle in England and his record in the army, but she, on the other hand, never pretended to be wealthy or to expect to inherit wealth in the future. If Barrington were an adventurer entering such a marriage for the purposes of gain, he would have made sure of one thing—that the money was in the family.

An expert criminal, knowing the serious consequences that would result from a marriage, would have done what all criminals first do and that is assure himself of the booty. There is no crook alive who would have gone into such an enterprise with the knowledge that Barrington possessed when he led Miss Cochran to the altar, that she possessed no more property than the clothes she stood up in and that none of her family was blackmailable because they had no large sums which could be extorted from them.

What had Barrington to gain from marrying Miss Cochran? I have asked this question of a number of people intimately familiar with the facts and not one of them has been able to give a satisfactory answer. Discovery and exposure by the members of the Cochran family were absolutely certain to take place within a short time of the wedding, for the engraved cards announced that the couple would be "at home at Melrose castle, Brighton, England, April 1."

There is no such place as Melrose castle, Brighton, and Barrington apparently did not possess money enough to take his wife to England. He knew that the Cochrans had no money and that the tissue of falsehoods about himself was certain to be exposed in a very short time. When the exposure actually came there is nothing to show that Barrington attempted to extort money from the Cochran family or to benefit in any way from the extraordinary marriage he had made.

Here are many facts which cannot be reconciled with the intelligence displayed by the ordinary crook. You can always find a motive except when you are dealing with an insane man. The motive is altogether lacking in the extraordinary story of the Cochran wedding.

Now take the McCann case. What had Barrington to gain by murdering McCann? How could he benefit by killing him? Upon the contrary, was it not absolutely certain that Barrington would lose rather than gain by killing his benefactor? McCann had picked Barrington up out of the gutter and put him on his feet and given him every evidence of an intention to stand by the bogus lord indefinitely.

There was not a single penny of McCann's money deposited in the bank which Barrington could touch after McCann was dead.

If Mrs. McCann's marriage were established she would inherit merely a part of her husband's estate allowed her by the common law if he died intestate, and if she were not married to him she could not touch any of it. The theory has been advanced as explaining Barrington's motive that he hoped to marry Mrs. McCann and so get the money. But this is very far-fetched and fantastic.

An expert criminal, in order to secure so small a sum as was involved in this case—about $20,000—would not commit a murder as the initial act in the scheme. A crook will only commit murder when he can actually place his hands on the money immediately after the crime.

Upon the other hand, there is everything to show that Barrington well knew that the idea of Mrs. McCann marrying him was out of the question. He was well aware that she disliked him and regarded him with suspicion. Moreover, he knew that she was not the kind of woman who could be easily deceivd and that if she were a wealthy widow in her own right she would have no use for him. In fact, Barrington realized that Mrs. McCann was the only one of the group who was throughly "onto" him before the murder.

How, then, could Barrington gain or hope to gain by murdering McCann? That he did murder him there is no doubt in my mind, but I have yet to hear any explanation of why he did so that is compatible with sanity.

The very fact that Barrington has told a multitude of lies about this case and that he has tangled himself all up in a mess of falsehoods which can easily be disproved, is in itself and indication of an unbalanced mind. The expert crook and adventurer when he tells a lie, sticks to it and it is always plausible. He never contradicts himself. He puts up an explanation that the police can only destroy with positive proof.

Barrington, on the other hand, is no sooner arrested for the murder of McCann than he begins telling the silliest kinds of falsehoods which an hour's investigation is sufficient to disprove. Then he comes out with another story equally absurd, apparently not knowing that he is all the while piling up evidence against himself.

The same is true when you follow Bar-

Strange Actions in the Cochran and McCann Cases—Absence of Motive.

rington's actions from then on to the time of the discovery of the body. He left the evidence lying all around. He told a negro to wash the blood off his underclothes, and he began a series of explanations of McCann's absence, which were so childish as to excite the suspicions of Mrs. McCann at once. At no time did Barrington display the intelligence of the ordinary crook in covering up his crime. He manifested a low sort of cunning at times, but it was in unrelated spots, and shows the lack of coherent thought.

When Barrington learned that the body had been found, what did he do? Instead of disappearing without a moment's loss of time, he goes back to the McCann house and packs his trunk and fools around there for several hours waiting for the officers to come and arrest him. What did he put into the trunk? Property taken off the dead body of McCann.

What did he do when he was preparing the murder? Made every arrangement so that identification of himself would be an easy matter for the police. Dressed in a grotesque fashion, wearing Tom Allen's old silk hat and a frock coat and swinging a cane—a style of dress so unusual that it would be sure to attract attention anywhere in Missouri—he goes out to Bonfils in broad daylight and walks up and down the road, reconnoitering the quarry in plain view of a large number of people. He did this several times. Not another man in St. Louis was dressed in this style but Barrington, and identification was the simplest matter.

What did he do at the time of the murder? It does not appear that he made any reasonable attempt at concealment. He went out with McCann on a street car and permitted the latter to talk with passengers and to give his card to the conductor, just as they got off. Barrington never attempted to hide and it does not appear that he was in any way disguised.

Nobody but a lunatic about to commit a murder would take so few precautions. The wonder is that he was not caught in the act, because the shots were heard by several people, including the conductor and motorman of the car they had taken to Bonfils.

The crazy man appears the following morning walking along, wearing his victim's hat, covered with blood and not even attempting to conceal himself when he saw people approaching on the lonely road. Barrington could see the car coming from a long distance, and might easily have stepped aside into the bushes and let it pass. But instead of that he walked along the road at an hour of the morning when any pedestrian would be sure to attract attention and never attempted to hide his face or conceal his identity as the car passed.

The only explanation of Barrington's motive in the McCann murder which has seemed at all reasonable to me is one that strongly points to the man's insanity. This is the theory that Barrington murdered McCann for the clothes he had on him, and for the small amount of jewelry he possessed.

One of the extraordinary characteristics of Barrington is a passion for wearing dead men' clothes. Lombroso mentions this as an idiosyncrasy sometimes found in a certain type of criminal lunatics. Barrington took the utmost pride in his possession of Tom Allen's silk hat. His career previous to coming to St. Louis showed that he had a fondness for the clothing of wives he had married and deserted, and which he sold only from necessity.

I have no doubt that Barrington has been wearing dead men's clothes for years and that they possess a peculiar fascination for him, the sure mark of a disordered mind. The chance to get hold of and wear McCann's hat was irresistible. He clapped it on his head at once when McCann was dead. Barrington appears to have pondered about wearing McCann's shoes and to have first decided to keep them and then to throw them away.

Under certain circumstances a lunatic of this kind would murder a man to get his hat, but I do not think he would do so when he knew that he was at the same time cutting off his means of livelihood. Barrington must have known that he would be "on his uppers" again within a few days of McCann's death and therefore he seized not only McCann's clothes but his jewelry.

The theory has been advanced that Barrington intended to kill Mr. and Mrs. McCann at Bonfils at the same time, but that would have been equally crazy, for he could not have touched any of their money deposited in bank.

I therefore search in vain for any reasonable explanation of Barrington's conduct. His whole career in St. Louis and previously is not that of a criminal and adventurer, but of a lunatic, a pervert, a degenerate. Here is a man who commits the most atrocious crimes without forethought and without any apparent motive, taking chances that no crook would take without a big temptation.

I ask any man who has studied this case how he can reconcile Barrington's conduct with sanity or even with a low order of intelligence. It is inconceivable that a man should do what he has done who possessed any kind of sense.

NEW INTEREST IN BEAD-WEAVING

St. Louis Women and Children Make Many Useful and Artistic Things on the Simple Bead Loom.

THE bead-weaving bee is buzzing busily about St Louis heads of late, and more girls and women are constantly added to the list of those who welcome the bee. During the past few weeks it is reported by merchants, there has been bead-stringing loom recently invented, which sells at half a dollar.

It is wonderful what a woman or a girl can do on one of these little looms. Even the boys who are domestically inclined soon learn to make beautiful things by the use of the loom.

Heretofore one has been compelled to pay a considerable price for fancy articles made of beads. Now, by owning a bead-weaver, a girl can make these articles herself just as well, and for a few cents each, and in addition to the saving she has the enjoyment of doing artistic work.

Have you noticed, with longing, the dainty bead purses, belts, watch fobs, handbags and other articles made of beads, which adorn some of the counters and show windows? If you have, it is possible that the prices marked on them have deterred you from buying. A bead ornament, like a Navajo blanket, is beautiful, but frequently the price at which it is sold renders it, like the Navajo blanket, beyond the reach of ordinary pocketbooks.

With this recent invention, which is indeed a very simple affair, one may do one's own bead weaving, make purses, belts, fobs or what not, at a cost so slight that the expense of having an article so made is not to be considered, if one wants the article.

For a few cents a girl can buy enough beads to make a belt which, if bought at one of the stores already made, would cost as high as $2. It requires a little time and patience and some artistic skill, to be sure, to make high-class articles, but nearly every woman possesses these requisites.

Tiny beads of various colors are woven together so prettily that the pattern looks to be painted. Sometimes a Navajo blanket is used as a pattern, but the bead-weaver may do her own designing if she likes, and frequently very artistic effects are produced.

You don't string beads today exactly as you did under grandmother's tutelage a generation ago. Those mottoes like "Touch Not, Taste Not," and "Home, Sweet Home," which you used to contrive out of beads under her eye are not longer in fashion, and, moreover, would be considered too easy by the young folk of this age. Weaving beads into Indian designs—belts and moccasins and wampum bags—is the thing now. The adherence to native American art ideals in preference to all foreign types of the beautiful is the dominant note of the new craze.

In Chicago all the public kindergarten schools now have classes in bead weaving. Each class has a quantity of models, which are procured in the downtown stores. There are belts brought direct from the Winnebago country, legging strings from the Sioux reservations, headdresses from the Zunis, and square braided ropes from the Mojaves. In some of the schools Navajo blankets have been hung up as models and their scheme of decoration accurately copied by the young folk.

The children are taught to weave on little bead looms which look like portable book racks, with a row of teeth on the top of each flange. Threads are stretched from one row of teeth to the other to constitute the warp of the piece to be woven. Then the beads are strung half a dozen or a score at a time, on a thread, and finally sewed into the warp a row at a time. This continued indifinitely and with great care, brings out the intended design and finishes the work.

Among the novelties which are delighting the children are gun metal beads from the black Forest, real amber from Dantzig, and imitation amber from Bohemia, coral from Naples, assorted colors from Venice and Murano, pearl from Paris, black-eyed Susans and mimosa berries from the Hawaiian Islands, kelp from Tasmania, and sea shells and sea beans from Ceylon.

The craze has not only extended to all children, rich or poor, but it has laid its hold on grown-ups as well. Not a few of the customers at the bead counters are women who prefer to string their own necklaces and weave their own bracelets and belts.

INDIANS NOW RUSH FOR DIVORCE COURT

NO FEATURE of the white man's civilization is being more eagerly copied than that of divorce. While the bucks reluctantly accept an allotted farm, the squaws are escaping the dragging of the tepee over the divorce route. The Sioux Indian women are up to date in their applications for separation, as shown by the docket of the district court at Bonesteel, S. D. Kate Medicine Horse asks separation from Medicine Horse on the grounds that he is a confirmed drunkard and abuses her in other ways than by making her do all the work, which she is willing to do. Matilda Beaver Boy accuses Beaver Boy of cruelty and non-support, and asks for her maiden name, Matilda Black Tomahawk. Anna Lame Dog says her husband is cruel and has eloped with Red Horse Woman. She asks for divorce and return of her maiden name, Anna Wild Horse.

The Indians are highly pleased at the idea of securing divorces, and a flood of applications will soon be filed.

Audubon Society's Good Work.

THE Audubon Society of Missouri has done much good in educating Missourians to a proper appreciation of the value of song and insectivorous birds, and the necessity of securing legal protection for these birds. The Missouri society has co-operated with its sister societies, and as a result it has awakened interest in both the song birds and those of plumage. Not many years ago, nature was not wreathed in smiles, as she is at present, because her children, the birds of the forest, were taken from her to adorn the bonnets of our American girls. Members of the fair sex today do not yearn to have their beauty embellished at the expense of the birds of the forest, and this condition, it is said, has been reached largely by the efforts of the Audubonites.

NEW BOOK SUGGESTS NEW USE FOR "BIG MUDDY"

Capt. Chittenden Proposes That the Water Be Stored and Used to Irrigate the Arid Lands—In His History of Navigation on the Abandoned Missouri He Declares That by Such Use the Water Would Support a Population of 25,000,000.

"WHAT shall be done with the Missouri river?" is the remarkable question that is now being asked by publicists and scientists. It is not intended by this to indicate that the great river should be done away with altogether, but that it should be used in some way for the benefit of mankind. A few months ago the United States government, by abolishing the Missouri river commission, abandoned the river so far as navigation is concerned, leaving the erratic stream to shift for itself. The former headquarters of the commission, on Locust street, has been turned into a boarding house. So far as government cognizance of the stream goes, the Missouri is a thing of the past.

But in the minds of thoughtful men who know the river thoroughly, and who are acquainted with the country which it drains, there is no disposition to forget or to ignore the great stream. One of the closest students of the Missouri and its possibilities is Capt. Hiram M. Chittenden, well known in St. Louis, whose work as a member of the United States army engineer corps has made him familiar with the wants of the West. Capt. Chittenden has just published from the press of Francis P. Harper of New York a work of great timely interest, in view of the recent disastrous floods and the general attention thereby called to the Missoruri river and its ravages. The work is in two volumes, and is entitled "History of Early Steamboat Navigation on the Missouri River." The book is largely made up of the life and adventures of the late Capt. Joseph La Barge of St. Louis, pioneer navigator and Indian trader, who for 50 years was identified with the commerce of the Missouri valley, and whose life-story reads like a romance.

At the very end of his work Capt. Chittenden makes this interesting suggestion as to what shall be done with the river.

"What of the future? Is the useful purpose of the Missouri river in the upbuilding of the West already fulfilled? Is its great history a closed book? Such, it must be admitted, is the general view. In popular estimation that river today is little more than a vast sewer, whose seething, eddying waters bear down the sands and clay and debris from the far upper country, scattering them along its course, swelling the floods of the Mississippi, and pushing ever seaward the delta of that mighty stream.

"To the railroad it is a million-dollar obstacle whenever they want to cross it. As a competitive route of commerce it has sunk beneath their notice. To the husbandman along its borders it is a perpetual nightmare, for he knows not what morning he may awake to find his possessions ruthlessly swept away. From all points of view it now seems like one of those things in the economy of nature which could be dispensed with and the world be none the worse for its absence.

"Nevertheless the river is still there—a fact, a thing to be reckoned with in some way or other. It will not let its presence be forgotten. In its oldtime fashion it carves up the lands, but with vastly greater destructiveness now that they have become so valuable. Its terrible ice gorges pile up as of yore, but are now more dreaded than they used to be on account of the property along the banks. In other respects as well it is the same peculiar stream that it has always been. The weird sandstorms drive over its illimitable bars, the willows bend to the blast, and the swift-rolling waters are lashed into foam by the prairie gale. In periods of calm its silvery sheen stretches away under the morning and evening sun as when the pilot followed its interminable windings through the prairies; and its resistless tide rushes on, as in the blithe steamboat days, when it carried upon its bosom the commerce of the valley.

"But here the likeness between the past and present ends. No aboriginal tribe now roams upon its borders. The buffalo does not come to its shore to quench his thirst, or to swim its current, or to cross upon its ice. The lonely dwellers of the valley have long since ceased to watch the eastern horizon whore the river runs into the sky, for the curling smoke no longer tells them of the approach of those white-winged messengers of civilization, the Missouri river steamboats. They are gone, its greatness and glory, never, in their ancient form, to return.

"But the river itself is still there, and those who dwell on its shores refuse to believe that its power for good has passed away. For years they have wistfully looked upon its waters, flowing by in absolute waste, and then upon the rich lands on either side, parching in a rainless climate. A vague hope of what the river may be already possesses their minds. Does it not hold the secret germ of a mighty future empire? Twenty-five millions of people these wasted waters could sustain, if only they could be scattered upon the neighboring lands. With great canals to divert them from the river, with great reservoirs to keep them from going to waste, there would follow the necessary millions of money and men to turn them to proper account.

"This is the dream. Can it be realized, or must it always remain nothing more than a dream? It is an engineering problem purely. The grand desideratum would be that everywhere, whether upon the main stream or its tributaries, the water could be saved and used in irrigation. But the obstacles in the way of so complete a result seem at present almost insurmountable. The higher tributaries can doubtless all be utilized, but the main streams, in their lower courses, have so little fall that it will be very difficult to build canals of sufficient length to get the water upon the higher ground. Whether the water will ever have a value that will justify pumping it to the necessary elevation it would be unwise at present to hazard a conjecture. But even if not more than half can be utilized, it will still be enough to maintain a population equal to that at present existing in the entire arid region of the West.

"Here, then, is the answer to our question—What of the future? Turn this river out upon the lands. Unlock its imprisoned power. Where the rains do not fall let it supply the need. Then the new and greater history of the Missouri river will begin. Utility will take the place of romance. The buffalo, the Indian, the steamboat, the gold-seeker, the soldier, will be seen in its valley no more, but in their stead the culture and comfort, and the thousand blessings that come with civilization. Such, let us hope, in drawing the curtain over a mighty past, will be the consummation of a still more mighty future."

Capt. Chittenden's book is exceedingly rich in vivid incident and thrilling narrative, and from first to last page it is of intimate interest to the residents of St. Louis and of the great Missouri valley.

Florence Nightingale, whose eighty-third birthday occurred in May, is spending her old age in Hampshire, England. She received her education in Germany, and the Empress Frederich subsequently became one of the most ardent supporters of her ideas regarding woman's work in war time.

ST. LOUIS PEOPLE LEARNING ROQUE

The Game of Made-Over Croquet Is Coming Westward Gradually.

ST. LOUIS is just beginning to learn the game of roque, though for several years there have been some individual players in the city who have made good records. Roque is merely developed croquet. Omit the first and last letters of croquet and you have roque. The name was selected about seven years ago at Norwich, Conn., when the National Croquet Association was reorganized and renamed to fit the new spelling.

A roque tournament is held annually at Norwich, this year the date of beginning of the meeting being Aug. 19. The game shows a marked revival in popularity. Clubs from twenty cities will participate at the tournament.

Roque is a game as scientific as billiards, but its rules resemble croquet's rules. There is a peg, like a croquet peg, at each end of the court; there are nine wickets, like croquet wickets, set in a regular croquet-like pattern; there are balls to shoot through the wickets, just as in croquet, and there are mallets, like croquet mallets, wherewith to hit these balls.

But the roque court is as firm and smooth as a billiard table, and its boundaries are of rubber, so that balls may carom from them as from a billiard table's cushions. The balls are solid rubber. The wickets, of bright steel, are only one-quarter of an inch broader at the base than the balls that must be shot through them. The short mallets are tipped with rubber and bound with brass or silver, and the material used in their making is rosewood or Turkish boxwood or lignum vitae or amaranth.

Roque, in a word, is croquet, but croquet perfected, croquet made scientific.

The court is rolled daily, first with a heavy, and afterward with a light, roller. It is daily watered and sanded, and after every game the ground about the wickets is leveled with a pine wood leveling board.

NEW CUSTER PAINTING BY SCHREYVOGEL

CHARLES SCHREYVOGEL, "Painter of the Western Frontier," has just finished a new picture, entitled "Custer's Demand," which is of special interest to westerners, smacking as it does of the great plains and their greatest military tragedy. This painting, now on exhibition in New York, is of a more quiet order than Mr. Schreyvogel's usual military or Indian scenes. It is a picture that commemorates and preserves pictorially a stirring incident in the story of the great Southwest. For, as a result of the conference here pictured by the artist, Indian warfare came to an end in that portion of America.

The canvas represents that day in January, 1869, after a campaign that had lasted through most of the preceding year, when Custer, who was in command of the troops under Gen. Sheridan, overtook a war party of Cheyennes, Kiowas and Comanches near Antelope Hill, Indian Territory, and made the demand to their chiefs that all the Indians should surrender and return at once to their reservations. The Indians were striking off to the northward, pillaging and murdering as they went, when they were overtaken by Custer and the Seventh Cavalry on the morning of January 19. The Indians were under the impression that only a small force of United States troops were pursuing them, but when their scouts discovered the strength of the whites four of the chiefs rode out to meet Custer under the protection of a flag of truce.

This act was a customary piece of Indian treachery. The purpose of it was to engage the white men in talk while the Indians broke camp and made off, this movement being indicated in the canvas by a cloud of dust that rises over the hills on the left.

The four chiefs rode out to meet Custer in full war paint, with their blankets thrown back to give full play to their arms and with their weapons ready for use. It was plain to Custer as he went to meet them with three companions that the Indians were bent on violating the truce they carried, and he warned his staff to be prepared for any act of treachery.

It is probable that the government will purchase "Custer's Demand" for its historical value, and in any event, the painting is likely to be sent to the World's Fair for exhibition.

A veteran general said, while visiting St. Louis during the dedication ceremonies, that the average American could never realize the horrors endured by the Indian fighters of the American army.

"Talk of Napoleon and his retreat from Moscow!" said he. "Our Indian heroes not only marched with little food and were often starved, but they were tortured by thirst, insects, poisonous serpents, intense heat in summer and frightful cold in winter, and yet they pushed on from day to day over a desolation unbroken and often impassable. No wagon trains could be used because of the rough country, and every pound of provisions for man and beast had to be transported on pack animals. A man literally carried his life in his hand. To fall behind when ill or in the delirium of thirst meant hellish torture for the unfortunate soldier. Every man in that campaign who survived ought to have a monument."

ERNEST TREPANIER OF DES MOINES

Leaving Hurriedly for Home.

STRANGE STORY of a MIDNIGHT MARRIAGE and a FIGHT for a FORTUNE REVEALED in LETTERS MARKED "EXHIBIT A"

California Young Woman Fighting in the Courts of Iowa for Her Good Name and Some of the Thousands of Ernest Trepanier, the Husband Who Repudiated Her.

DES MOINES, Io., July 17.

Special to the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

ETHEL WILSON TREPANIER of San Diego, Cal., who, as her husband alleges, was married to him while participating in a Bohemian spree, is fighting in the local courts for a share of the Trepanier fortune in Des Moines. Deserted after four days of married life, she denied that she was so intoxicated when she married Trepanier that she did not know what she was doing and indignantly denies that she is a "common creature or adventuress." But Trepanier, fighting to save his thousands, says he and the young woman, with another couple, were drinking in a San Diego hotel and he did not know he was married until the day after.

Pursuing her erring husband clear across the continent, Mrs. Trepanier, aged 22, beautiful and endowed with many graces and accomplishments, is fighting for her name, her husband and his riches. Trepanier, aged 35, is fighting just as hard to save his thousands.

In the 80's there was no richer or more prominent man in Iowa than Louis Trepanier, dry goods merchant and financier. He was the owner of the richest dry goods house in the state, employed hundreds of assistants and had interests all over the country. Late in the 80's Mr. Trepanier died, without any will, and his estate was divided into thirds. The younger son, Ernest, received one-third of the estate, amounting to fully half a million dollars.

Young Trepanier gave himself over entirely to pleasure. Accomplished, athletic and artistic, he made friends all over the country. But his friends led to dissipation and Ernest Trepanier began dissipating his father's fortune. Trepanier went to California a couple of years ago and invested there. His investments were successful and he cleared up $100,000.

The rest of the story is best told in the appended letters which passed between Trepanier's wife, his mother and the family attorney.

CHAPTER I.

"DEAR MISS WILSON: I received your letter yesterday afternoon. At the same time I received an anonymous letter, stating that my son Ernest, with a party, including your sister, had been drinking and while under the influence of liquor had gone through some ceremony, which I was assured was of no validity. These two letters are the only information which I have received concerning the matter. Ernest was here a week ago, but is now temporarily absent. He did not mention the matter to me. You can hardly appreciate how I deplore the situation. I must talk to Ernest about it and hear his story at the earliest opportunity. He has always had a tendency toward being fast, and during his father's lifetime caused us much trouble and sorrow, and since his father's death and the sale of the store, Ernest has not indulged in any regular business. The result is that he has gone through with what he received from his father's estate, and has no means of supporting himself, much less a wife.

"My eldest son is an invalid and is with me. I have hardly enough to decently take care of myself and him. It seems hard to have this trouble come upon me at such a time. If Ernest was married to your sister and left her and you are correctly informed, his course was certainly inexcusable. Such a thing seems impossible. What can be done I do not know. I cannot speak for Ernest, who is not here. You state of your sister coming here and instituting legal proceedings. While it would be a terrible trial to me to have to endure the notoriety that such a course would cause, if she was wronged I would be the last person to say that she should not obtain reparation if possible. If your understanding of the matter is correct, Ernest ought to live with your sister and make her as good a husband as he can and try to support her as well as he can, if she wishes it, and if she does not he ought not to resist any effort on her part to secure a divorce. In other words, if you are right, Ernest has been grossly wrong and your sister should be righted.

"Yours in sorrow and very nervous,

"MRS. L. TREPANIER.

"Des Moines, May 14, 1901."

CHAPTER II.

"MRS. ANNA M'KAY, 1004 Pine street, San Francisco, Cal.:

"Dear Madam—Your letter of the 2d inst. to Mrs. L. Trepanier of this city has been referred by her to me for answer. I was the attorney for Mr. Trepanier for several years prior to his death and am entirely familiar with their affairs.

"Mrs. Trepanier's eldest son is a hopeless invalid. For some time he had been at sanitariums. Recently Mrs. Trepanier brought him home, where she is now taking care of him, because she could not afford to longer keep him at the sanitarium. She has barely enough money to take care of herself and this son, to whom she is devoting her entire attention.

"Ernest has always been a source of a great deal of anxiety and care to his father and mother. He was always irresponsible in money matters, inclined to drink, and fast in other ways. When Ernest's father died he left no will, and Ernest inherited one-third of the estate. For a time the store was carried on here. It was not carried on successfully, however, and was sold two or three years ago. Since then Ernest has not, to my knowledge, done any work, and he advises me, and I believe it is true, that he has gone through with what he inherited from his father.

"Under these circumstances there is only one course that is possible for Mrs. Trepanier. She cannot take care of both of her sons, and she must take care of the one who is sick, leaving Ernest, who is well, to take care of himself.

"Mrs. Trepanier is a woman of about 60 years, deeply grieved by the loss of her husband and full of anxiety on account of her invalid son, and this in addition has seemed to make her cares almost unendurable. Her mother's affection for her son prompts her to aid Ernest, but she has reached the end of her resources and cannot do it. Consequently she has been compelled to the conclusion, as I have already stated, that she cannot do anything in this affair.

"Under these circumstances it is, of course, impossible for Mrs. Trepanier to make any suggestions as to what it would be wise for your sister to do. I have not attempted to advise Ernest in the matter. It is but fair to you in this connection to say that the first intimation that came to Mrs. Trepanier was in the form of an anonymous letter advising her to give no attention to the matter, as the alleged marriage was unquestionably illegal. Ernest tells that he had been drinking during the day, and that a party, including himself and your sister, occupied a private room in a place in San Diego, Cal., where they were drinking from about 8:30 until 11:30 in the evening, and that the alleged marriage occurred some time later in the night. Ernest states to me that he has no recollection of what occurred after they were drinking together in the place to which I have referred. I hesitate about calling your attention to this matter because I do not wish this letter to appear unkind, but it seems to me better to risk this rather than to fail to state the situation as it has been stated here. The fact is that I do not feel that I myself know, nor do I think that Mrs. Trepanier feels that she knows, just what happened or whether there was a valid marriage or not.

"If there was a valid marriage, your sister is, of course, entitled to have Ernest live with her and support her. This is a right, however, which the courts cannot enforce. He has never demonstrated that he could earn a living for himself and has always been extravagant and fast. Unless he is made over into a new man entirely dissimilar from what he has been heretofore, he will turn out to be entirely worthless. If he had any money I should insist upon investigating this matter thoroughly, and, if it turned out that the marriage was legal, upon his making proper provision for your sister, but he has not even money enough to make such an investigation. If his mother had any money I am sure that she would be glad to do this, but she has none. For the last year I have made no charge for such services as I have rendered her, simply because I do not feel that she could afford to pay for them. This whole performance seems to me to have been most unfortunate and ill-advised.

"It does not seem possible that two people who knew so little of each other as Ernest and your sister would ever in their senses have undertaken such a thing. The only question is to make the best of a bad situation. In view of all the circumstances, their slight acquaintance, the way this marriage, if there was one, occurred, and the very early desertion of your sister, it seems to me impossible to assume that your sister can entertain any very deep regard for Ernest. In view of his lack of means and his habits, it is substantially certain that he could not support her and that they could not live happily together. If they should attempt to, the only thing that could be expected would be a repetition of the present situation. This is upon the assumption that your sister could induce Ernest to return to her, which seems to me extremely improbable, in view of the slight acquaintance and consequently the impossibility of a strong hold upon his affections.

"There are two courses open to your sister. She may follow Ernest and endeavor to compel him to live with her. This would be a failure, even if it were temporarily successful. I know of no case where this has been made to work, where the facts are as they are here. Of course the notoriety would be unfortunate and also I think that while no one, whatever the circumstance, would do anything but condemn the desertion of your sister by Ernest, your sister if she sought to compel him to return would lose much of the sympathy that she would otherwise have, because while most people condemn a man for deserting a woman, they also do not expect a woman to want to live with a man who has to be compelled to do this.

"The other course open to your sister is to my mind the more dignified one and the one that will best tend to preserve her good name, which is the important thing from her point of view. This is for her to say that she married Ernest hastily without as much information about him as she should have obtained and that had she known what she knows now she would never have married him at all and that (if she wishes to) she refused to live with him longer and that as soon as she can legally do so she proposes to get a divorce and have nothing further to do with him.

"In other words, from her point of view to maintain herself it is essential that she create an impression substantially that she repudiated Ernest instead of creating the impression that he repudiated her, and that notwithstanding this she still sought after him.

"I do not want you to think that I do not appreciate the suffering on the part of your sister that has been caused by this situation, nor do I wish you to think that I do not regard Ernest's conduct as reprehensible. I know that your sister has suffered and whatever the facts may be as to the marriage I think that Ernest's conduct was wholly indefensible from an ethical point of view. These are the consequences which we expect would ensue where people are guilty of such rashness as existed here. While the matter is most unfortunate, I have not dilated upon this phase of it because it has been done and cannot be undone, so that the only thing now is to devise the course that will minimize the suffering and annoyance that is inevitable.

Yours very truly,

"N. T. GUERNSEY.

CHAPTER III.

"MR. N. T. GUERNSEY, Attorney-at-Law.

"Dear Sir: Your favor was received in due time. I thank you for your kind advice. Enclosed you will find a copy of my marriage certificate. Also of the license. This, I hope, will prove conclusively to you the legality of our marriage. As for Ernest's version of the affair, it is false and perfectly in keeping with the despicable and unmanly way in which he has acted throughout the whole affair.

"Mrs. Trepanier has my sincere sympathy and no one can regret more than I the fact that she has had to suffer more on account of our unfortunate marriage.

"Will you kindly show the copies to Mrs. Trepanier, as, even though I may never see her, I would not wish any one to think that I were a common creature or an adventuress.

"Sincerely yours,

"ETHEL WILSON TREPANIER."

"San Francisco, Cal., June 17, 1901."

CHAPTER IV.

"MRS. ETHEL WILSON TREPANIER, 1004 Pine street, San Francisco, Cal.

"Dear Madame: I have just returned from a trip East and find here yours of the 16th. ult. I shall be pleased to show the copy to Mrs. Trepanier, as you suggest. Also, if I can aid you any in this, as it seems to me, most unfortunate transaction, I shall be glad to do so.

"Yours very truly,

"N. T. GUERNSEY.

"Des Moines, July 1, 1901."

CHAPTER V.

THE wife of four days was not content to take the advice of the legal adviser of her husband and her husband's mother. She had good reason to know that the Trepanier thousands had not all been dissipated. The mother made yearly trips of several months' duration to Europe and lived magnificently while at home. Ernest spent great sums himself; there must be some sourse of income.

Mrs. Trepanier began suit for divorce against her husband in the Iowa courts, at the same time suing Trepanier and his mother for $100,000 alimony. She indignantly denied that she was drunk when she married Trepanier, but sends to the courts a certificate from the man who married her, M. B. Anderson, a justice of the peace of San Diego, and the statements of her witnesses, Jessie Julian and Tom Poste, who Trepanier says, formed the other couple on the drinking bout that ended in the wedding, but who the wife says, were the legal witnesses to the legal wedding.

Young Mrs. Trepanier assures the courts that she knew Trepanier for two years before they were married; that they were married properly in San Diego, Cal., April 27, 1901, and that Ernest left her, at Los Angeles, four days after the wedding. She alleges that fifteen days after he left her he transferred all his property, of every kind, without consideration, to his mother; so the mother is made a party to the suit and $100,000 alimony is demanded of mother and son.

The Trepanier divorce case will be tried in the Des Moines courts next fall. It will show then which is right, husband or wife; whether there was a Bohemian spree ending in a wedding or a courtship and marriage.

In the meantime the Trepaniers are spending their fortune, and Ethel Wilson Trepanier, deserted wife, is working for her humble living.

DENVER SUMMER RESORT HAS A NAUTICAL GHOST

Phantom Seen Nightly on a Big Lake Chills the Blood of Pleasure Seekers.

DENVER, Col., July 18.

Special to the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

MANHATTAN BEACH has a ghost. Not the one near Coney Island that is "swept by ocean breezes," but a resort in the vicinity of Denver, Col., where a man's head with a long beard skims over the surface of a big lake and frightens scores of persons nightly.

Those who tell of seeing the ghost grow indignant when their veracity is questioned. At least once every night the phantom is seen on the big lake, and it sends the cold chills shivering down the back of every one who sees it. In fact, this Denver ghost is really more harrowing to the nerves than was the famous buggy-riding ghost of St. Louis a number of years ago.

William Randle, the engineer in charge of the steamboat on the lake, was the first to discover the "ghost." When he told his story he was laughed at. He said nothing more for some time, but kept nightly vigils and figured out that exactly at midnight the ghostly visitor appeared with strict regularity. Then he took John Burns, the night watchman, into his confidence and asked Burns to hold watch with him.

A few nights ago Burns and Randle rowed quietly to the middle of the lake, then they dipped their oars, allowing themselves to drift with the wind. Randle had observed that the strange specter appeared in about the middle of the lake. It has the form of a man's head with a long, rough beard, and its appearance was always accompanied by an unearthly scraping and rattling sound.

The pair had probably drifted along for 15 minutes when Randle clutched his companion by the arm and pointed straight ahead.

"There it is!" he cried in a hoarse whisper.

Burns looked, and sure enough there was a ghostly head with an unkempt, wet and tangled beard, and there was no mistaking the likeness of the man.

Randle picked up the oars and pulled in the direction of the head. The nearer the boatmen came to the object the more distinct it was to them, but when they were within about 100 feet of it the head suddenly disappeared. A search of from 15 to 20 minutes revealed nothing and then they pulled back to shore.

The following night Burns, Randle and J. T. Bevell, the head gardener, stood watch. They again saw the image. Watchman Burns quickly drew his revolver. He took careful aim and fired. The object in the distance dropped beneath the surface and the men in the boat declare a mocking laugh went out over the water. They hurriedly rowed in the direction where the apparition had disappeared and cast about carefully this second time, but their efforts were all in vain.

And the mystery of the strange head is still unsolved. People go out now at night to look for it and most of them come back with the assertion that the discoverers of the ghost must have indulged in a dre The three men, however, declare they w not mistaken.

In Greece the death penalty is said to often pronounced, but the difficulty of obtaining executioners was for a long time almost insuperable. It was at last surmounted by giving to a murderer the choice between his own death or acceptance of the office of permanent executioner. The man lives alone in an old tower built by Venetians on an islet outside the port of Nauplia, where necessaries are taken to him every morning by the boatman, who is careful to exchange no word with him. Twice a year a steamer calls for him and his instruments of death, and he leaves upon a tour of executions.

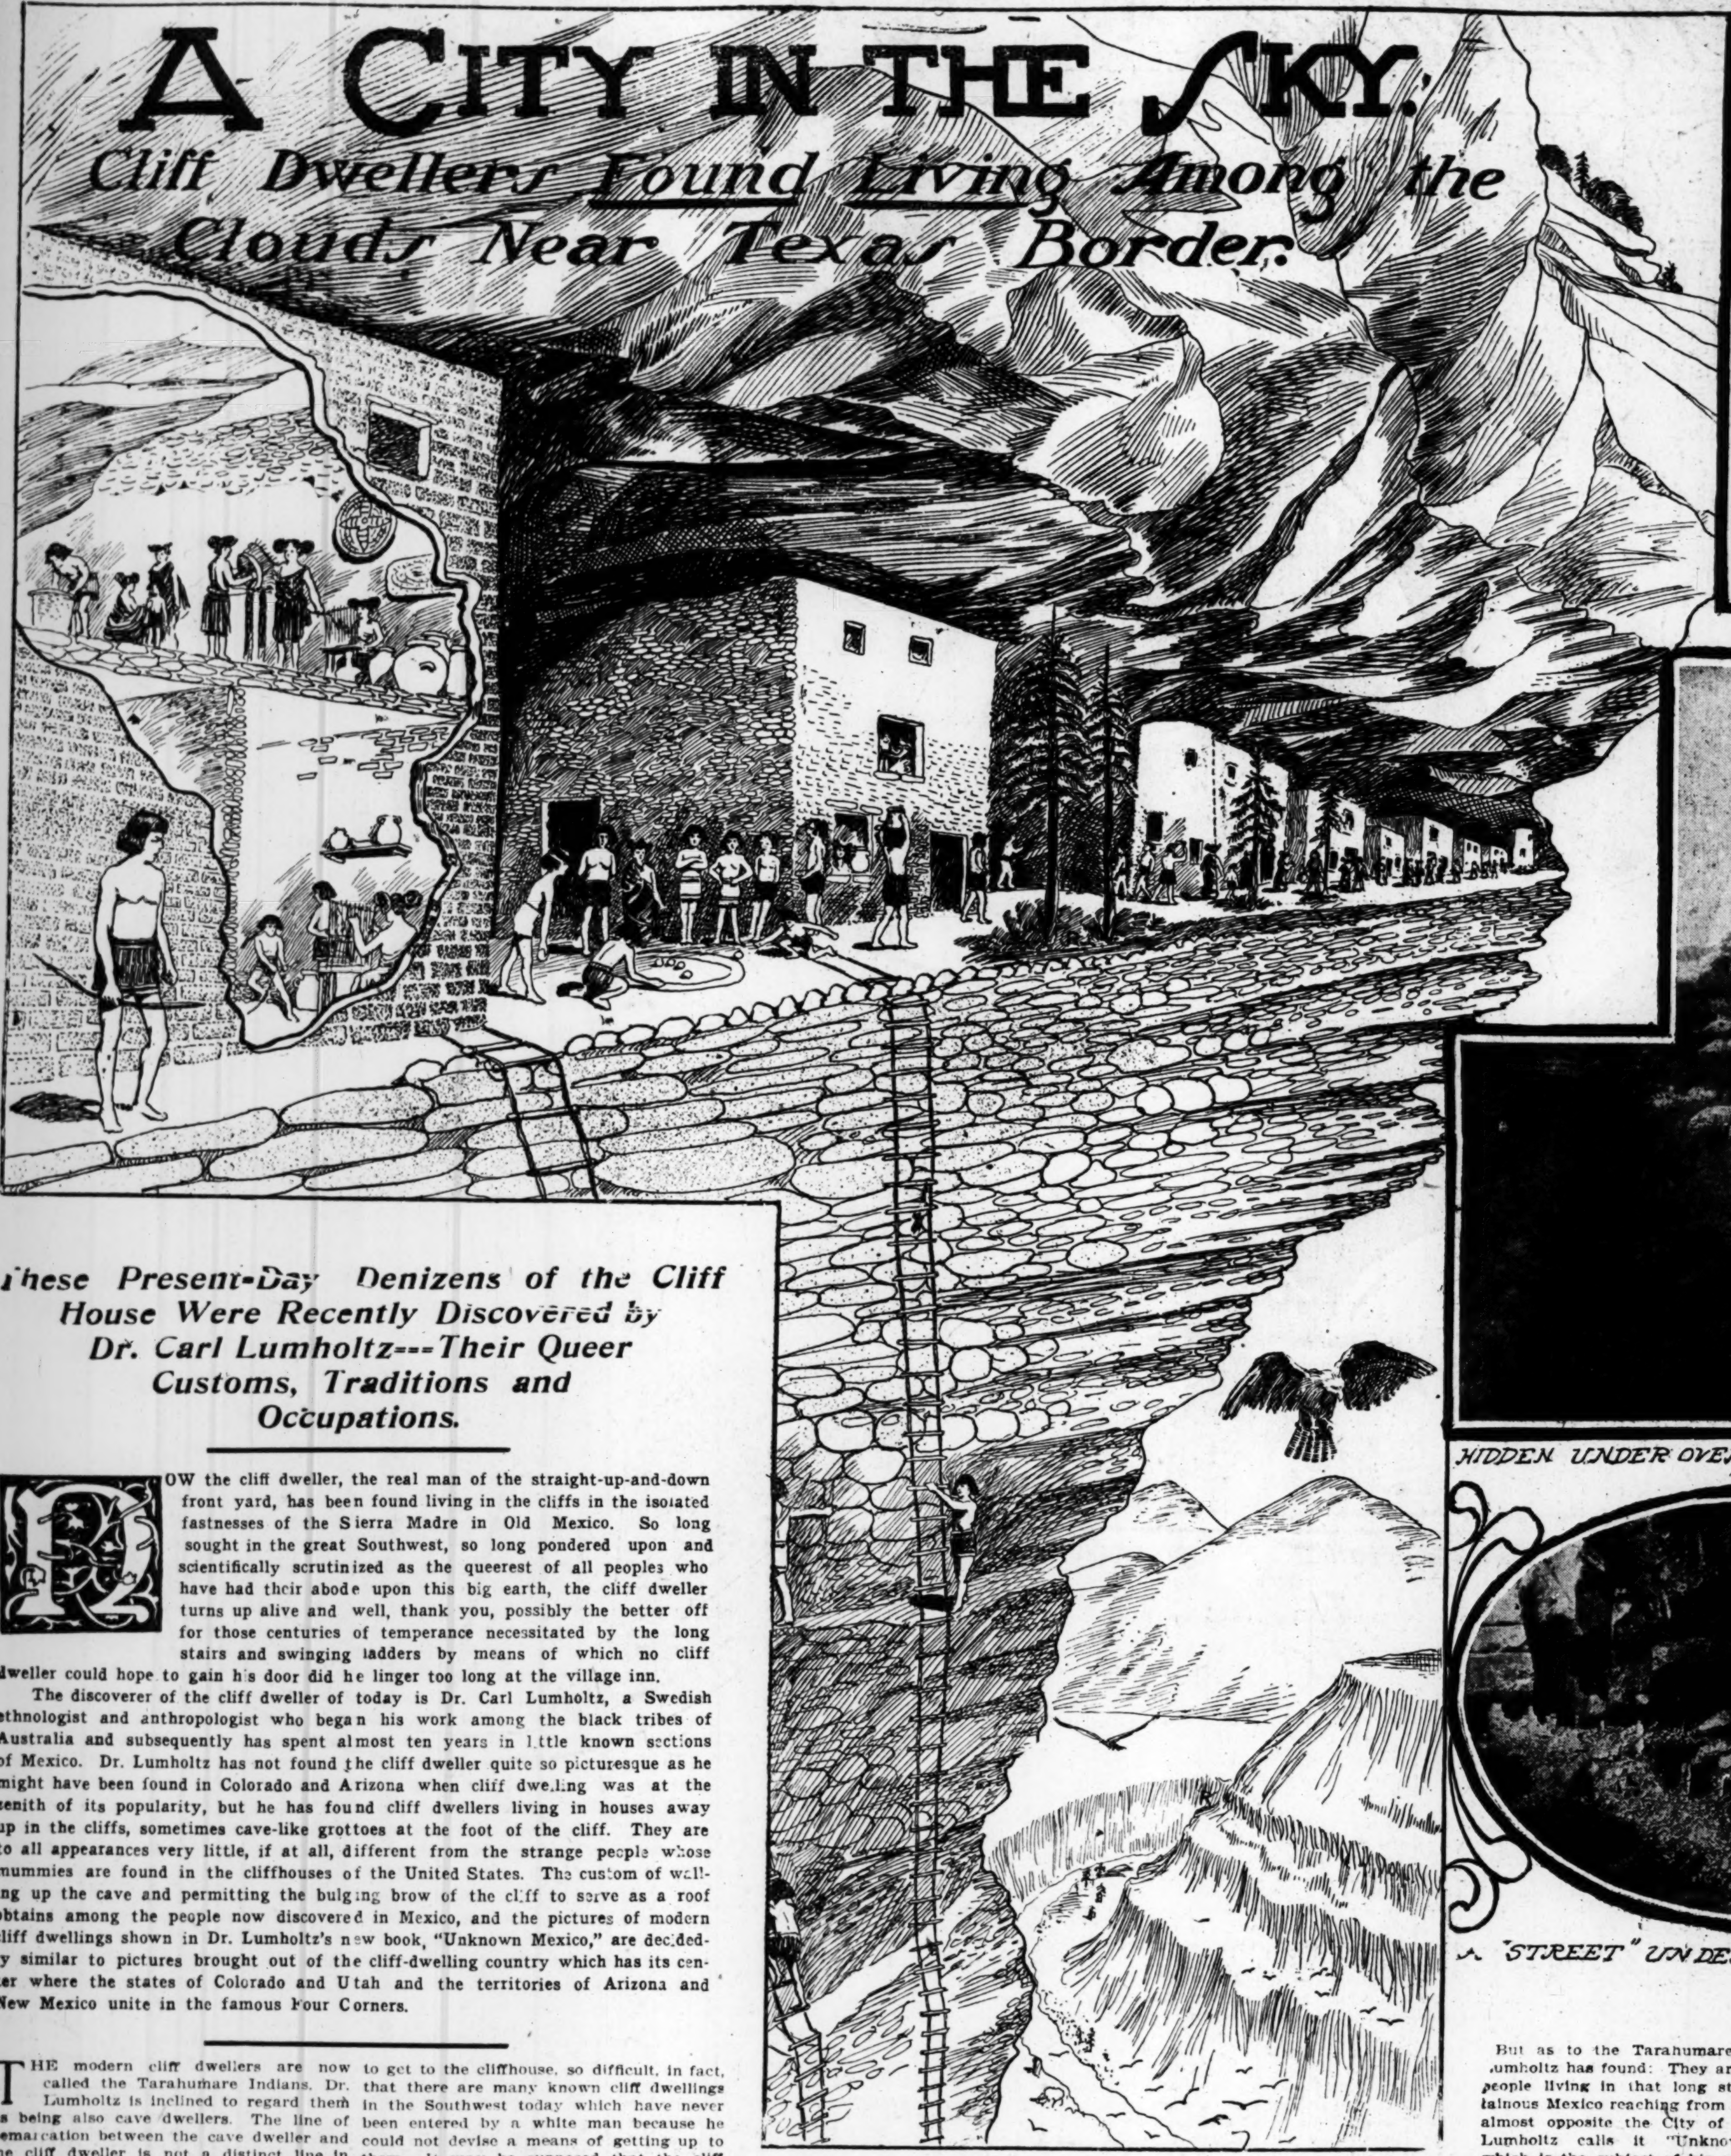
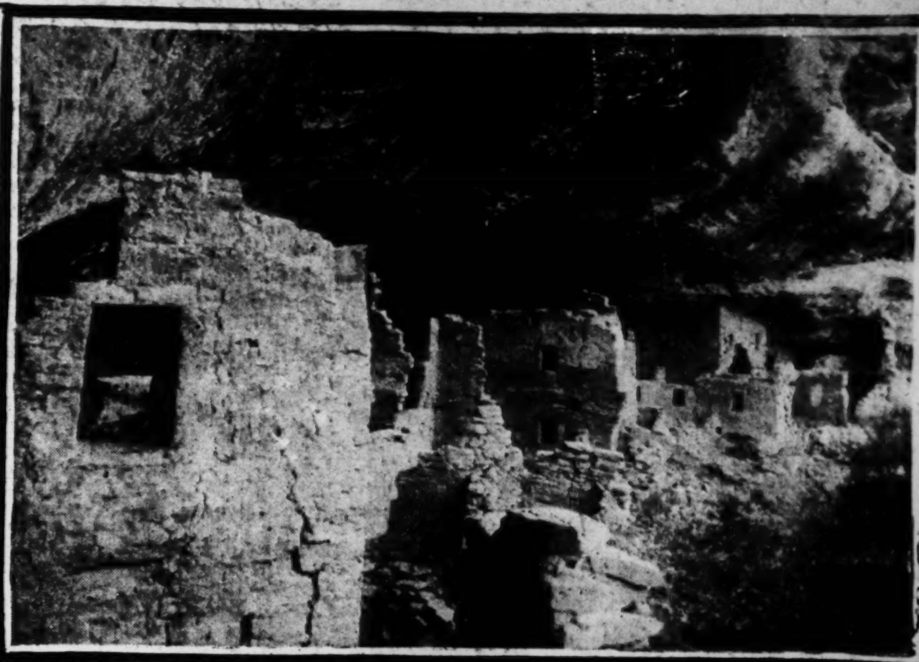
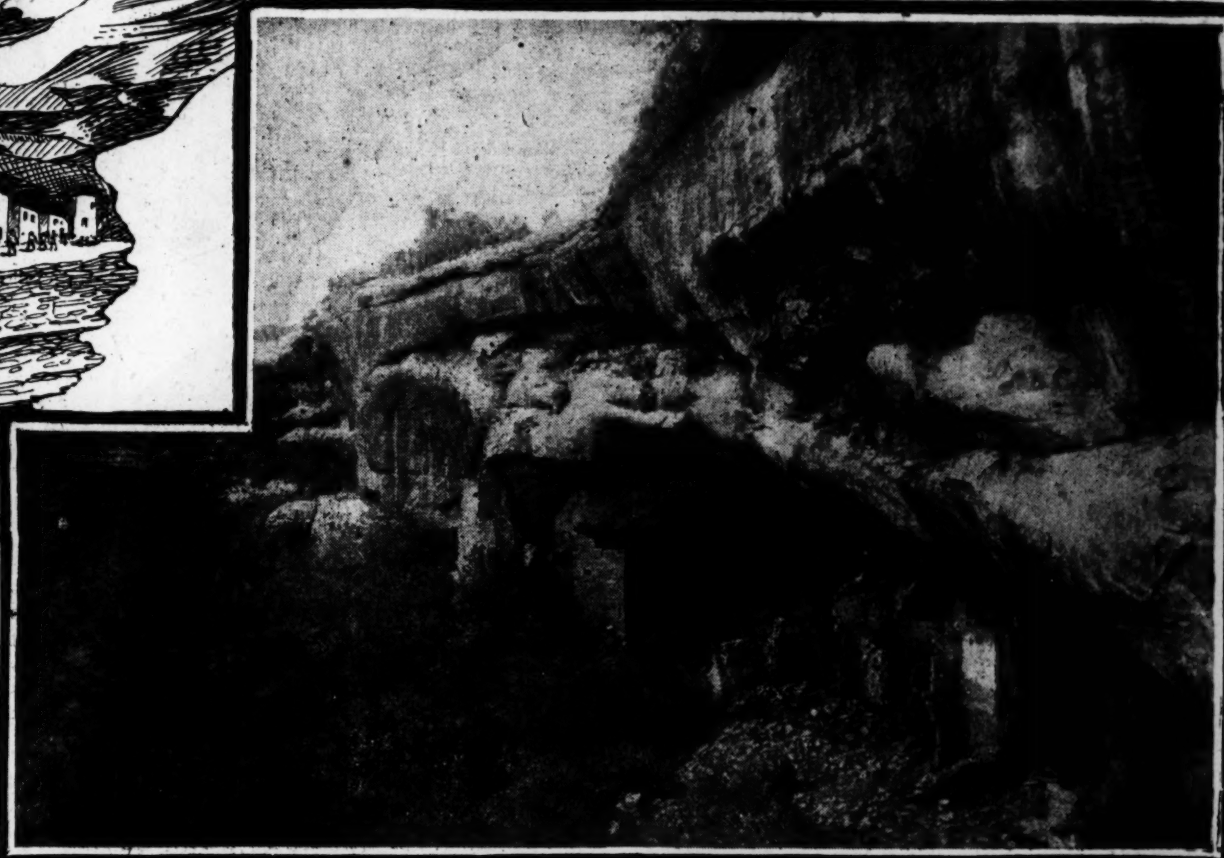
A CITY IN THE SKY.

Cliff Dwellers Found Living Among the Clouds Near Texas Border.





RUINED CLIFF DWELLINGS IN COLORADO.



HIDDEN UNDER OVERHANGING ROCK AND INACCESSIBLE FROM THE GROUND.

A "STREET" UNDER A LEDGE OF ROCK.

These Present-Day Denizens of the Cliff House Were Recently Discovered by Dr. Carl Lumholtz---Their Queer Customs, Traditions and Occupations.

NOW the cliff dweller, the real man of the straight-up-and-down front yard, has been found living in the cliffs in the isolated fastnesses of the Sierra Madre in Old Mexico. So long sought in the great Southwest, so long pondered upon and scientifically scrutinized as the queerest of all peoples who have had their abode upon this big earth, the cliff dweller turns up alive and well, thank you, possibly the better off for those centuries of temperance necessitated by the long stairs and swinging ladders by means of which no cliff dweller could hope to gain his door did he linger too long at the village inn.

The discoverer of the cliff dweller of today is Dr. Carl Lumholtz, a Swedish ethnologist and anthropologist who began his work among the black tribes of Australia and subsequently has spent almost ten years in little known sections of Mexico. Dr. Lumholtz has not found the cliff dweller quite so picturesque as he might have been found in Colorado and Arizona when cliff dwelling was at the zenith of its popularity, but he has found cliff dwellers living in houses away up in the cliffs, sometimes cave-like grottoes at the foot of the cliff. They are to all appearances very little, if at all, different from the strange people whose mummies are found in the cliffhouses of the United States. The custom of walling up the cave and permitting the bulging brow of the cliff to serve as a roof obtains among the people now discovered in Mexico, and the pictures of modern cliff dwellings shown in Dr. Lumholtz's new book, "Unknown Mexico," are decidedly similar to pictures brought out of the cliff-dwelling country which has its center where the states of Colorado and Utah and the territories of Arizona and New Mexico unite in the famous Four Corners.

THE modern cliff dwellers are now called the Tarahumare Indians. Dr. Lumholtz is inclined to regard them as being also cave dwellers. The line of demarcation between the cave dweller and the cliff dweller is not a distinct line in the Southwest. The one lived in a cave; the other also lived in a cave, but he supplemented the comforts and appearances of his cave by building a house therein. The house he built in the air had no roof. It was sheltered by the overhanging cliff. There are instances, too, where his house was not much more elaborate than were the rude walls which the cave dweller built. So that, all in all, it is not reasonable to suppose that the cave dwellers and the cliff dwellers represent distinct periods of human occupation in the Southwest.

The Tarahumares which Dr. Lumholtz has found living in crevices far up in the Sierra Madre doubtless have a very good reason for coming more frequently to the ground than the ancient cliff man of Arizona had. The one lived in a day when the warfare of other tribes made it necessary for the cliff man to stay in his home as far out of reach as possible; no such necessity exists today, even in the isolated districts of northern Mexico. The modern cliff dwellers frequently descend by ladders and have winter homes on the ground.

The ancient cliff house of the Southwest pparently was not built in a time of peace. , as supposed by almost every one who s studied the question, the Moki Inans of Arizona are descendants of the iff dwellers, it is quite likely that they nly abandoned their eyrie-like houses when it became safe for them to come down and live on the ground.

Such a condition might have been brought about by other Indian wars which gave the enemies of the cliff dweller no time to make war in the cliff-dwelling country. It might have been brought about, also, by a plague among the cliff dwellers' enemies of the desert; the exodus of these enemies to another part of the country—or, in fact, any one of a score of reasons which might be reasonably supposed as affording the cliff dweller an opportunity to come down from his roost.

However delightful it may be as a ruin, the cliffhouse necessarily could not have been a howling success as a human habitat from any other point of view than that of the solicitous father who did not like to have his enemies come in and tear off the family scalps. It was a difficult matter to get to the cliffhouse, so difficult, in fact, that there are many known cliff dwellings in the Southwest today which have never been entered by a white man because he could not devise a means of getting up to them. It may be supposed that the cliff dweller had a singlar nimbleness at cliff climbing, and that he hung rope ladders, cut niches for hands and feet and resorted to other devices not equaled by any modern fire escapes.

There are cliff dwellings in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado river, and in other canyons as well, that are half a mile straight up from the bottom of the canyon. The cliff dweller's wife doubtless was possessed of quite as much tenderness toward her children as any American mother possesses today, so it may be imagined in what anxiety she busied herself with her household affairs while the children were playing "Run sheep, run," out in the front yard. Many cliff dwellings are in villages and small cities, however, like that now found by Dr. Lumholtz.

The cliff dwellers were afflicted with much the same physical weaknesses that are characteristic of humankind today. They required water, wood and food. All of these necessarily had to be lifted up to the houses in the side of the great wall. It was before the day of the derrick. There were no hoisting engines. Alas! It was a plain case of tote and carry, and it is not hard to see in imagery the finish of the awkward boy who was so unfortunate as to tip over the newly brought oyer of water.

Considering these things, it must have been that the cliff dweller built his house high in the cliffs by no choice of his own. He had to do it. Any morning he might be awakened by the warwhoops of his enemies. Did his house sit at the foot of the cliff, it was "all day" with him and his; but did it sit high up, like the nest of a swallow under the eaves, it was only necessary to pull up the rope ladders and sit up there and make faces at the invading host all the day long.

Naturally, there came a time when the enemies of the cliff dweller were compelled to desist in their warfare upon him. Then he came down from his cliff. As the growing aridity of the Southwest compelled great numbers of the desert people to go south into Mexico, as it is supposed the Aztecs did, the cliff dwellers encroached a little upon the desert and in time became a desert people themselves. Thus the Moki are found today in the red and redhot desert of north central Arizona. They are like the men and women whose mummies are found in the cliff houses. They have the same head and face and hair; they make the same kind of pottery and use the same primitive household utensils. They are almost wholly without that martial spirit which is characteristic of such tribes as the Navajos and the Utes, and more especially of the Apache, who lifted his hand against every man, and against whom every man's hand was lifted in turn.

The cliff dweller was like the Moki in this. He was not a fighter. He went to wonderful lengths to find a refuge from his foes. His heels must have been about all his enemies saw of him for a considerable period of time. But the cliff dweller was a No. 1 defender. He made of defense an art. There are numbers of places where he built houses which a boy with a good club could have held against the attacks of any number of invaders, so well had the builder seen to it that only one man could enter at a time. In other places the cliff houses were absolutely impregnable when the rope ladders were pulled up.

But as to the Tarahumares, which Dr. Lumholtz has found: They are a numerous people living in that long strip of mountainous Mexico reaching from Arizona down almost opposite the City of Mexico. Dr. Lumholtz calls it "Unknown Mexico," which is the subject of his excellent book. Not all of the Tarahumares live in cliff and cavehouses. It is only an element of them that retains this ancient sort of home. The tribe is widely scattered through a portion of the Sierra Madres, where there are few things so rarely seen as a white man. The Lumholtz party was the first that ever penetrated into the mountains. The isolation of the Indians was complete. There were portions of the tribe, which so dwelt to themselves far up in the villages in the sky that they scarcely knew of any world beyond their own mountains. Citizens of Mexico, they knew nothing of the Mexican government. They bowed to the caciques and their tribal gods, and to these only.

Dr. Lumholtz went into Mexico with the hope of finding the cliff dweller just as he once lived in the great cliff houses of Colorado. He was quite sure the race had migrated south and would be found still living in cliffs in that long strip of western Mexico which up to that time no white man had explored. His expectations have now been fulfilled. He succeeded in finding the cliff dweller, but not the cliff dweller of old. He had descended to a point near the foot of the cliff. However, he is still a cliff dweller, and in some instances his houses in clusters are high above the ground.

But the days when men built in the cliffs such things as the Cliff Palace, a village of 145 rooms in a Colorado cliff, are no more, unless, perchance, there is something of the sort still undiscovered.

YOUNG ST. LOUISAN A PORTO RICAN STATESMAN

Frederick L. Cornwall, the Only American Member of the Porto Rico House of Representatives, Revisits His Former Home.

MR. FREDERICK L. CORNWALL of Mayaguez, Porto Rico, who came to visit his former home in St. Louis last week, is the only American member of the Porto Rican House of Representatives. Mr. Cornwall practiced law in St. Louis until 1899, when he went to Porto Rico to practice his profession. He is still under 30, and is serving his second term of two years as a member of the island legislature.

Porto Rico occupies a unique position politically. It is neither a state nor a territory. This easternmost possession of the United States is defined by act of Congress as belonging to, but not of, the Union; that is, the constitution does not extend over the island.

The legislative assembly is organized under rules practically identical with our state and territorial law-making bodies. There are two houses. The upper house is called the executive commission. In Porto Rico the legislative and executive functions are combined. Governor Hunt has the veto power, but the chief executive functions reside in the Legislature.

The upper house is made up of six executive officials of the island, all of whom are Americans. They are the auditor, the treasurer, the secretary, the attorney-general, the commissioner of the interior and the commissioner of education. The other five members are natives appointed by Governor Hunt.

There are 35 members in the lower house. Thirty-four of these are natives. Mr. Cornwall states that another American was chosen at the late election, but did not qualify. Most of the representatives are lawyers.

The Republicans carried five of the seven Legislative districts, electing 25 members. All members are elected at large for their respective districts. The Federal party elected the other ten representatives. The platforms of the two parties, Mr. Cornwall says, are much the same, the chief difference between the parties being that the Republicans are administration and the Federals are anti-administration. There is little wrangling between the parties.

"We have no boodling in the Porto Rican legislature," said Representative Cornwall, and he added, "there is not much to boodle for, as a matter of fact. But our law-making body is clean-handed and progressive, working for the public weal."

The legislative assembly meets annually at San Juan, the capital of the island. Each session is allowed 60 working days. All the proceedings are carried on in both English and Spanish. When Representative Cornwall arises to deliver a speech in English, a Spanish interpreter stands at his elbow, translating each sentence as he speaks it. Mr. Cornwall says that this sometimes confuses him and causes him to forget the thread of his discourse. All the bills are printed in both languages and read in both English and Spanish by the reading clerk. The laws are printed in both languages.

"Within 25 years," says Mr. Cornwall, "I believe English will be the language of Porto Rico and Spanish will practically disappear. We now have 1000 public schools on the island, in each of which English is taught, and the children show a surprising aptitude for the language. The next generation on the island, I feel confident, will speak English in preference to Spanish, or rather the patois which is now spoken."

Porto Rico has adopted the penal code and the code of criminal procedure of the state of California, which supplant the Napoleonic code. The judges, most of whom are native lawyers, seem to take to the new code with excellent conformity.

Since the American occupation, Mr. Cornwall says, the sugar and tobacco industries have about doubled. These, with coffee, are the chief industries of the island. Many Americans have settled on the island and gone into the orange-growing business. There are now about 150 well-appointed orange groves, and the owners are making money. There are about 4000 Americans on the island.

Mr. Cornwall finds St. Louis oppressively hot. He says they have practically no hot weather in Porto Rico, the trade winds always supplying fine breezes. There is little humidity, and the young lawyer declares that he can stand the weather there much better than the kind which he now encounters in the states.

Porto Rico is the most densely populated part of the United States. The island is about 100 miles long by 40 wide, and there are 1,000,000 people upon it. Missouri is approximately 15 times as large as Porto Rico and has only about three times the population.

Owing to the dense population land sells at a very high figure in the island. From $40 to $200 an acre is the price, according to location and other conditions.

"Porto Rico offers to the man with capital fine advantages," says Mr. Cornwall, "but very little opportunity for a person without money."

Mr. Corwall states that there has been but one case of yellow fever on the island in the past two or three years, and that the climate is exceedingly healthful.

In the private chapel at Windsor Castle, which is octagonal in shape, with a lantern roof, the King's pew is in the gallery, in the division next to the organ loft. The household sit below, the women on one side and the men on the other. There is a choir of three men and two boys, drawn from St. George's Chapel.

REMARKABLE PLANT BEING INTRODUCED IN THE ARID WEST.

FOG fruit is the odd name of a remarkable plant that is being distributed throughout the West through enthusiastic agency of the Arizona experiment station. This plant may have taken its name from the fact that it can exist with the minimum amount of moisture. In any event, this characteristic constitutes its chief value. It is not advocated as a forage plant, as animals do not like it, but its drouth resisting qualities and endurance render it of exceptional value in the semi-arid western states as a soil binder.

During the summer of last year a growth of fog fruit successfully maintained itself on an Arizona mesa for eight months with less than two inches of rainfall. As a lawn plant, where the usual grasses can only be grown with great difficulty, the fog fruit is a very desirable substitute. It maintains a compact mass of green foliage, interspersed with small purple and white flowers, giving it the general appearance of a clover lawn. The fact that it does not require constant applications of the lawn mower to keep it in presentable condition is another valuable characteristic of the plant.

Chief of all, however, are its soil-binding properties, and for preventing the washing of reservoir and storm water embankments in dry regions it has on equal.

Western farmers welcome the plant.

WALKING THROUGH THE FLOOD TO BE MARRIED.

ansas Floods Delayed the Wedding, But the Gallant Iowan Who Had Gone to War and Won Honors for Love's Sweet Sake Surmounted all Obstacles and Finally Reached His Bride.

KANSAS floods last month delayed a wedding in Pennsylvania which was the culmination of an Iowa romance of love nd war, in which one brief chapter was enacted in St. Louis, when young Orson Early of Des Moines came down to Jefferson Barracks as a recruit in the volunteer army that went to Cuba during the Spanish-American war. The man is now First Lieutenant Early, United States Army, stationed at Fort Riley, Kan., and he is happily married to his childhood sweetheart.

Here follows the story of the lieutenant's wooing. It tells how the young man was scorned by the girl he had loved from boyhood, because other young men had enlisted and he remained at home; how he straightway joined the army, fought valiantly in Cuba, was mentioned in the reports, and finally commissioned in the regular army, and now he has just claimed his bride, after vicissitudes in the flood that were no less trying than the hardships of war.

STALWART and sturdy, with eyes shining and with eager face, Orson Early presented himself before the recruiting officer of the United States army in Des Moines, not long after the outbreak of the Spanish-American war. Of all the hundreds of brave Iowans who enlisted in those stirring days there was none so anxious to start immediately for the front as was he. The examination for enlistment was soon passed, and with a squad of raw recruits Early was rushed to Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, where he was equipped with the uniform and accouterments of a private soldier, and started on his Santiago journey.

Impatient still, while his comrades chaffed and jested and laughed, Early fretted his days away, longing for the fray.

"What's the matter with Early?" his comrades asked themselves, but none could tell the answer.

"Watch that fellow when he gets into battle," said the captain, however, for he had seen and drilled many men.

"He's a grandstander," complained the drill sergeant.

"You're wrong there, O'Rourke," replied the officer, "that lad has the making of a soldier in him; he'll fight like the very devil."

It had been the crisis of Orson Early's life when he enlisted in the army. A week previous he had had no intention of resigning his peaceful clerical occupation to don Uncle Sam's blue and help whip the Spanish. It was all on account of a girl. How often did her picture come before his eyes as Early lay on the Cuban fields, watching the twinkling stars in the southern sky; and as he charged into battle, with bullets plopping and singing the soldier's "Recessional" all around him.

Orson Early and Helen Boggs were reared together in Des Moines. They were neighbors, playmates, schoolmates, comrades and sweethearts.

"O, it's Orson Early and Helen Boggs," was the neighbors' simple comment when they saw a pair hurrying along the street, armed with picnic hampers and hammocks, or when they saw a pair of lovers strolling homeward in the moonlight.

Orson had duly proposed to Helen (it all seemed such an unnecessary and formal matter; they had been sweethearts all their lives) and had been accepted and daily they planned for their life together and their home.

Then came the Spanish-American war. Scores of eager, loyal Iowans rushed to the enlisting station and gave themselves to the cause. But Orson Early, at work and still clinging to Helen Boggs, remained at home while the others marched away, with flaring banner and throbbing drum. Then came a thunderclap.

"It's all off, Orson," wrote Helen. "I shall always respect you, but the dream of love is ended. We can never be anything more to one another than friends."

Orson's eyes filled when he read the note; it was the end of all his hopes. But he had the spirit of a fighter in him, and he was not one to give up at the first attack. That night he called on Helen and long the pair talked over their former love.

Helen was obdurate. Other girls' sweethearts were going off to war, but she alone of her clique had one who remained behind. It was this which had finally determined her against Orson.

"Is there nothing I can do to make you change your mind?" pleaded Orson.

"Yes, go to the front and win your spurs fighting for your country, then come back and tell me you love me and I'll give you your answer and it will be yes."

The next day Orson Early presented himself before the recruiting sergeant.

The American army, under Gen. Shafter, lay encamped before Santiago. The hot July sun poured down upon them. Around them swarmed and swooped great carrion birds, waiting for their prey.

The order for the advance was given; the carnage began. Roosevelt's Rough Riders made their undying charge; all along the line Shafter's men stormed the heights and swept the vales. Night came down on a scene of carnage. Hundreds lay dead and dying; homes were that day bereaved; mothers made childless; wives husbandless.

Yet there was one heart that was singing for joy. Sergt. Orson Early lay in the trenches, and, laughing up at the southern stars that night, he whispered the name of Helen Boggs over and over again to himself. He was winning his spurs; there was no braver fighter or more conspicuous soldier that day than he. Already the chevrons were on his arms, promotions came early and easily in those necessitous days.

Finally the volunteers returned to their homes; heroes were given commissions in the regular army. Scores of volunteers became regulars and wore the epaulettes which took the place of the chevrons.

Among the list was Orson Early of Iowa, first lieutenant of regulars.

Back in her quiet home Helen Boggs waited. Her heart was true to Orson Early. It was all shame because he had not gone to the front that had made her give him up for a time. But when he went away, so eager and so manly, she had hoped for the best. He did not write to her; that was one of the terms of their compact. But she felt sure he was fighting for her, and every day she scanned the news reports to see if there was word of her lover.

One glorious day the news came that American arms were victorious. And in one corner of the page, obscure, it is true, was mention of Sergt. Orson Early of Iowa.

Then came silence again, but the heart of Helen Boggs sang in unison with the heart of Orson Early. Then came the still more glorious news: Orson Early of Iowa was commissioned lieutenant in the regular army. That night Helen Boggs sang for very joy; she could not contain her jubilation. The next day there came a telegram. It was from Lieut. Orson Early, U. S. A. In reply went one single word that made the very wires sing. It was just the one word:

"Yes."

The Early-Boggs wedding was set for an early June date. At her new home in Finleyville, Pa., Helen and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Craighead Boggs, made their preparations and awaited the gladsome day.

Out in Fort Riley, Kan., Lieut. Early impatiently awaited the day, going about his duties, wearing the epaulettes which had won his bride-elect. He had made application for a leave of absence and the leave was granted.

But Fate was still unkind to Early. Kansas was swept with the worst storm in the history of that state. Every river was out of its banks, all trains were washed away or delayed, all communication with the outside world suspended. That was on May 30, the day Lieut. Orson Early was to start on his long journey to claim his bride.

Three days Early was kept imprisoned in the fort by the storm; there was no way to send the bride-elect word; Early sat down and gnawed at his finger nails and pictured her waiting for him as she had waited in the trying days of the war. Finally he applied to the commanding officer for permission to start out and try to cross the state. Consent was given.

On June 3 Lieut. Orson Early set forth from Fort Riley, with a train of pack mules, and three brother officers. They were determined to reach the point where the break in communication and traffic had occurred.

All that day the four battled with the floods. Swimming part of the way, floundering in mud and slime, now under the mules' bellies in the water and saved only by the prompt action of their comrades; now perilously perched on the banks of storm-swollen and flood-maddened rivers; now spurring hopefully forward only to draw rein in a few minutes on the bank of another bayou; all day men and mules fought and struggled, giving up in despair, then nerved to another trial.

When night fell they had made but 18 miles; Fort Riley was only two good hours' ride to the rear. The only shelter from the elements that night was a deserted cabin, near Riley Center.

The next day he reached Riley Center and sent a telegram to Helen Boggs, announcing that he was coming, but was still fighting with the floods. That telegram reached the bride-elect on the day set for the wedding.

As Lieut. Early and his brother officers were getting ready for the next day's journey a worktrain on the Rock Island road was made up for an emergency journey eastward. Early boarded this and made the journey by it to Clay Center, Kan., where his pack train was to follow him overland.

At Clay Center the impatient officer caught a Union Pacific train, which took him to Belleville, Kan., the train having been delayed one week by the flood.

Here the way seemed blocked again, but help came in another work train which was equipped for a trial journey over a submerged track. Early again started eastward. The train tugged gallantly for a few miles and then gave up. Early was stranded in the midst of a swamp of mud and water. But he continued the journey by foot, carrying his baggage, walking over trestles which swayed over maddened rivers, clambering down deep cuts, climbing up high embankments.

Lieut. Early finaly reached Omaha. A transcontinental train was caught—and then on to Finleyville and Helen Boggs.

There was great rejoicing in Finleyville when the telegram came from Omaha that Lieut. Early was safe on his way. The day of the wedding had opened gloomily Helen's lover and husband-elect had not arrived. Was Fate to deny her to him when he had gone unscathed through the war? Helen Boggs wept the morning of the day she was to wed.

Noon came and no groom; about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when the rooms were being decked for the ceremony, came the telegram from Riley Center; her lover was still hundreds of miles away; he was in danger; the wedding must be postponed.

But at last Lieut. Early reached Finleyville.

"With this ring I thee wed and with all my worldly goods I thee endow."

Standing by the side of Helen Boggs in the family home Lieut. Orson Early took the hand of his bride and repeated these solemn words.

Dr. W. T. Brown of Canonsburg was the clergyman, and in the parlor were half a hundred of the relatives and friends of the families. As he said the words Lieut. Orson Early slipped on the finger of the bride the wedding ring which her great-grandmother had worn.

RECENT CHANGE IN THE DISPOSITION OF THE GRIZZLY BEAR

THERE are numerous reliable statements of grizzly bears having attacked men, but nowadays the grizzly does not seek out his human victims, as there are reliable statements that his forefathers used to do. Neither does he lie in wait and, pouncing upon a hunter, tear him into bloody shreds in delighted fiendishness, as the old-time stories used to tell.

The change in the grizzly's disposition is likened by veteran hunters to the change in the character of the white cousin of the grizzly, the polar bear of the arctics.

When the stations for the Hudson River Co. were established, the diaries of the men there often referred to the fright of attacks by polar bears. Many a navigator in the arctic seas has been clawed and chewed to death by polar bears. But for nearly a century the polar bear has not been regarded as so very fierce, and nowadays it is looked upon as a cowardly beast. Association with armed men has modified the polar bear's disposition.

Perhaps the most remarkable pension application ever presented in Congress is that embodied in a bill introduced at the recent session by Congressman Pearre of Maryland. It recites with great gravity and a wealth of circumstantial detail that the applicant, when a child in arms, in 1861, was so frightened by Union invaders in Maryland that he became paralyzed and has never been able to do any work.

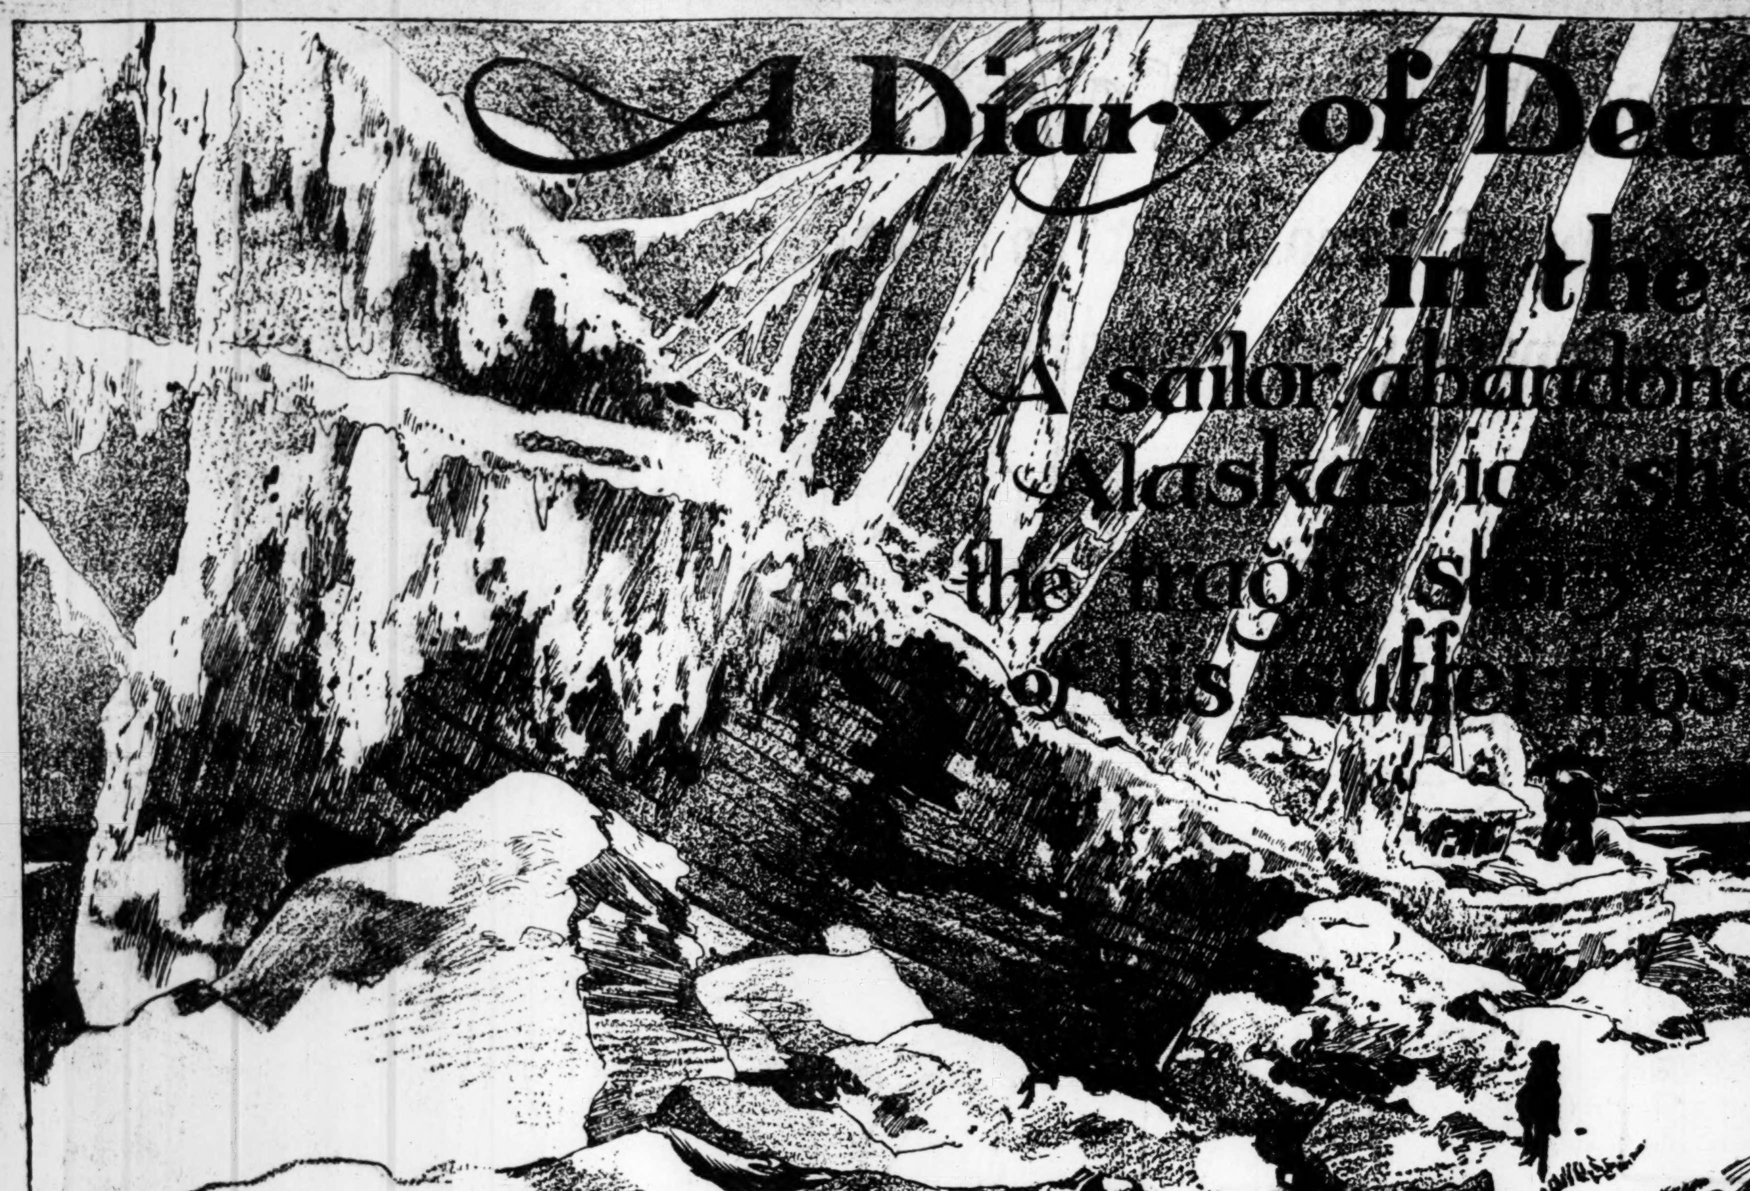
A citizen of South McAlester is the owner of a remarkably smart dog called Sunbeam. Sunbeam is a water spaniel about two years old, and has always been a great pet in the household. About six weeks ago a brood of chickens was hatched, their mother dying soon after. Sunbeam at once began to manifest great interest in the little orphans and took them in charge. At first its owner was afraid he would injure them, but he would bark and carry on so that he was at last given the whole charge of them, and his joy knew no bounds. No stranger dares to touch his newly adopted children, and all day he follows them from place to place all over the yard. If one of them happens to wander off a short distance from the rest he is uneasy until it is back again. At night the little chicks find a roosting place in Sunbeam's shaggy coat, and if they are not to bed by a certain time Sunbeam goes after the tardy ones. The tiny chicks seem to realize that Sunbeam is their protector, and will peep long and loud if they lose sight of him. They are thriving under Sunbeam's care.

TWO MILLION TREES ARE BEING PLANTED BY PUBLIC BUREAU

ONE HUNDRED acres of land in the sand hills of the Dismal river forest reserve, Nebraska, were planted this spring by the bureau of forestry. On 80 acres 100,000 pine seedlings were set out; the other 20 acres were sowed with seed. The work will continue this summer. The nursery will be enlarged so as to cover two acres, which will hold 2,000,000 seedlings. The bureau intends to increase the size of the nursery gradually so as to make it grow enough seedling trees every year to furnish sufficient stock for the planting. It is intended ultimately to turn the whole of the Niobrara and Dismal river reserves, which are now barren sand hills, into forest by planting. The Dismal river reserve includes 86,000 acres, the Diobrara reserve 126,000. A survey of the boundaries of the Niobrara reserve will be made this summer by E. J. S. Moore of the bureau of forestry.

A curious effect is noted in the Andes. There is an inn half way up the direct route where ascenders and descenders frequently meet, the former being almost numb with increasing cold, the latter overwhelmed by increasing heat.



A Diary of Death in the Arctic

Fragments of Ode's Journal.

William Ode, World-Hero of Today, Stood by His Hawser and "Pumped Her Out" for Four Months Alone, in Spite of Awful Sickness and Hunger, Till He Died.

DEATH at last. Four months alone.

Entering this last record in his log, William Ode, able seaman, lay back in his bunk and died, on a lonely wreck in the Arctic sea.

Of all the stories of brave, uncomplaining suffering that ever came out of the white silence of the frozen seas, none has ever exceeded in dramatic realism and deep human pathos the account of the last four months of William Ode, sailor on the schooner Courtney Ford.

The vessel ran ashore Sept 30, 1902, on Izenbek Island, Alaska, Somebody had placed a piece of iron in the compass, rendering it useless. In a high sea and a thick fog, the schooner went ashore on the reefs. In lowering away the long boats two sailors were drowned. The rest of the crew, with Capt. Burgeson, made camp on the shore for a week. At the end of that time they hailed a south-bound steamer and were picked up. As the schooner lay easily on the beach and seemed in no immediate danger of breaking up, it was decided to leave one of the crew as watchman while Capt. Burgeson and the rest of the men were absent in search of wrecking facilities.

The post of watchman on that lonely hulk fell by lot to William Ode. He was a rugged, broad-shouldered sailor, cheery, good-tempered and popular with his messmates. They left him with the small dinghy and sufficient provisions for two months. Good-bys were said on the beach in the evening under the flaring light of Aurora.

"Keep a log, Ode, so that your record will be clear when we come back again," said the captain, "and don't fail to pump her out."

Then as the rescuing steamer sailed through the white ice pack that lay like a death mantle over the sea, Ode's comrades looked back and saw him standing, a motionless figure in black, against the bulwarks. The figure waved its arms, the ghostly Aurora flickered, the bergs closed about them and Ode was alone.

ODE'S log, which makes one of the grimmest stories that ever came out of the polar seas commences on Oct. 4. On that day he writes:

"Boys left at 7 o'clock. Took my stuff back to the schooner and pumped her out. I will have my breakfast every morning at 7 o'clock, dinner at 1 o'clock and supper at 7 o'clock. I will pump the ship every day at 10 and 4, and will exercise my legs for a while on the beach.

"I am sorry I haven't anything to read, as it will probably be lonely. Wind northwest."

Oct. 5—Found the skiff and pumped her out. Mashed the nail off my finger. Took canvas on board. Made sail for skiff from bedsheet. Wind west and sea rising.

Oct. 6—Busy corking (probably calking) the skiff. I mean to cruise in her when the weather clears. Heavy skies and northwest wind. Pumped her out.

Oct. 7—The ice cleared and I went out in the skiff. The bedsheet sail did not work very well. I had a hard time getting back. It is getting darker every day, and I think the winter is setting in. Pumped her out. Wind northerly and fresh.

Oct. 8—Believe a seam has opened on starboard quarter. Stayed on board all day. Had hard work pumping. Right leg stiffened during night. It seems to be rheumatism. Weather still and cool. Heard wolves howling in the pine woods along the shore at night.

Oct. 9—Hard work pumping. Water about the same. No time for cruising. Weather calm.

Oct. 10—Sick all day, but managed to pump her out. Leg is a little better. Weather calm.

Oct. 11—Pumped her out. Heard strange noises in the woods along shore. Probably Esquimaux. Wind westerly.

Oct. 12—Put new rag on finger, so could manage to pump her out. She shifted about four feet up the beach on the flood tide. Damp easterly wind.

Oct. 13.—Weather mild and clear. Took a short cruise on shore. Found wolf and fox tracks on the beach. Two big bergs to the westward, about 300 feet high. Am getting lamer. Pumped her out.

Oct. 14—There's something in the weather that don't look right. Wind shifted all around. Finger looks like gangrene. Took a short walk on beach. Hard work pumping her out.

Oct. 15—Pumped her out. Weather heavy. Cool wind, westerly but unsettled.

Oct. 16—Two Esquimaux came over from the shore. They had carried their thyaks across the island. Tried to get me to go northward to their village. Gave them dinner. Pumped her out.

Oct. 17—Total eclipse of moon. Looks like big storm brewing in west. Leg very bad. Wind easterly. Heavy sea. Tried run a hawser ashore but failed. Pumped her out.

Oct. 18—Heavy hurricane from westward laid her on her beam ends and threw me out of bunk. Sea heavy. Impossible get ashore. Nailed heavy cleats to deck for foot purchase and pumped her out.

From this time until Oct. 27 the log is simply a reiteration of pump, pump, pump. Ode was obeying his captain's orders with all his strength.

The log continues:

Oct. 27—I had her all clear of water yesterday, but last night another gale struck her and threw her over at an angle of 45 degrees, and the water came in again. Managed to pump her out. Big berg rolled between me and the wind and stranded, and on the ebb tide the ship righted. Pumped her out.

Oct. 28—Berg gone; sea heavy; pumped all morning. Weather moderating.

Oct. 30—Weather mild. Walked across island. Saw wolf which ran. Pumped her out.

The next two weeks was a monotony of pumping, varied by occasional journeys over the island.

On Nov. 20 came the first snowstorm, and two days later a terrible storm arose. The log resumes:

Nov. 22—Terrible wind. Schooner likely to go to pieces. Deck so steep pumping next to impossible. In afternoon rigged a sling and pumped her out. After I quit work the wind careened her until her lee rail was under water, and I determined to leave. Got the dinghy slung to ratlines ready to lower. Leg painful and swollen. Stiff in joints.

Nov. 24—Left schooner; came about six miles away from schooner. At 5 p. m. was swamped by breakers. Could not return, as beach was too steep. Weather cold and windy.

Nov. 25—Had a terrible night, which I spent outside. Lay under quilt and oil coat. Turned back.

Nov. 26—Skiff frozen in.

Nov. 27 and 28—Started to build cabin (on schooner).

Dec. 21—My twenty-seventh birthday. Carried 15 barrels of water. Finished cabin. Stocked it with firewood. Pumped her out.

Dec. 27—Looks like would be here all winter. Sea frozen as far as can see. Strange do not hear from captain. He is a good man, and I'll hang to my hawser. Wind a gale from north. Pumping not necessary now.

Dec. 29—Two wolves came over to the cabin over the ice. Howled around schooner all night. Tried to climb on deck.

Jan. 2—Ice began to move out of bay.

Jan. 3—Wind west. Light one day since Dec. 2, clear enough to make out Aniak island. Wolves came alongside during night, making terrible noise. Ice is back again.

Jan. 13—Wind southward; clear; toothache.

Jan. 19—Tried to get across ice, but got played out when about 160 yards from the beach. Had to sit down five or six times to rest on the way back. I am too weak. I have been suffering from rheumatism, but never thought I had lost so much strength. Will be better when I rest up.

Jan. 20—Legs swell up.

Jan. 21—Legs the same.

Jan. 23—Legs swell up to my hips. Don't know what it is. Believe it is scurvy.

Jan. 24—Legs the same.

Jan. 27—Arms swell up, too.

Jan. 28—Swelling goes down during night, but as soon as I start to move about it is the same again. I have still a little hope left, but very little. I don't expect the captain will send help, because they think I am safe in Mozovia, but the winter came a few weeks too early.

If it was not for the snow I would try once more to get away, but in the condition I am now I could travel a mile. Then I can hardly lift my legs high enough to get out of the hold with a piece of firewood.

Jan. 30—Ice starts to go off beach. I hope this wind will last for a while, as the sooner the ice goes the more hope is there that I get away. Nobody will believe how I long for fresh provisions. I still have a good appetite, but my stomach will not digest food.

Jan. 31—Ice goes out of bay. Health the same.

Feb. 1—I never expected to see this day. If I can hold out until April 1 I think I could get away. Hope is all I have. Wind southwest, squally, snow and rain.

Feb. 3—Feet swell, cannot get boots on.

Feb. 4—Chest and stomach swollen. I can't make out what it is.

Feb. 16—I am so weak on my legs I can hardly get across the galley. I don't know what the captain thinks about my not showing up. Do they think I am going to wait until strawberry time, or that I am in Mozovia bay running up a bill? If I was healthy I would have been somewhere else. My teeth start to get sore in my mouth, and if I don't have help I will lose them in a few days. Bay is open for steamer, even for schooner. I don't get any pain, but have lost my appetite through the foul breath which comes out of my stomach. I only wish there would come help or I had done with this world forever. The galley leaks terribly so soon as it starts to rain. Everything is wet and I cannot get it dry again.

Feb. 16—Using snow for water. Cannot leave schooner. Help is what I need and fresh provisions.

Feb. 17—I can get aft no more. I do not know what I am going to do for water when the snow leaves the deck. Impossible for me to get down in hold. No fire in stove for three days.

Everything is damp. When I cook I have to cook for four or five days at a time. All I cook is dried apples, and then some flour on, until I get it plum pudding when cold. I am very dirty in face, but what little snow I have left I use for cooking. There is hardly any snow any more. It is mostly rain. I hope it will end soon. I don't think there will come any help, so the sooner the better. This is only a struggle with the last breath.

Feb. 18—Wind northwest.

Feb. 19—One month since I laid up with this schooner. Life is sweet, but death is sweeter in a case like this. I have nothing but scraps and snow water. Today I ate some dried apples and a piece of ice. I can make no more fires, as I can't stay up that long.

Feb. 20—I am waiting for my death.

And then in pencil faintly traced opposite the entries of Feb. 3 and 4: "Death at last. Four months alone."

And so William Ode, able seaman, passed out into the great unknown, having stood by his hawser and "pumped her out" to the last.

The help for which he waited left here a few weeks ago, when the schooners Carrie and Annie sailed for Izenbek Island with wrecking apparatus aboard.

Lying on his back in his bunk, with his open log beside him, the rescuing party found the dead sailor, still grasping in his death-stricken fingers the stub of a pencil with which he had written his good-bye to the world.

NEBRASKA FARMER HARNESSED HIS WIFE TO A PLOW

When the Frail Woman Could Not Draw the Heavy Cultivator Her Husband Lashed Her With a Whip Until She Fell.

He Is Now Awaiting Trial.

RANDOLPH, Neb., July 16.
Special to the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

BECAUSE his young wife was not strong enough to pull his harrow over a newly plowed cornfield, Joseph Holdoebler, whipped her unmercifully with a knotted rope, and in consequence is in jail here, charged with cruelty and abuse. While the frail woman was tugging with all her might at the tongue of the implement, Holdoebler followed by her side and by terrible blows with his rope forced her to greater exertions, until the poor woman fell in her tracks and the neighbors interfered. Mrs. Holdoebler is the mother of a baby a few months old.

Holdoebler is a well-to-do farmer living several miles from Randolph, but is eccentric and queer. Born in Austria, he served in the army of that country for some years before coming to the United States. During the recent war with Spain, he enlisted in the Nebraska volunteers and saw two years' service in the Philippines. When discharged, he returned to this country via his old home in Austria, where he met and soon married the belle of the village. Afterward the couple came to Randolph and went to live on Holdoebler's farm.

Less than two years ago Mrs. Holdoebler left her cottage home in Moravia as the wife of the man she loved and who had promised to be good to her and to love and cherish her. But in those two years a great change has come over the man. His kindness and love seem to have turned to a desire to make money; gold is his idol and everything in his world is secondary to his greed for wealth. Early and late the man has worked, and still earlier and still later he has forced his wife to work.

Hours before the sun rose Mrs. Holdoebler was at work, and midnight found her still at the tasks her husband had set for her. In addition to her duties at the house, she took her place in the field with the men and did her full day's work, always under the eye of her husband-taskmaster.

But the climax came a few days ago when his inhumanity became so brazen and his cruelty so great that the neighbors interfered. The heavy rains of last month put the crops behind and Holdoebler was making every effort to catch up. The farm horses had been worked so hard they were broken down and the farmer was compelled to permit them to rest. The corn just peeping above the earth, must be cultivated. Holdoebler himself must hold the plow handles.

Then it was that he ordered the frail little woman to take the place of the big Norman draft horses, and be harnessed to the heavy cultivator. She protested in vain and finally was half led, half dragged to the field and the harness was adjusted to her breast and waist.

Grasping the handles of the cultivator, the inhuman husband called to the woman to "get up." She tugged and twisted in a vain effort to move the implement, which refused to budge. Railing and cursing, Holdoebler urged her to greater efforts. Finally, grabbing a knotted plowline, he rushed at the woman and with great blows across the back and limbs actually compelled her to pull the plow a short distance, until her strength failed and she fell exhausted. After Mrs. Holdoebler had fallen the inhuman husband is said to have continued the beating until the woman almost fainted.

Mrs. Holdoebler managed to crawl to the house. After recovering sufficiently she took her 6-months-old babe, and, while her husband was in the field, fled to a neighbor's for protection.

When the story got abroad, the greatest indignation prevailed and threats of a coat of tar and feathers were made. A committee of the neighbors called upon Holdoebler and demanded an explanation. He made all sorts of excuses and explanations and promised that if he was let off that time he would do better in future. His wife, too, pleaded for the inhuman man, and finally the committee departed warning Holdoebler what the result of similar conduct in the future would be.

But his good behavior lasted less than one hour. No sooner had the committee left his farm than Holdoebler grabbed the child from its mother's arms, threatened the wife's life with a pitchfork, and otherwise mistreated her. During the night the poor woman again stole from the house, this time without the baby, which Holdoebler had locked up in his own room. Going to her friendly neighbors, she was persuaded to have her husband arrested, which she did.

While with her friends, Mrs. Holdoebler has told of the many indignities heaped upon her by her husband. One of these was in forcing her to read letters he had received from women in different parts of the country in answer to advertisements he had inserted in matrimonial papers in different cities. In these advertisements Holdoebler is said to have described himself as wealthy, educated, handsome, kind, good, etc., and a widower, and in need of a wife. Money was no object. His mail is said to have been the heaviest of any farmer in the county for some time after these matrimonial advertisements were inserted.

When Holdoebler was arrested and brought to jail, he attempted a reconciliation with his wife and implored her not to prosecute him. But she refused his offers and insists that she will do everything possible to have him punished to the full extent of the law.

He has been bound over to the next term of the district court, and will remain in jail until the fall, every neighbor he had having refused to go on his bail bond.

Public sentiment is very strong against Holdoebler. Should he fail to secure a heavy sentence when tried, he probably will be ordered to leave the county.

PROSPECTORS SEEK THE MOTHER LODE OF THE YELLOWSTONE.

TO find the mother lode which gives off the golden particles that come floating and tumbling down the Yellowstone river is the object of two old-time prospectors who are slowly working their way up the river into the mountain. For many years a vast amount of fine golden particles have been found in the sand composing the bars and the islands in the river, even along the shore. The gold, being heavier than the sand, naturally sinks to the bottom once it gets out of the current or meets with an obstruction in the river, and is later brought forth by placer mining.

Early this spring two prospectors who have been in Montana for a long time, determined to find the mass of gold from which these particles come. With this end in view they started in near the mouth of the river, and since then have been working their way toward the headwaters. Like all large streams in that section of the West the Yellowstone rises in the mountains.

It is the belief of these prospectors, John Michaels and George Severance, that at the headwaters of one of these small streams is a great lode, which furnishes all of the gold that comes down the river, and is eventually found in the sand. They expect, they say, that their work will take them into the Yellowstone National Park, where, however, they can do no mining, no matter what they may find, as the government will not permit it.

What is perhaps the largest hanging bell in the world is to be seen in Mandalay. This is the Mingun bell, on the right bank of the Irrawaddy, almost opposite the city of Mandalay. This immense bell measures as follows: Height to crown, 12 feet; 12 feet high to the top of the griffin-like monsters; diameter at the lip, 16 feet 3 inches; thickness of metal from 6 inches to 12 inches. It weighs about 80 tons, and is suspended on three massive round beams of teak placed horizontally the one over the other, their ends resting on two pillars of enormous size, composed of masonry and large upright teak posts. This bell was cast at the end of the eighteenth century, under the superintendence of the reigning king.

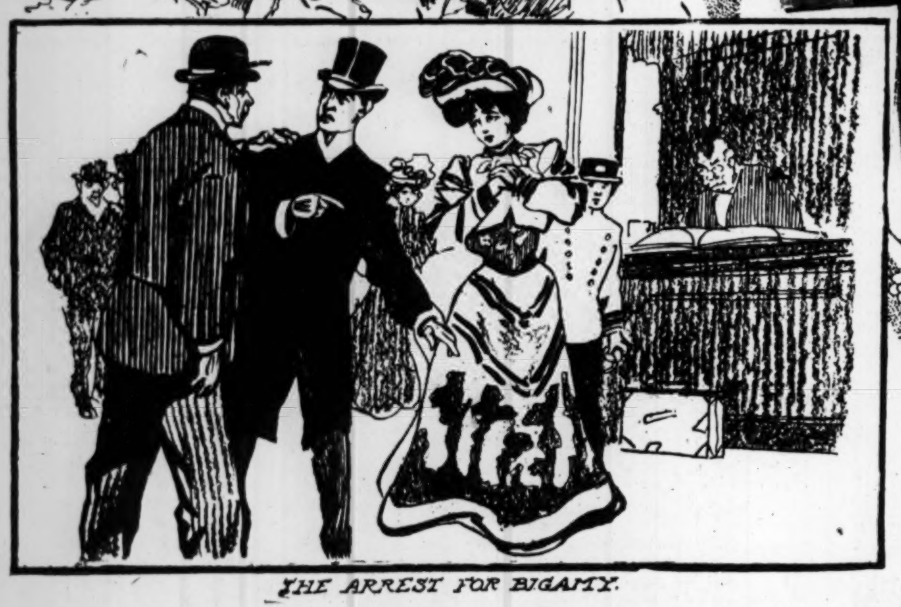
Bravery and Bigamy Strangely Blended

The Extraordinary Double Marriage of Lieut. McCue the Result of a Disordered Brain.

Violette Beatrice Simon McCue, WHO MARRIED LIEUT. McCUE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Lieut. Wm. K. McCue.



THE ARREST FOR BIGAMY.

Mystery of the Army Officer's Escapades Is Cleared by a Medical Inquiry---Remarkable Effect of Hard Service in the Philippines.

LIEUT. WILLIAM K. M'CUE of the regular army, who was found insane by the inquiry board of army surgeons and taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital for the Insane in Washington last week, furnishes one of the most extraordinary instances of insanity due to hardships in the tropical country with which the war department has had to deal.

Until the medical inquiry the lieutenant was severely denounced as a bigamist, inasmuch as he married Miss Violette Simon in San Francisco, June 12 last, though he was already married to Miss Ida Westcott of Cincinnati, the wedding having taken place June 7, 1899, before the young officer departed for the Philippines.

The finding, which has been approved by Adjutant-General Corbin, now clears the lieutenant of any guilt as a bigamist. It is peculiarly sad for Miss Simon, who, of course, is not his legal wife.

The brother officers of Lieut. McCue have been earnest all along in support of the theory that the officer's strange second courtship and marriage were due to derangement superinduced by his wounds, his long service in tropical climates and the fevers incident thereto.

LIEUT. M'CUE is a Kentuckian. As a boy he had the longing to be a soldier and serve his country. In 1894 he enlisted in Company B, Sixth Infantry. Just a private then, he took part in the storming of Santiago. Fearless, a giant in stature, he was in the forefront of that bullet-swept height. On, on he fought in the din and smoke; then at length a Spanish bullet found him.

This wound was a grievous one. He lay for a month in the hospital. When he slowly came back to health and strength, Private McCue found himself gazetted for bravery, and his regiment gone to Fort Thomas, Cincinnati. The war was over.

Promotion was ready for the soldier now. He became a candidate for a commission. When the examining board had finished with Private McCue's papers they knew that more than mere bravery was in the soldier's make-up—he had passed as brilliant an examination in the theory and art of war as he had in the practice of it when bullets, and not questions, were fired at him.

So President McKinley duly commissioned the young soldier a second lieutenant. Off he went, filled with the hope of an honorable career, to join his new regiment, the First infantry, on Sept. 1, 1898.

Then came an order. Off went the gallant First to another war, thousands of miles away in the Far East. And there was Lieut. McCue swinging gallantly along beside his company. But behind in Cincinnati was a woman weeping, her soldier was going away to fight, perhaps never to come back.

She was winsome Ida Westcott, daughter of Leonard Westcott, a well-to-do merchant. The handsome young officer had wooed and won the girl in the little time of peace allowed him between Cuba and the Philippines. There on June 7, 1899, in St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church, they had been made man and wife by the Rev. Father Mackey—so she says, and so says the priest.

The bride went back to her home to live out the dreary two years. Then the regiment would be home again, and her stalwart lieutenant at her side.

For him there were battles and skirmishes with the crafty Tagals; there were hikes upon hikes through the tropic jungles; there were days of scorching in the broiling suns of the archipelago; there were other days wading through swamps, fighting snakes and scorpions when the ladrones gave the wearied soldiers a breathing spell.

With so many other brave thousands of the boys, officer, "non-com." and private, Lieut. McCue succumbed to the insidious fever of the tropics. Meanwhile more promotion had come to him by well-earned service—it was now First Lieutenant Wm. K. McCue, Ninth Infantry. And when the new bar to the shoulder straps came Lieut. McCue was tossing in delirium in the officers' ward in the Manila hospital, the wreck of his once splendid self.

It was very slow, that recovery. At last, gaunt, pale, a shadow of the giant who had gone out there, Lieut. McCue could get back to duty again. Meanwhile he had run across many of his old friends in the First.

"Why don't you come back to us?" they urged. "Everybody misses you."

And so it was arranged. On April 23, 1900, Lieut. McCue was transferred back to his first love, the historic First Infantry. Most of the time he had command of his company, the boys of M, because the captain was away on other duty. Never was commanding officer more loved by his men than First Lieutenant McCue.

"He used to be one of us," they liked to tell everybody, proud of the fact that their handsome lieutenant had once been a private in the ranks.

Perhaps it was because he, too, had once been an enlisted man that made Lieut. McCue so beloved by his men. No company was ever better disciplined than M of the First; yet the lieutenant was a friend to every one of the one hundred odd who served under him.

At length came that day of days to every soldier who has ever fought away from "God's country," as the boys call th dear old United States—"Ordered home."

So off went Lieut. McCue on the big transport. May 10 last saw him safe in San Francisco. There he had friends, and there he stayed on, rejoicing in the pleasant round of peace after years in Cuba and Luzon. One week later came the day that has changed everything for three persons—the day he met Miss Violette Beatrice Simon.

A mutual friend introduced them. She, a beautiful, impulsive girl of 18; he, the seasoned soldier of nine years' service now—keen, clear-eyed, alert, courageous. No wonder she loved; no wonder he.

The gallant lieutenant wooed as he fought—to the last ditch. In a month the enemy, commanded by Gen. Dan Cupid, capitulated unconditionally. But that stern mentor of us all—whisper it reverently—the government at Washington, cares not a snap of a finger for love or romance.

Here was Lieut. McCue's leave expiring on June 6, at 12 o'clock noon sharp, and no Lieut. McCue at Fort Porter, Buffalo, N. Y., to rejoin his regiment. And why not? Simply because the lieutenant wanted to get married, though he now stands charged with having married before.

But let the girl who has gone back to San Francisco again, weeping and alone, tell the story.

"Oh, I did love him so," she sobbed to the Sunday Post-Dispatch correspondent in her rooms at the Great Northern Hotel, Chicago. "He was so brave, and so big, and so handsome. The soldiers worshipped him and so did I. I hate to believe that he has been married before, but I must, because I know it is true. He had married Ida Westcott before he married me.

"He told me that his leave expired June 3, but he said that he could get it extended. He wanted me to marry him within a week after I met him, but I said 'No, that's too sudden.' But what could I do? So I had to give in after a month's acquaintance. My father wanted to give us a big wedding. My soldier lover wouldn't hear of it. He told me to never mind a trousseau; I should have one just as soon as I was married.

"On June 12 last we were married in my father's house, and within a few days we started for Chicago. I was so happy; he did everything to make me so. I never noticed anything unusual in his mental condition. But only too soon I was disillusioned. My father learned it first. They told him at army headquarters in San Francisco that there was a woman in Cincinnati who said she was Lieut. McCue's wife. I received a telegram here from my father asking an explanation. That telegram broke my heart. I asked my husband if he had a wife in Cincinnati and he laughed.

"'It is not so,' he said. 'I will explain that later.' Then he disappeared. I spent the most dreadful day of my life, crying all the time. Mrs. J. B. Harris of New York took me to her apartment and cared for me. I think I should have died had it not been for her. I telegraphed Father Mackey of Cincinnati, and received a reply to a message, which said, 'I married Lieut. McCue and Miss Westcott on June 7, 1899.' Then my husband returned to me—O, the horror of it! He was a prisoner in charge of Lieut. Wills of Gen. Bates' staff. He came in to see me. He swore to me that he had never, never been married in Cincinnati. I showed him the telegram from Father Mackey, and after reading it he said, 'It's a lie, a lie! You are my only wife.'

"Then they took him away to Fort Sheridan. I shan't go home until a full investigation has been made. But what can I do but doubt him now?"

Meanwhile all the tremendous energy of the war department had been turned loose in an effort to find Lieut. McCue. Missing for twenty-three days, without a word to headquarters in explanation, he was apparently committing an offense which would be called desertion in an enlisted man.

On June 30 last he located himself. He came wandering into the Great Northern Hotel at 1 a. m. His bride had fled; she had taken refuge, penniless and hysterical, with Mrs. Harris. Lieut. McCue then wrote out this:

"I never was married to Ida Westcott of Cincinnati, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. My courtship with Mrs. McCue was not a hasty one. I met her in San Francisco before I went to the Philippines. I have a ten days' extension of leave of absence from Washington, which does not expire until July 1.

"W. K. M'CUE,
"First Lieutenant First Infantry."

Then he disappeared again. In another 24 hours he was back once more, and this time he found his bride. Sobbing, heartbroken, she pleaded of him to tell her that it was all a lie, that he never married before.

"I never was married to Ida Westcott," he protested. "I was only engaged to her."

Yet the day before Mrs. Ida Westcott-McCue had gone to police headquarters in Cincinnati and laid something down on the chief's desk.

"My husband's wedding cards," she said, "announcing his marriage to Miss Simon. He actually sent them to me, his wife. I cannot account for it except that perhaps he has become insane through his wounds and his illnesses. We were always happy here. Father Mackey married us on June 7, 1899. We have never been divorced."

Poor Mrs. McCue No. 2 was alone, without a cent, and what she called "a terrifying hotel bill." Mute reminders of her shattered happiness were her husband's uniforms and sword, abandoned by him when he went away.

The deserted bride's father is Sigmund L. Simon, cashier in the sheriff's office, San Francisco, for 25 years. He communicated with the Chicago police chief, through the San Francisco police, and made arrangements to pay his broken-hearted daughter's hotel bill and her railway fare back to the home she left so happily only a few days before.

MISSOURIAN'S BIG FAMILY.

MR. D. M. WALKER of Kirksville, Mo., holds a record that really should bring him an appointment from the President. He is a great-grandfather at the age of 59 years. At 19 he was a father and at 38 was a grandfather. He is the father of 14 children, the oldest being 39 and the youngest 4 years. He has 25 grandchildren. His one great-grandchild is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Watts of Pana, Ill.

An American has invented an envelope which records of itself any attempt to tamper with its contents. The flap is imbued with some chemical composition, which, when operated on by a dampening process, or any other means of penetrating to its inclosure, records the transaction by causing the words "Attempt to open" to appear. It is thought that the inquisitive will think twice before pursuing their researches in face of such an invention.

Novel Gavel From Solomon's Quarries

THE Masonic lodge of Lexington, Mo., has probably the handsomest and most novel gavel owned by a branch of that order in Missouri. It was presented to the lodge by J. C. McGrew. Mr. McGrew and his wife have been traveling in the Orient. In Jerusalem they visited "Solomon's quarries," and while deep underground, at a place where visiting Masons sometimes hold their meetings, it occurred to Mr. McGrew that he would like to take a souvenir home to his brother Masons. He accordingly picked up a stone, which he had "turned" in Jerusalem. On the Mount of Olives he got wood for a handle, and in New York he had the entire gavel finished and mounted with silver.

To the surprise of philatelists in general another couple of rarities—the 1d and 2d stamps known as the postoffice Mauritius—have been found. A schoolboy, going over some old correspondence, found an envelope with a couple of strange-looking stamps, and took it to his father, who was not well up in stamps, but who fortunately had a friend in Paris who was a collector. The envelope was sent to Paris, with instructions to sell it at the best price, and it was sold to a dealer for £1600. The precious envelope has since been sold to a well-known collector for £2600.

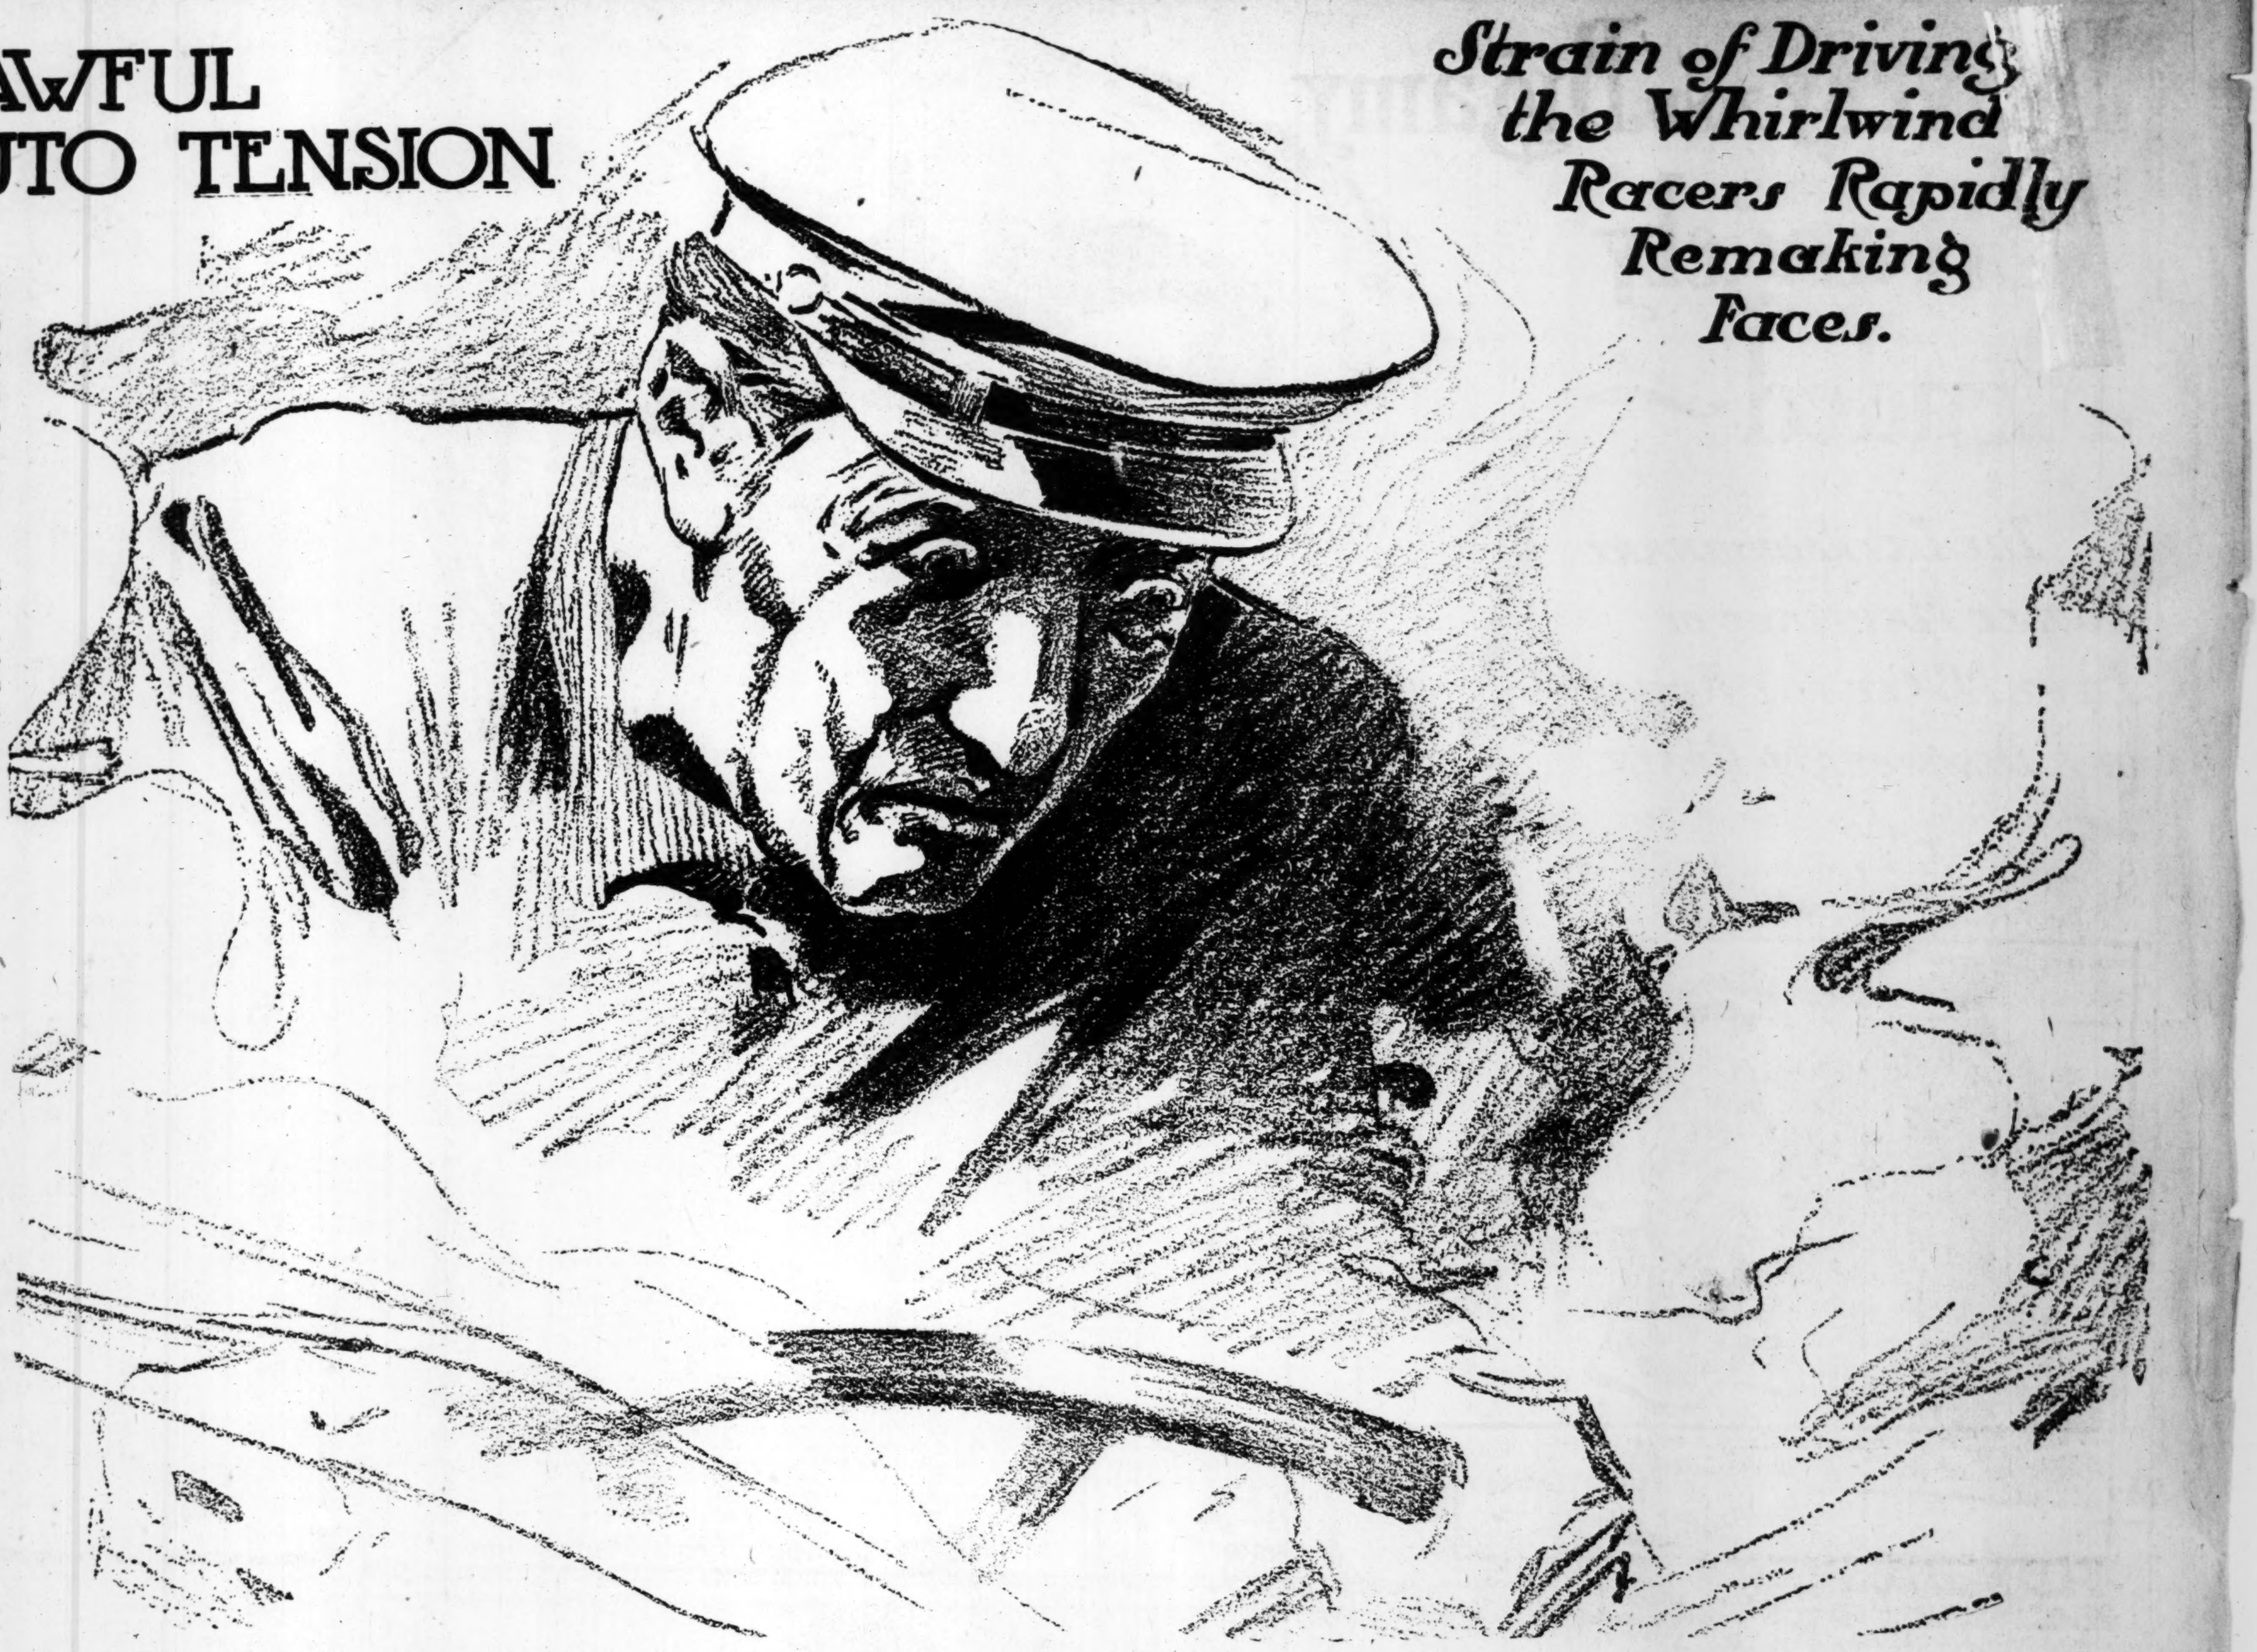
THAT AWFUL AUTO TENSION

Strain of Driving the Whirlwind Racers Rapidly Remaking Faces.



Dr. Robarts of St. Louis Says That the Auto Face Is a Scientific Fact—Change in Facial Structure Is Due to Nature's Accommodating Itself to Environment.

PZT! Pzt-pzt! Pzt! Didn't you see him? Why there he goes, half a mile up the St. Charles Rock road, just ahead of that dust cloud! Couldn't recognize your old friend? That's not a bit strange. He has the automobile face.

Bulging, blood-shot eyes, haggard lineaments, many lines about the mouth, gray complexion—yes, that's the automobile face, and many a man who tools this demon of steel has it now. No wonder you couldn't recognize your old friend when he whizzed by leisurely at 50 miles an hour.

"The automobile face is no joke," says Henri Fournier, prince among the speedmakers, and right he is.

It has come to stay; that is, if the auto is here to stay. It is the record writ in flesh and blood of the thousands of dangers already passed; of the fearful thought of the next one to come, when the wheel of fortune may not reel out such luck again—the record that serves print upon the face of the man who tools the auto.

It is the constant flirting with death which makes the automobile face so easy to tell. It is not, perhaps, so much the fear of death for himself that tightens up the facial muscles of the automobilist till they look as if they might snap—it is the fear of dealing death to others.

There may be a vehicle ahead. Some small boy may pop around the next corner and be rolled over and over by the fierce wheels of the speeding thing. Perhaps it is an elderly lady, who never gave a thought to an auto, who essays to cross the road not 50 yards ahead of a machine that is teuf-teufing off its 40 miles an hour, with not so much noise as a horse and buggy might make.

THESE are the things that make the automobile faces which we are beginning to see in St. Louis. The doctors are writing about it now, and savants discuss it as once they discussed the bicycle face, a product of almost the same kind of speed experience.

Dr. Hebor Robarts of 721 Olive street, an authority on nervous ailments, says that he has noticed the automobile face in St. Louis, and that it is obvious to any close observer.

"In fact," says Dr. Robarts, "to a man who studies faces the occupations of many men may be determined by their appearance. One can tell a lawyer or a doctor or a preacher by studying his countenance, for the reason that a man's environment so influences his nervous system that a change takes place in his face, to accommodate itself to its environment.

"The chauffeur who drives his machine at a 60-mile rate of speed undoubtedly develops a look different from that of the man who merely drives a buggy five or six miles an hour. If the atmosphere impinges violently against the face, because of such speed, the automobilist is likely to have a wrinkled brow, brought about by his muscular movement to protect his eyes. By long continuance in such an occupation that expression becomes more or less set, and it shows when he is walking the streets like other men. It becomes what some of us are pleased to term the auto face.

"We are molded by our environments, physically as well at mentally, and this auto face is one result of the molding. The physical man accommodates itself to its surroundings; it is necessarily so. You will observe that the locomotive engineer has an intensely attentive expression. Railroad men can pick out an engineer by this expression alone. A man who has handled the throttle for many years, always on the lookout for danger and apprehensive of disaster, develops the attentive, scrutinizing gaze which one may observe in the face of the engine-driver.

"The racing automobilist, whose occupation is even more hazardous, undoubtedly grows to look his part, just as the bicyclist did in the days when wheel racing and century runs were in great vogue."

In commenting upon a recent statement by Dr. Cyrus Edson of New York, to the effect that the auto face is "a part of neurasthenia, the American disease," Dr. Robarts said that in his opinion the man who wears the auto face is not a neurasthenlac. "The possession of such an expression of features," he said, "is not an indication of disease, but rather, as I have said, an indication of the man's occupation, which has stamped itself upon his face."

The face is the sum total of a lot of tensions.

There is the tension of the hands which guide the steering wheel—the twist of even a tenth of a second too long and the machine is ditched, ruined, perhaps, and the chauffeur injured, if not killed. This tension of the hands mounts very easily to the face.

Then there is the tension of the eyes—the tension of ever trying to pierce the dust in front, to see what is happening 500 yards ahead, because you and your auto will be there in a few seconds. It is the tension that calls for straight steering, with death the alternative.

There's the wind and the dust, too, both factors in making up the automobile face. A summer zephyr of ten miles an hour becomes a tornado of seventy miles when you hurl yourself into the teeth of it. Human eyes were never built for such a strain. So gradually they bulge out, half demonlike, half human, streaked with blood and yellowed where they should be white.

This tension binds the lips, too; the tension which a man undergoes when he realizes that unless his nerves stay with him it is injury or even death. So lines, tiny ones at first, start from the corners of the mouth and radiate, fan-like, across the face. Other lines run from the eyes. So in your typical automobile face eyes get to be nothing but two slits in the features.

Goggles, masks, breathing tubes—trifling preventives all. No matter if you are muffled up in leather and isinglass, you'll get the automobile face just the same—if you speed too much.

Probably no auto man goes out for a swift spin without getting a shock. This time he just missed killing a boy; that time a stray dog all but missed killing him. He takes a curve at full speed, and there just ahead comes a pretty girl driving a dog cart. She swerves, he swerves. Only good chance saved both.

He can see the same sight in his reeling brain every time he shoots a curve, straining down over the wheel. His feee are on the levers and his hands ready to shut off the power. His eyes, his ears, his—

Crash!

Somebody's hurt. A galloping horse is madly tearing down the highway; there's ing down over the wheel. His feet are on the bank. The gasoline is sputtering like many packs of giant firecrackers—here's the doctor.

"She'll live," says he.

Is there any wonder that there is the automobile face? Watch the next man you see tearing by in some long, lean, puffing auto. See if he hasn't it.

There are men who do auto racing in St. Louis County—when the farmers will let them—who are developing distinct auto faces.

By HENRI FOURNIER.

THE automobile face is no joke. Navigating a flying machine does not bring a man into conflict with more perils than does speeding the modern automobile.

A living, breathing record of dangers passed and dangers to come make up the automobile face.

In your mind you see always the spectacle of a bleeding, mangled body, unless your head be clear and your hand be true.

And so your muscles become fixed—ears, eyes, lips and cheeks take on certain tense, abnormal characteristics.

That is the automobile face.

ST. LOUIS WOMEN BECOMING INTERESTED IN THE FIGURINE FAD

It Costs Money to Indulge in the Miniature Statue Luxury—Miss Enid Yandell, Former Kentucky Girl, a World's Fair Sculptress, Is a Leading Figurine Artist.

SOME of the St. Louis society women who pass the summer abroad or at the Eastern coast have developed the figurine fad. It is an expensive fad, but the sculptors are hilariously happy, for it means money to them. A figurine is a miniature sculptured or bronze-cast figure of yourself—or anybody else—and it is the rich woman's latest craze.

The Duchess of Marlborough, Consuelo Vanderbilt, that was, started the fad on both sides of the ocean. She ordered a tiny group showing herself and the little Marlboroughs, and the duke was delighted. The figures are but a few inches high, but they are true to life in detail.

Miss Enid Yandell, one of the World's Fair sculptors, formerly of Kentucky, now of New York, is the leading sculptor of figurines. She is accredited with having made the largest piece of sculpture ever executed by a woman, and now she is winning more fame as the creator of artistic tiny figures.

The mere mention of Miss Yandell's name brings to mind among those who know art the superb fountain at Providence, R. I. "The Struggle of Life" and the superb "Athena," done for the Nashville Centennial. This last is the largest figure ever modeled by a woman.

But now Miss Yandell has no time for such heroic work. Figurines have the call. The clever sculptor can't keep up with her orders. But society is getting a lot of fun out of it, and likewise an excuse to run into town for a day.

Don Barber, of New York, was among Miss Yandell's earliest patrons. His tiny replica in golf suit and soft hat is regarded among figurine connoisseurs as a true type of what such work should be. No Roman toga for him, nor even sandals. But Phidias, Greece's premier among premiers of sculptors, could no more faithfully have reproduced his features.

The figurines of Mrs. Van Geer Kirkman, of Nashville; Mrs. William S. Kuhn, of Pittsburg; Mrs. Ella McPherson Muir, daughter of the late Senator McPherson, of New Jersey; I. T. Fargo, of Wells, Fargo & Co., and L. H. Niles, the rich New York broker, are all counted among Miss Yandell's best work.

MRS ELLA McPHERSON MUIR NEW YORK

MR L.H. NILES NEW YORK

MRS VAN LEER KIRKMAN NASHVILLE TEN.

Few of these tiny images of the originals are done in the classic style. You don't see your latter-day beauty affecting a Grecian pose, sandals and Psyche knot with just some toga-like drapery thrown about her figure.

No, sirree.

She wears her finest Paris frock and her newest hat from the millinery; she's togged out with veil, gloves, natty little shoes and some of her choicest jewels. A favorite pose is with her parasol—something to keep her hands busy, you know. No Greek stunts for the twentieth century woman of fashion!

Sculptors here are working overtime. Most of them are women; in fact, they seem to control the figurine field.

Their delicacy of touch and design is needed in just this way, where it would count for very little in statues of heroic size or even in life-size work.

Mrs. William B. Brachen has just finished two exquisite little miniature busts, one of Mrs. Ernest Thompson Seton and another of Mrs. Caspar Whitney.

Miss Enid Yandell his just finished a miniature group of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's children.

"Superb," exclaimed Mr. Whitney, Sr., when he saw the charming little likeness of the grandchildren whom he prizes as the apple of his eye.

Mrs. Bessie Poteer Vannoh just now is working over a dainty little statuette of Maude Adams, who has caught the fever of the fad. Mrs. Vannoh is so far behind in her work that several society women have been told they must wait all summer before it will be their turn.

This fad for figurines is a growth. One clever London sculptor conceived the idea of getting out well done miniatures and modern. They sold like hot cakes. One day a customer of his whose husband has spent hundreds of thousands upon objects of art suggested that a replica of her bust in miniature would be so charming little souvenir for her husband. No sooner said than done.

The fancy flew from clique to clique; the rest was easy. Copies of sculpture have now been forgotten; the people who have the money to pay want themselves in miniature, not Venus or Psyche or Sappho or Apollo Belvidere or Laocoon.

Mrs. Vannoh's friends boast that she has modeled more New Yorkers than any other worker in marble and clay. It was she who made the famous gold statue of Maude Adams which made the furore of the Paris Exposition. The miniature of Miss Adams which she is now engaged upon will be cast into bronze in a few days. Melba and Julia Marlowe are other stage folk who have sat for Mrs. Vannoh's facile fingers.

Mrs. Brachen has many society customers sitting for her now, but her specialty is the modeling of ideal figurines, using living models for the poses. Her favorite is a bust rather than the entire figure.

Her "Bust of a Child" is one of her best-known creations—the head of her own little son. It was exhibited at the Paris Salon.

ow, look at a figurine yourself.

Dainty, delicate, fragile; yet in these few scant inches all the personnel of a man of six feet, and all the charm and poise of the woman of the world—fresh, well-groomed, correct.

No wonder, then, that her grace, our American duchess, has given the figurine the seal of her approval. No wonder, too, that society has followed in her footsteps. There are even those within the pale who dare say that there is something better in this newest fad than there is in the old-fashioned schemes of giving dinner parties to monkeys or even of parading at Newport with a rag doll.

Like a figurine yourself?

If you've got $500 to spare you can have one. Or $1000 will get more of the sculptor's time and perhaps a better kind of bronze.

In some of the forests of France trees are now felled by electricity. A platinum wire heated white hot by the current is stretched between two poles and used as a saw. There is much less work than with an ordinary saw, no sawdust is produced, and the charring of the surface of division tends to prevent decay. In some cases the time required to fell a tree by this method is only one-eighth of that necessary by the old system of sawing.

East St. Louisan's Monument for the Declaration Signers

REPRESENTATIVE W. A. RODENBERG, who represents the East St. Louis district in Congress, is attracting much attention with a suggestion that a monument be built at Washington for the signers of the American Declaration of Independence. The illustration shows a suggestion for the monument.

Congressman Rodenberg said last week that during the coming session of the Congress he expected to introduce and urge to passage a bill providing for the erection of a monument to the signers of the Declaration of Independence. He calls attention to the fact that there is no testimonial to the men who signed the historical document in any part of the United States, although there hase been much eulogy of their foresight and rare statesmanship. Mr. Rodenberg believes it fit that a monument should be erected at the seat of government and on one of the public reservations which are carefully maintained by the government. He will advise with sculptors and patriotic societies to determine just what form his bill shall take.

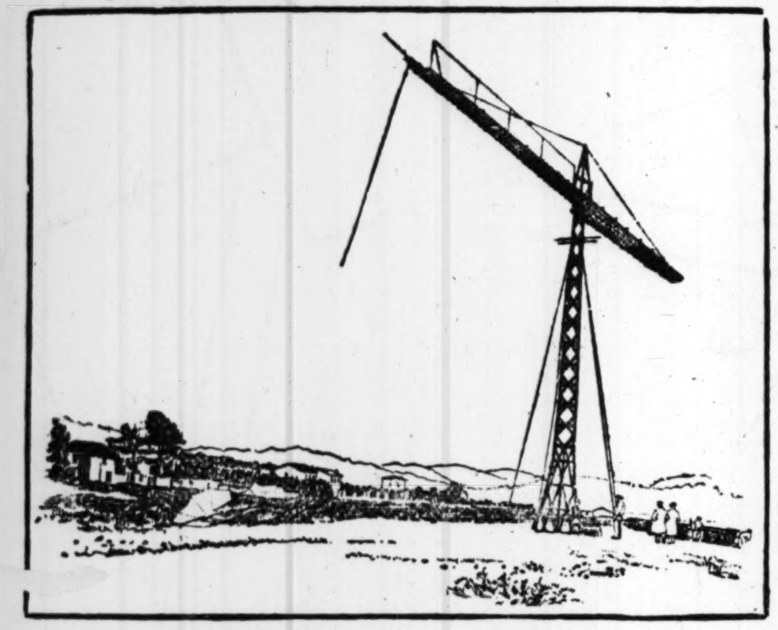
Testing Flying Machines for Big St. Louis Race



IT is almost too much to believe that there is such a device as a flying machine tester, and that some of the aerial cars to start in the big airship race at the St. Louis fair will have been graduated from the tester. Yet there is such a device. Capt. Ferber has built it at Nice, France, and it stands the only structure of its kind in the world. It consists of a skeleton-like frame from which airships and flying machines may be suspended while they try their wings, much as a swimming teacher holds a boy out on the end of a stick while the youngster is learning to become self-supporting.

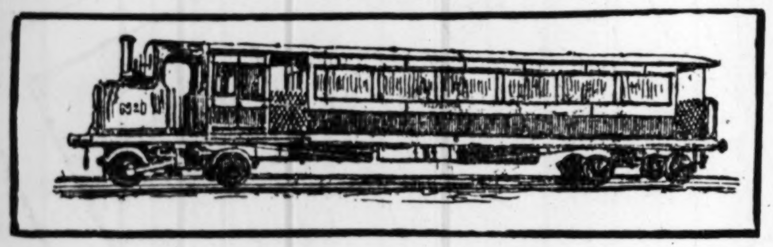
One of the latest ideas in New York is a room to which ladies can retire if they feel faint and go off in a swoon, amid the most artistic and beautiful surroundings. Several restaurants and tea shops have adopted this idea, and members of the fair sex whose nerve force is run down can find in the fainting room a soothing resting place. The room is partially darkened and the prevailing color green, while it is liberally decorated with various sweet-smelling flowers. Comfortable sofas and chairs are provided for the "fainters," and a lady doctor is kept on the premises should her services be required.

St. Louis Commuters Would Welcome These



ST. LOUIS commuters would welcome the motor coach, the newest thing in suburban travel in Europe. It is a combination engine and coach.

As will be seen from the drawing, access may be had to the coach at both ends from wide platforms, which have openings on either side, these being closed when running by collapsible gates. There is a luggage van capable of holding one ton of luggage and immediately in front of this is the engine. This is of exceedingly compact design. The boiler is placed on the center line, and is of the vertical type, with vertical and cross tubes. The cylinders are inclined, and the connecting rods drive direct on to pins on the front wheels. A separate draglink serves to work the valve gear. There are no flexible steam couplings, the boiler and the cylinders being on the same frame. The wheel base is eight feet and the wheels are solid. The cylinders, of which there are two, are seven inches in diameter with a 10-inch stroke. It is calculated that in service the rate of acceleration will give the coach a velocity of 30 miles an hour in 30 seconds.

Look Out for the Runaway Automobile.

"TELL you what, we're going to see one of these days," said a citizen of St. Louis. We're going to see a runaway automobile come down the street without any passengers or any chauffeur. I've been noticing the recklessness with which some of these people take crossings and corners. Several times I have seen the machines act as though they were going to spill their occupants on the street. I once read of a case of that kind in England. The machine threw its chauffeur and went bowling along the road by itself. People gave it the right of way and it finally overhauled a farmer, who, being without warning, was bumped into the hedge. He crawled out just in time to see the automobile disappearing over a hill. Brandishing his fists, he cried:

"That's right, —— ye; hit a man and then hide under the seat!"

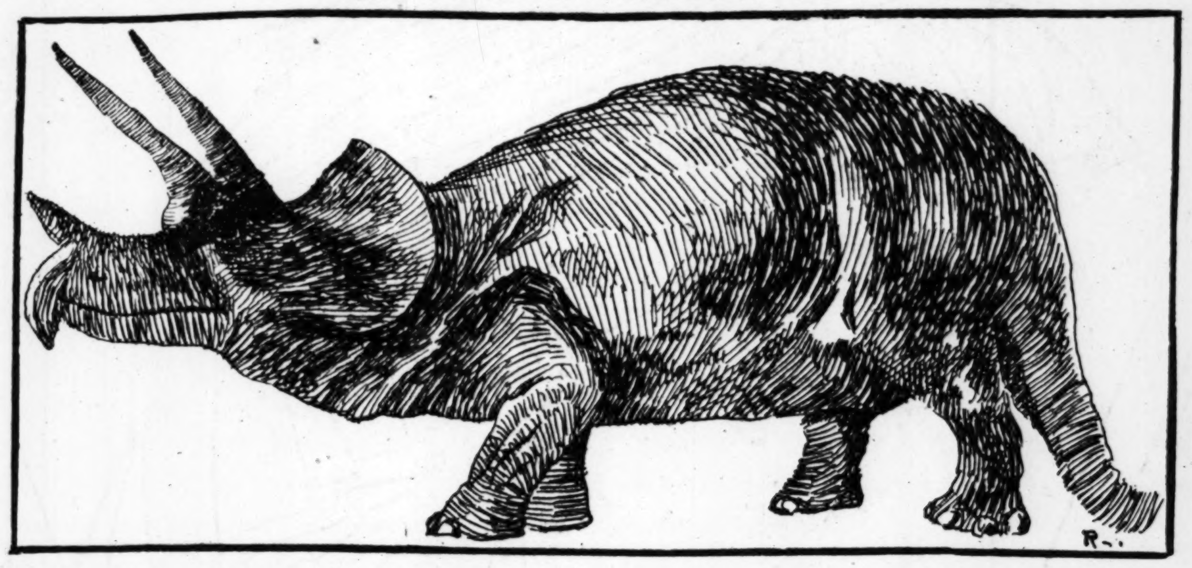
World's Largest Skull Will Be Exhibited at St. Louis



ONE of the most remarkable and noteworthy fossil finds yet reported on in this country or elsewhere has been recently made by an expedition sent out by the American Museum of Natural History, planned and directed by Prof. Henry F. Osborn, head of the department of paleontology. The discovery consists of unearthing in the southeastern portion of Montana almost the complete skull of the huge extinct monster known as triceratops. The giant creature's head measures 7½ feet in length by 5½ feet wide, making it the world's record-breaking specimen so far obtained. Numerous smaller ones have been found by Prof. Marsh of Yale and others, but none equaling in dimensions or the same state of preservation has been dug up. With the exception of a portion of the two horns and a short section of the snout, the specimen is complete. The great head would easily afford a dining board for twelve men to gather around. The huge beast lived during the cretaceous period and age of reptiles, variously estimated to have been from 3,000,000 to 10,000,000 years ago. As he roamed the marshes and banks of the great inland lake, which, in remote times, covered the state of Montana and nearly the whole of the section west of the Rocky Mountains, he was probably the largest and most formidable beast of his time.

Old Instrument of Torture Will Be Shown at St. Louis

A CURIOUS instrument of torture was exhibited at Pensacola, Fla., a few days ago. The relic is a human muzzle, evidently used in bygone days by the Spaniards in punishing unruly slaves. It is in the form of a cage or hood, constructed of strips of wrought iron and made to fit closely over the head of a person, and a prominent feature of its construction is an iron tongue, or gag, which, when the hood is locked upon the cistim's head, fits into his mouth, holding the tongue down and making it impossible for the wearer to either speak or make any kind of noise. The iron hood opens by means of hinges in the front part, and when placed upon the victim's head can be closed and fastened by a lock on the back. The iron strips of which it is constructed ar eriveted together. It will be sent to the St. Louis Fair.

I was startled by seeing a milleped, more than an inch in length, creeping along a plank, and, fearing it might bite some one, instantly killed it. A few minutes later a large waterbug crept up and, seeing the dead milleped, began to investigate, and after turning it over several times at last commenced to devour it. I waited until he had eaten all of the milleped, and then he leisurely crept away."

Two very ingenious inventions of Giuseppe Pino, an engineer of Milan, promise to be of great importance in the work of salvage. One of these, a boat for examining the bottom of the sea, has been tested by Sig. Pino before the Italian authorities, with the greatest success in the Gulf of Genoa. The engineer descended in his boat to a depth of 292 feet, and ascended in 10 minutes with a small bark which had been sunk there. Divers cannot work at a greater depth than 30 meters (about 100 feet) on account of the great pressure of the water, which at 40 meters is about 124 pounds to the square inch; but the vessel of Sig. Pino can withstand any pressure, and consequently can work at any depth.

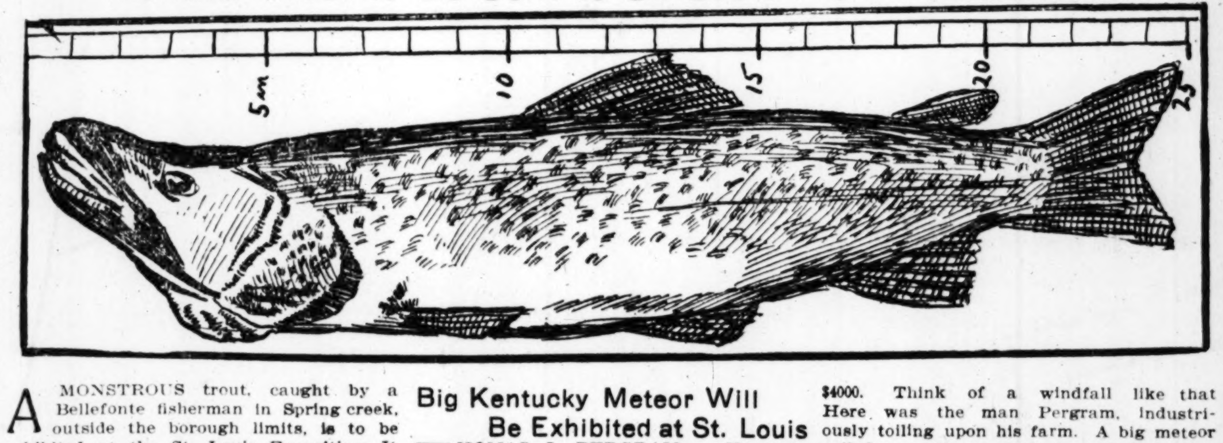
Monster Trout to Be Sent to St. Louis From Pennsylvania



A MONSTROUS trout, caught by a Bellefonte fisherman in Spring creek, outside the borough limits, is to be exhibited at the St. Louis Exposition. It is thought that the fish is the largest of its kind ever taken in Pennsylvania.

The trout was just 25 inches long, and weighed 6¼ pounds. It was mounted by State Zoologist H. A. Surface of State College, and given to Fish Commissioner W. E. Meehan, who will send it to St. Louis as one of the state exhibits.

Commissioner Meehan pronounced the trout one of the German brown variety, saying that its tremendous size and sturdy appearance is convincing evidence that the waters of the state are adapted to the propagation of species of fish not native to the state.

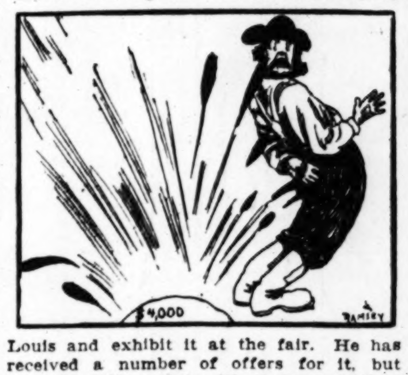
Mount Sangay is the most active volcano in the world. It is situated in Ecuador, is 17,120 feet in height and has been in constant activity since 1728. The sounds of its eruptions are sometimes heard in Quito, 150 miles distant, and once 267 reports were counted in one hour.

Big Kentucky Meteor Will Be Exhibited at St. Louis

THOMAS J. PERGRAM, a Kentuckian who picked up a big meteor on his property last fall, has determined to bring his celestial visitor to St.



Louis and exhibit it at the fair. He has received a number of offers for it, but has refused to part with it for less than $4000. Think of a windfall like that Here was the man Pergram, industriously toiling upon his farm. A big meteor sailed out of space, and landed with a thud just behind his back. It is a kind fortune that enriches a man when his back is turned.

A process is said to have been invented for using tanned pig skins as a substitute for rubber for tires. If solid carriage tires are in question there may, of course, be something in the invention; but the trouble about any kind of leather for bicycle tires it is want of elasticity. The man who can invent a substance to replace rubber, which is always growing scarcer and dearer, is sure of an immense fortune.

WITH the World's Fair approaching the flag has become a lively seller on the St. Louis market. All the flags of the world have been put in the local stocks, and the greater portion of these were flying on the streets of the city during dedication week. Doubtless many persons saw during the week flags they could not name. Now what would you say to the one in the picture carrying many small flags upon it? Do you know what it is? It illustrates the metamorphosis of the Stars and Stripes as we know them today, showing how some portions of the original designs were taken from flags of the British Isles.

Thousands of elephants are slaughtered every year to supply the world with ivory, and one-fifth of the whole number comes to the markets of Great Britain. The average weight of ivory obtained from a single elephant is about fifty pounds. Tusks weighing 100 pounds each have been known, but these are very rare. The most expensive tusks usually cost about £110 per hundredweight. The hardest of all ivory is obtained from the hippopotamus. This will emit sparks like a piece of flint when struck with steel. It is used principally for making artificial teeth.

The huge battleship Commonwealth, launched at the Fairfield yard at Govan, is the largest warship which has ever taken the water in any country. She displaces not less than 16,350 tons, and is the first vessel of the King Edward VII class put afloat. Her colossal size may be estimated by the fact that the ram alone weighs 28 tons.

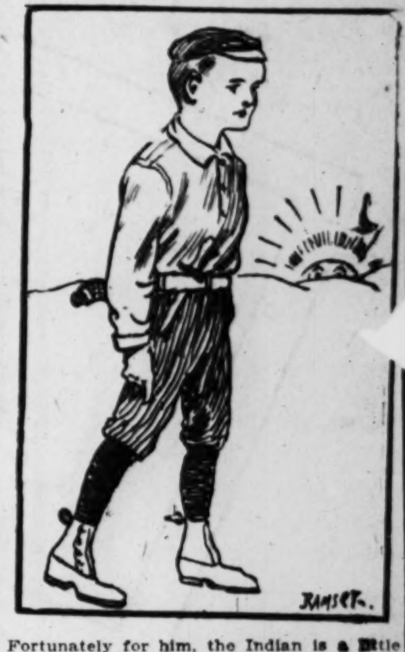
St. Louis Police Save the Indians Once More

THE St. Louis police had once more succored the red man of the western trail. William Dougherty, a 16-year-old, from Columbus, O., was picked up by the police a few days ago while en route to the Indian country. The police took from young Dougherty an armament consisting of two revolvers, a big Bowie knife, and a cartridge belt carrying 5 cartridges.

Hunger to kill an Indian dwells eternally in the young American breast. Seemingly, civilization can never appease it.



Fortunately for him, the Indian is a little more alert than the buffalo, or both would be extinct.

Until recently few people thought of utilizing as a substitute the material to be gained from water animals. The United States fish commission has taken up the question, and already proved that several kinds of fish have skins that make excellent leather for some purposes. Salmon hide is found not only serviceable for boots, but among the Eskimos it has been used for generations in making waterproof clothes. The people of the very far north also use codfish skins for jackets. The different skins which the fish commission has found to be most practical and durable are whale skins, porpoise skins, and seal leather, which dye in most exquisite colors.

The Bishop of Mackenzie river in Northwest Canada gives an interesting account of his Arctic diocese. Although the bishop's jurisdiction extends over an area of more than 500,000 square miles, the population is only about 5000, and consists of a few white people, some half-breeds and a large number of Eskimos and Indians. In the northern part of the diocese the sun is not seen at all for two months in the winter, but for an equal period in the summer it shines all the 24 hours round. Some of the mission stations are 500 miles apart, and to visit all the stations and to return to his own residence involves the bishop in a journey of 4000 miles.

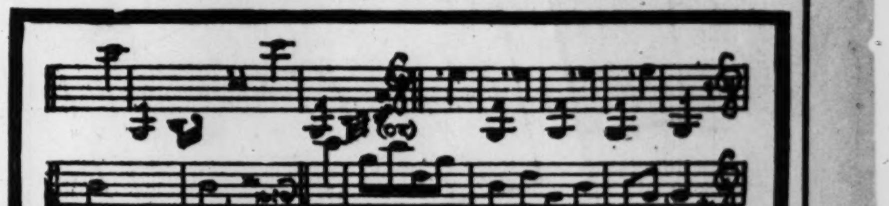
A farmer of Ballina, New South Wales, trained a black cat to act as a retriever. The animal was also fond of diving in the sea for fish, and recently it brought out a two-pound mullet. Its career was ended by being swallowed by a shark.

A Donkey's Bray Reduced to Music



A ST. LOUISAN who is interested in animals has recently secured what is said to be an actual reduction of a donkey's bray to music. You have heard a donkey bray. Perhaps you know a musical score when you see one. If you do, you can judge for ourself whether the music is right. It is unnecessary to add that the famous Missouri mule is quite as famous in music as he is in war.

A Hoxton shoeblack visited a barber's shop, and while there heard a customer read an advertisement offering a reward for information as to his whereabouts. On hearing his name read out as heir to a fortune of £30,000 the shoeblack jumped up and exclaimed, "Hurry up; that's me. I'm off." Flinging down a few pence, he put on his hat and went out. The people in the shop regarded him as insane. He walked all the way to the town where the solicitors who had advertised for the missing man were in practice, his own means to pay the fare being insufficient. It seems that the estate to which he has succeeded belonged to his uncle, who died intestate. It has since been valued at £50,000.

Something New in Art by a Frenchman

A ST. LOUIS artist has recently received an interesting publication concerning what is known in Paris as the M. Jose Frappe theory.

M. Frappe says that all facial expression can be reduced to three typical forms—astonishment, joy and sorrow.

His theory is that as 120 different colors can be reduced to three primary ones, namely, red, blue and yellow, so facial expression can be similarly reduced.

Not only has he expressed this opinion, but, that it may carry more weight with his fellow-artists, he has written a book on the subject, "Expremins de la Physionomie," which has added greatly to the furore created by his statement.

In spite of the discouraging and frequently repeated question of well-known artists, "But how does this theory account for the expression of fear, which is the depiciton of an emotion distinct from all others?" and numberless similar arguments raised against his theory, M. Frappe is constantly gaining to his side of the question fresh advocacy of his opinion by men who have themselves done much toward the advancement of art in their teaching as well as their work.

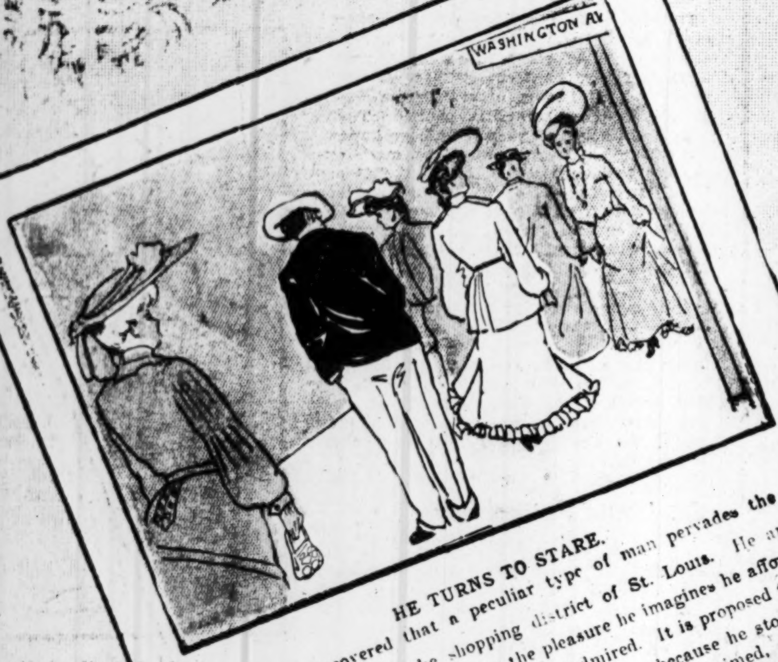
The illustration shows M. Frappe's working models for each of the three expressions.

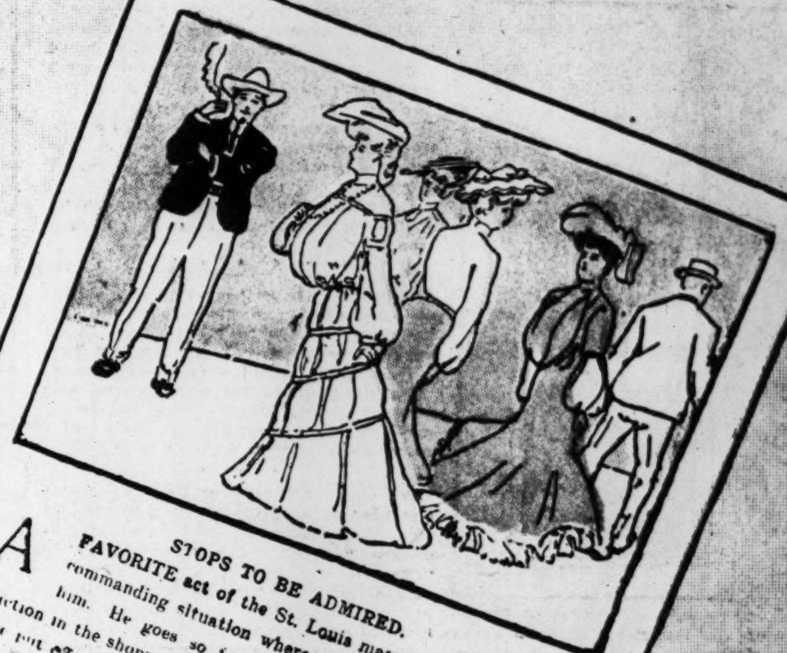
St. Louis "Mashers"----Should Men Be Excluded From the Shopping District?



WASHINGTON AV

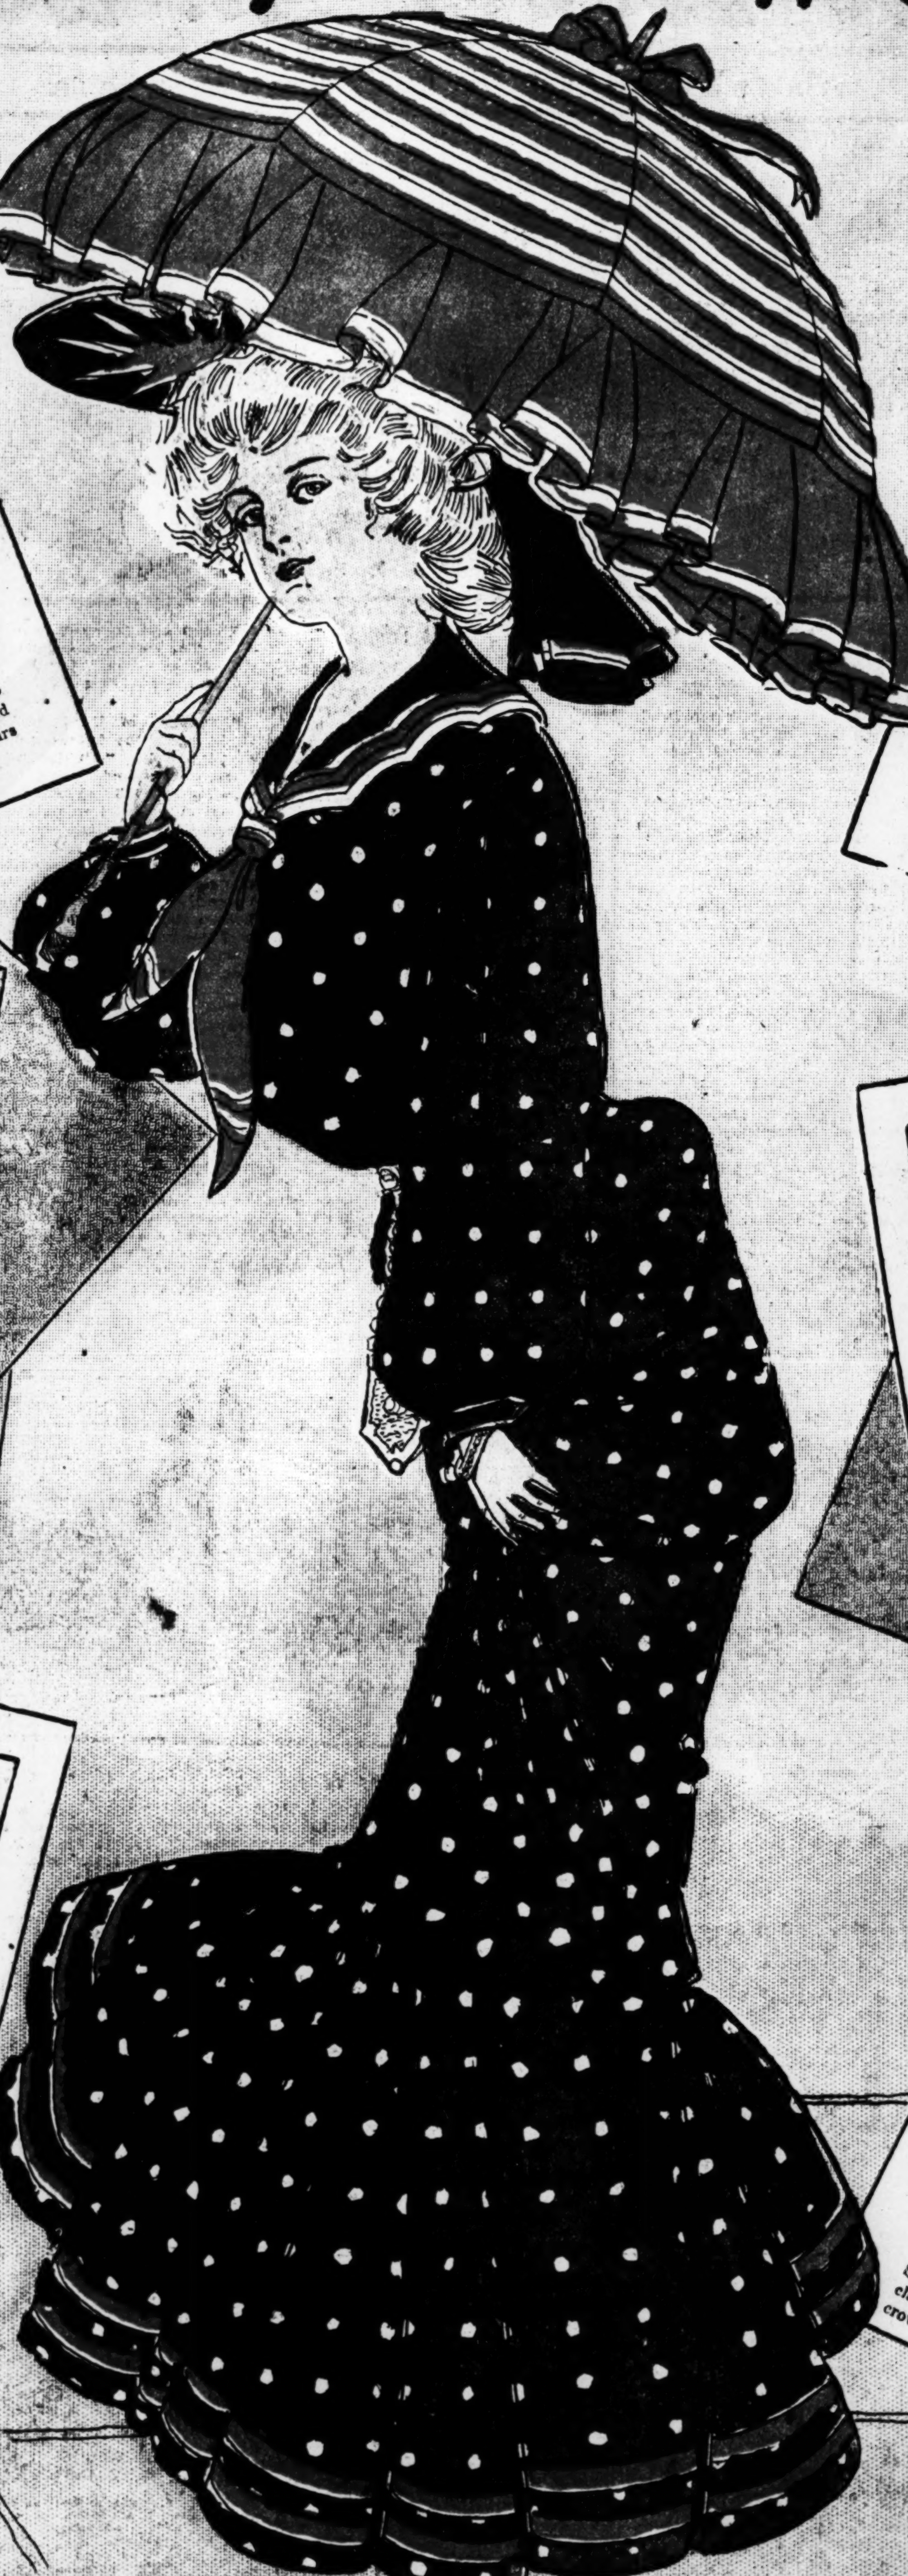
HE TURNS TO STARE.

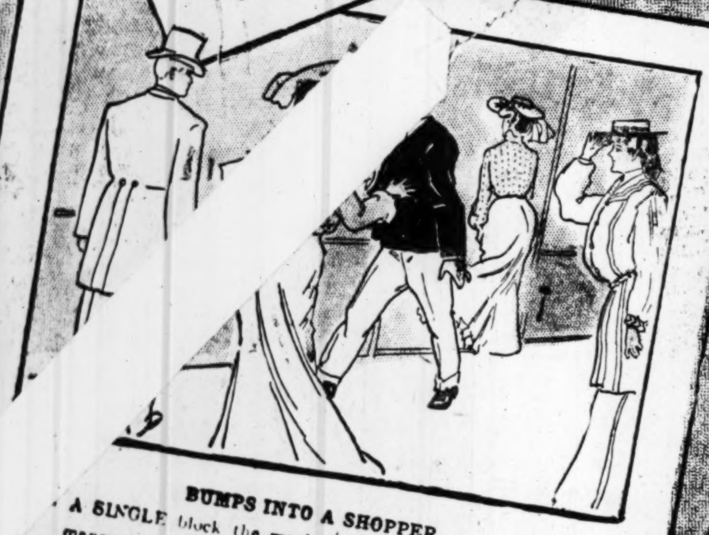
IT IS discovered that a peculiar type of man pervades the sidewalks of the shopping district of St. Louis. He apparently exists only for the pleasure he imagines he affords to feminine nature by coming to be admired. It is proposed that he be excluded from the shopping districts, because he stops to stare, and impedes locomotion. Women, it is claimed, should have the exclusive use of the shopping district for certain hours of days.



STOPS TO BE ADMIRED.

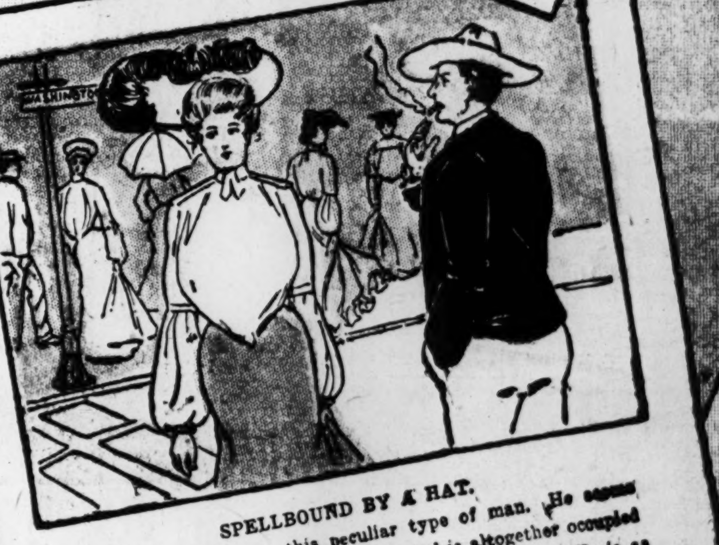
A FAVORITE act of the St. Louis masher is to pose in a commanding situation where all who pass may admire him. He goes so far as to claim that he is an attraction in the shopping districts, and that if, as is proposed, he were put off the streets, the number of shoppers would immediately fall off 50 per cent. One of this type said the other day that the big retail stores could well afford to hire handsome men to walk up and down and make their neighborhood attractive.





BUMPS INTO A SHOPPER.

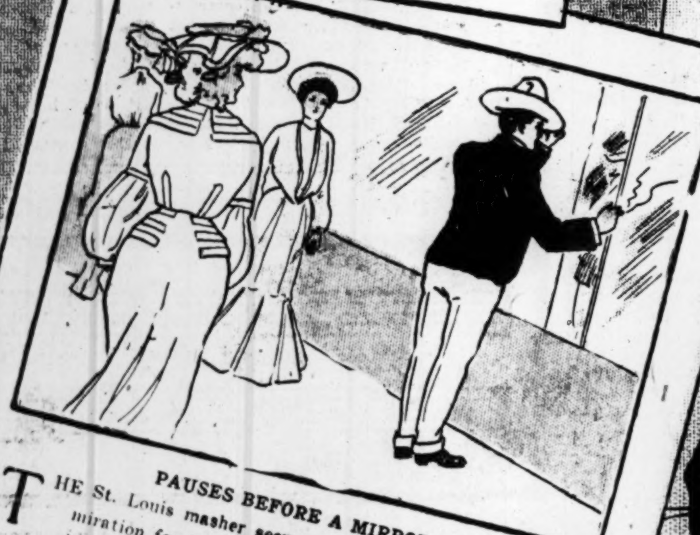
A SINGLE block the masher performs a large variety of maneuvers ranging from stopping to buy a newspaper to gain time to stare at some pretty face to standing still in the middle of the sidewalk and openly following some woman with his eyes. One of his favorite tricks is to pretend to be absorbed in thought and to bump into some shopper, which affords him a chance to apologize. This was observed to occur 14 times within a single hour one day last week.



WASHINGTON

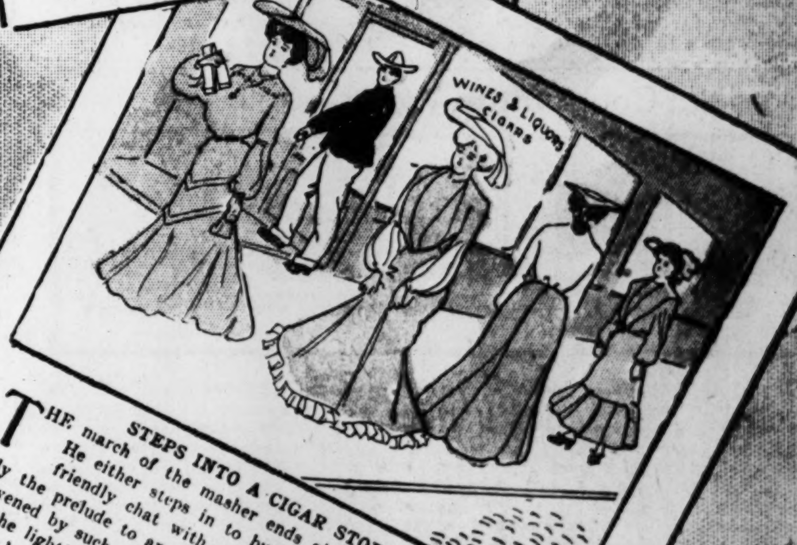
SPELLBOUND BY A HAT.

TIME is nothing to this peculiar type of man. He seems to have no business, and his mind is altogether occupied by trifles. He is an expert judge of fashion. He is as much struck by a remarkable hat as a woman would be. When such a hat passes, he frankly stands still and stares and watches it until it is out of sight. Then pondering solemnly upon what he has seen he resumes his erratic and uncertain course along the crowded sidewalks



PAUSES BEFORE A MIRROR.

THE St. Louis masher seems to have almost as much admiration for himself as he has for others. The mirrors in the shopping district are over-worked by him. He never sees a mirror without going up to it to adjust his necktie, and it affords a good chance to command the sidewalk in both directions, and stare at every pretty face coming along. It is claimed that men are now altogther monopolizing mirrors intended for ladies, another reason why they should be told to go.



WINES & LIQUORS
CIGARS

STEPS INTO A CIGAR STORE.

THE march of the masher ends always in the same way. He either steps in to buy another cigar or to have a friendly chat with some bartender. Generally this is only the prelude to another tour of a crowded sidewalk to be enlivened by such exciting incidents as the purchase of a necktie, the lighting of a cigar and a general interruption of free public locomotion. The number of hours per week wasted in St. Louis in these occupations is increasing rapidly, and it is claimed something may have to be done before the World's Fair crowd arrives.

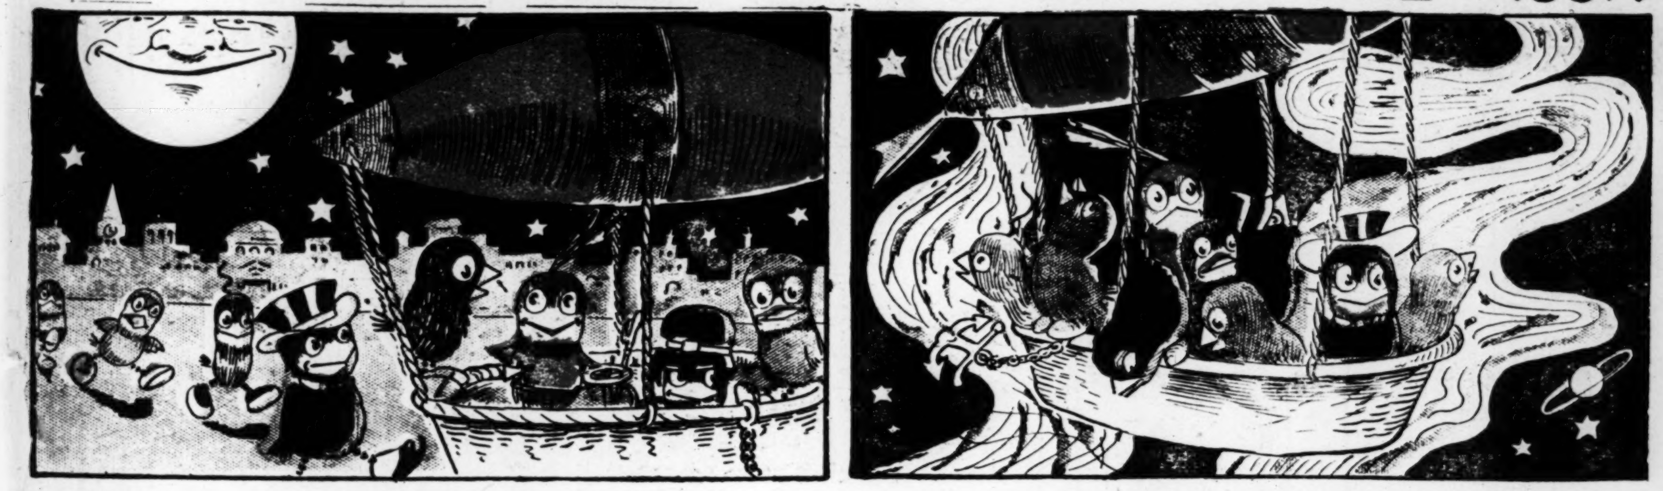
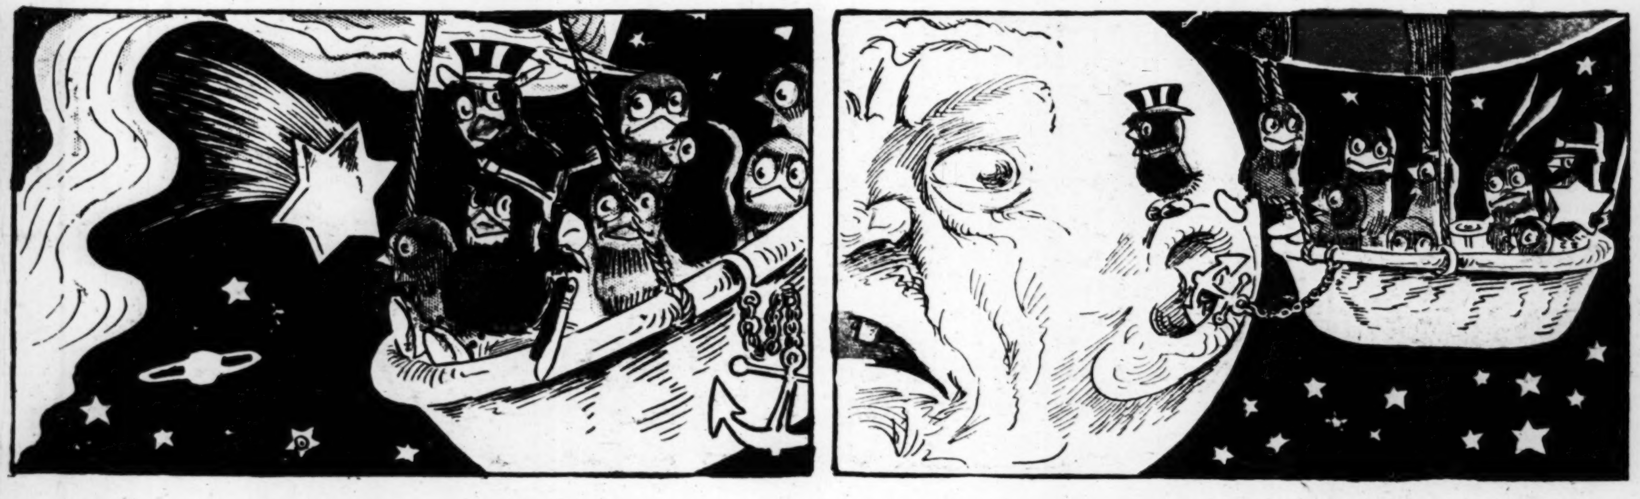
THE WEATHER BIRDS MAKE A TRIP TO THE MOON



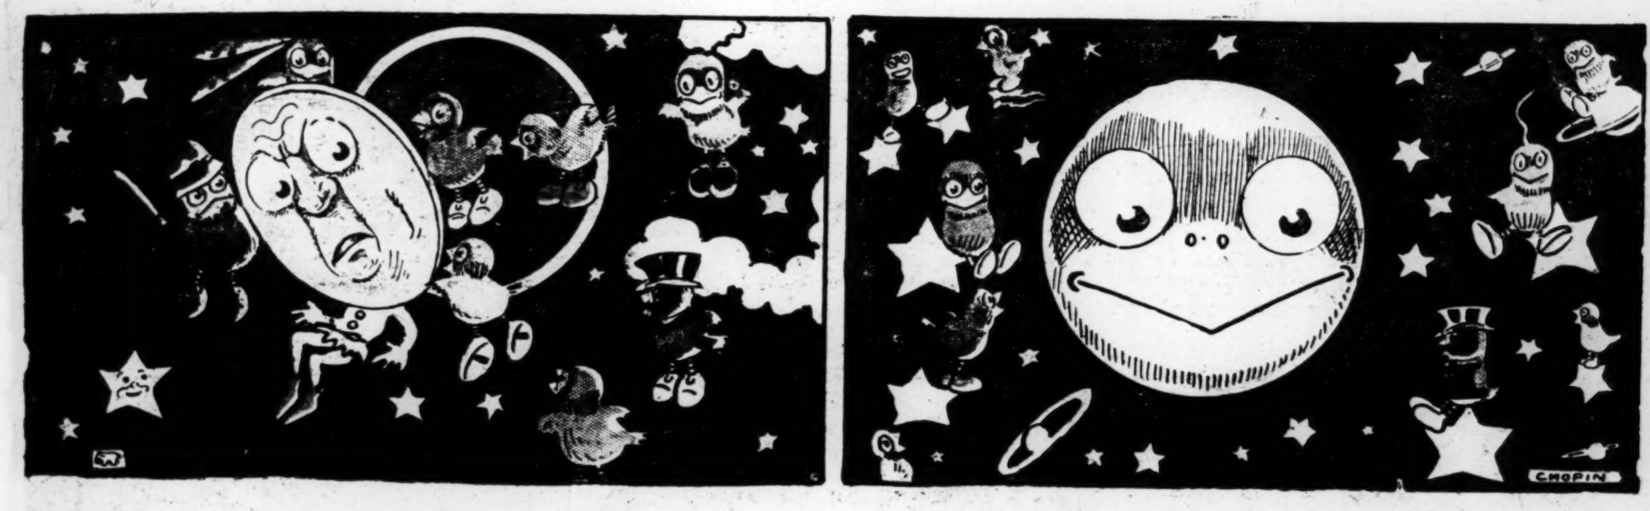
1—So long the Moon has turned to them its bright, good-natured face,
The Weather Birds resolved that they would go and see the place.
So, when the Moon was big and full, and Lo could see to steer,
The Weather Birds got on their ship, without a speck of fear.

2—The Earth had long been lost to view when Clarence cried, "Hooray!
Reach out and get a drink of milk! We're in the Milky Way!"
With cries of joy each Weather Bird thrust out his little bill,
And sipped the rich and creamy milk until he had his fill



3—Beyond the Milky Way the Birds were leaning out so far,
To see the sights aroundabout that Clarence lost his star.
He spread his little bill to cry, when zip! into the boat,
There came a big, bright falling star and stuck upon his coat.

4—"Boat ahoy!" somebody cried, and, looking upward soon,
The Weather Birds beheld the man who lives upon the Moon.
He had a big and smiling face, and looked so kind and dear,
The Weather Birds went up to him and landed on his ear.



5—Which made the man so very mad he gave his ear a flock,
And, quick as thought, the Birdies' ship fell off and was a wreck.
"Pitch into him," cried Dumps the Dude. "Let's put him out!" cried Ching;
And, sure enough, the Birds set in and did that very thing.

6—So now no more the Moon can show to us the smiling face.
Of him whose head it framed so long. Another takes his place.
One night 'tis Dumps, another Lo, and so, in turn. You know,
They're living there. They lost their ship and can't get back below.

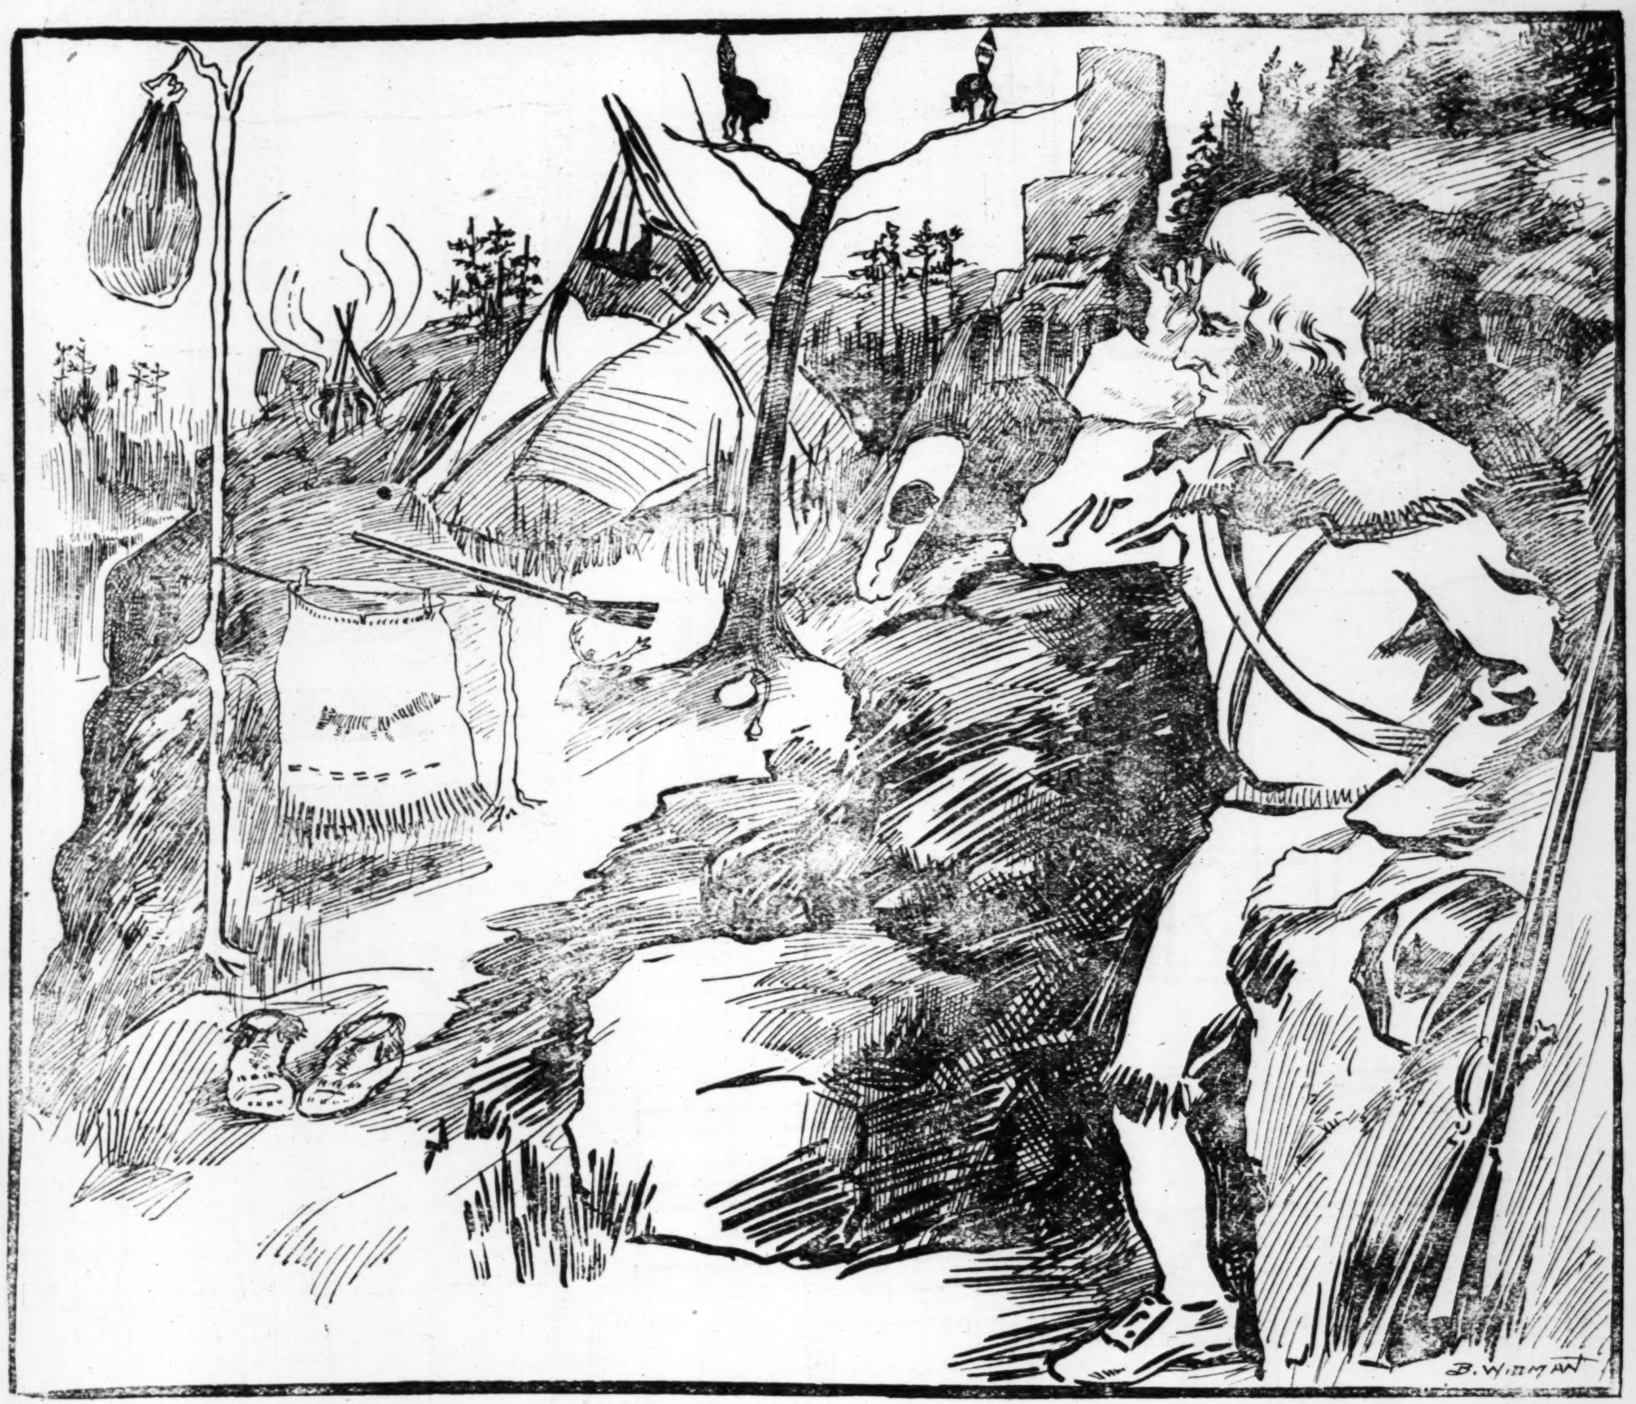
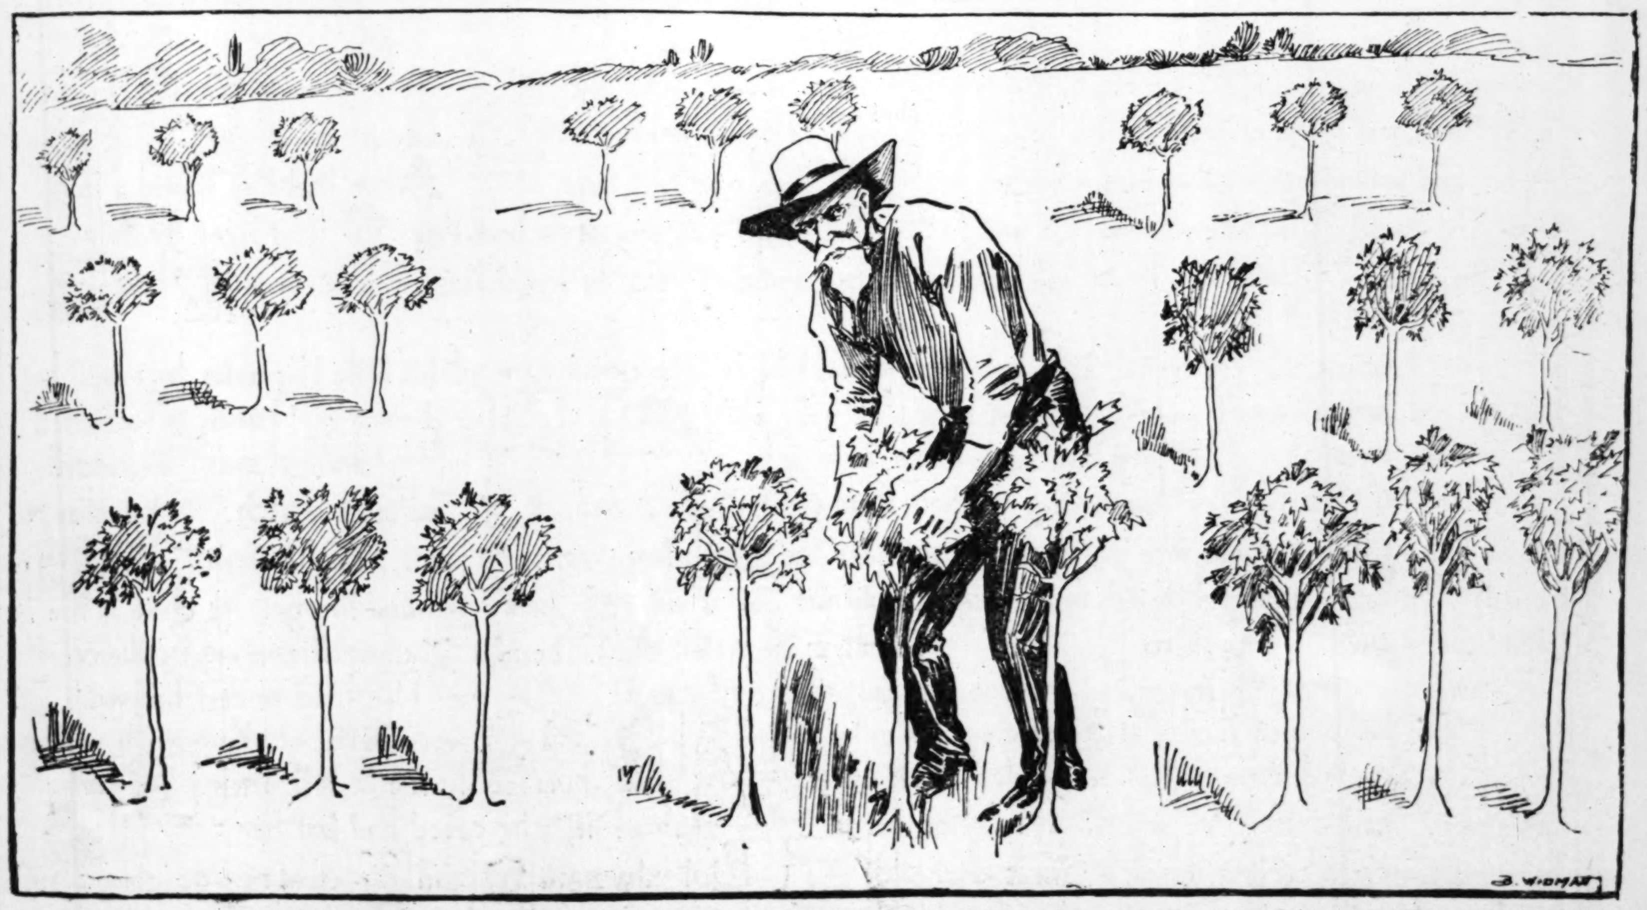
DANIEL BOONE READING THE WILDERNESS



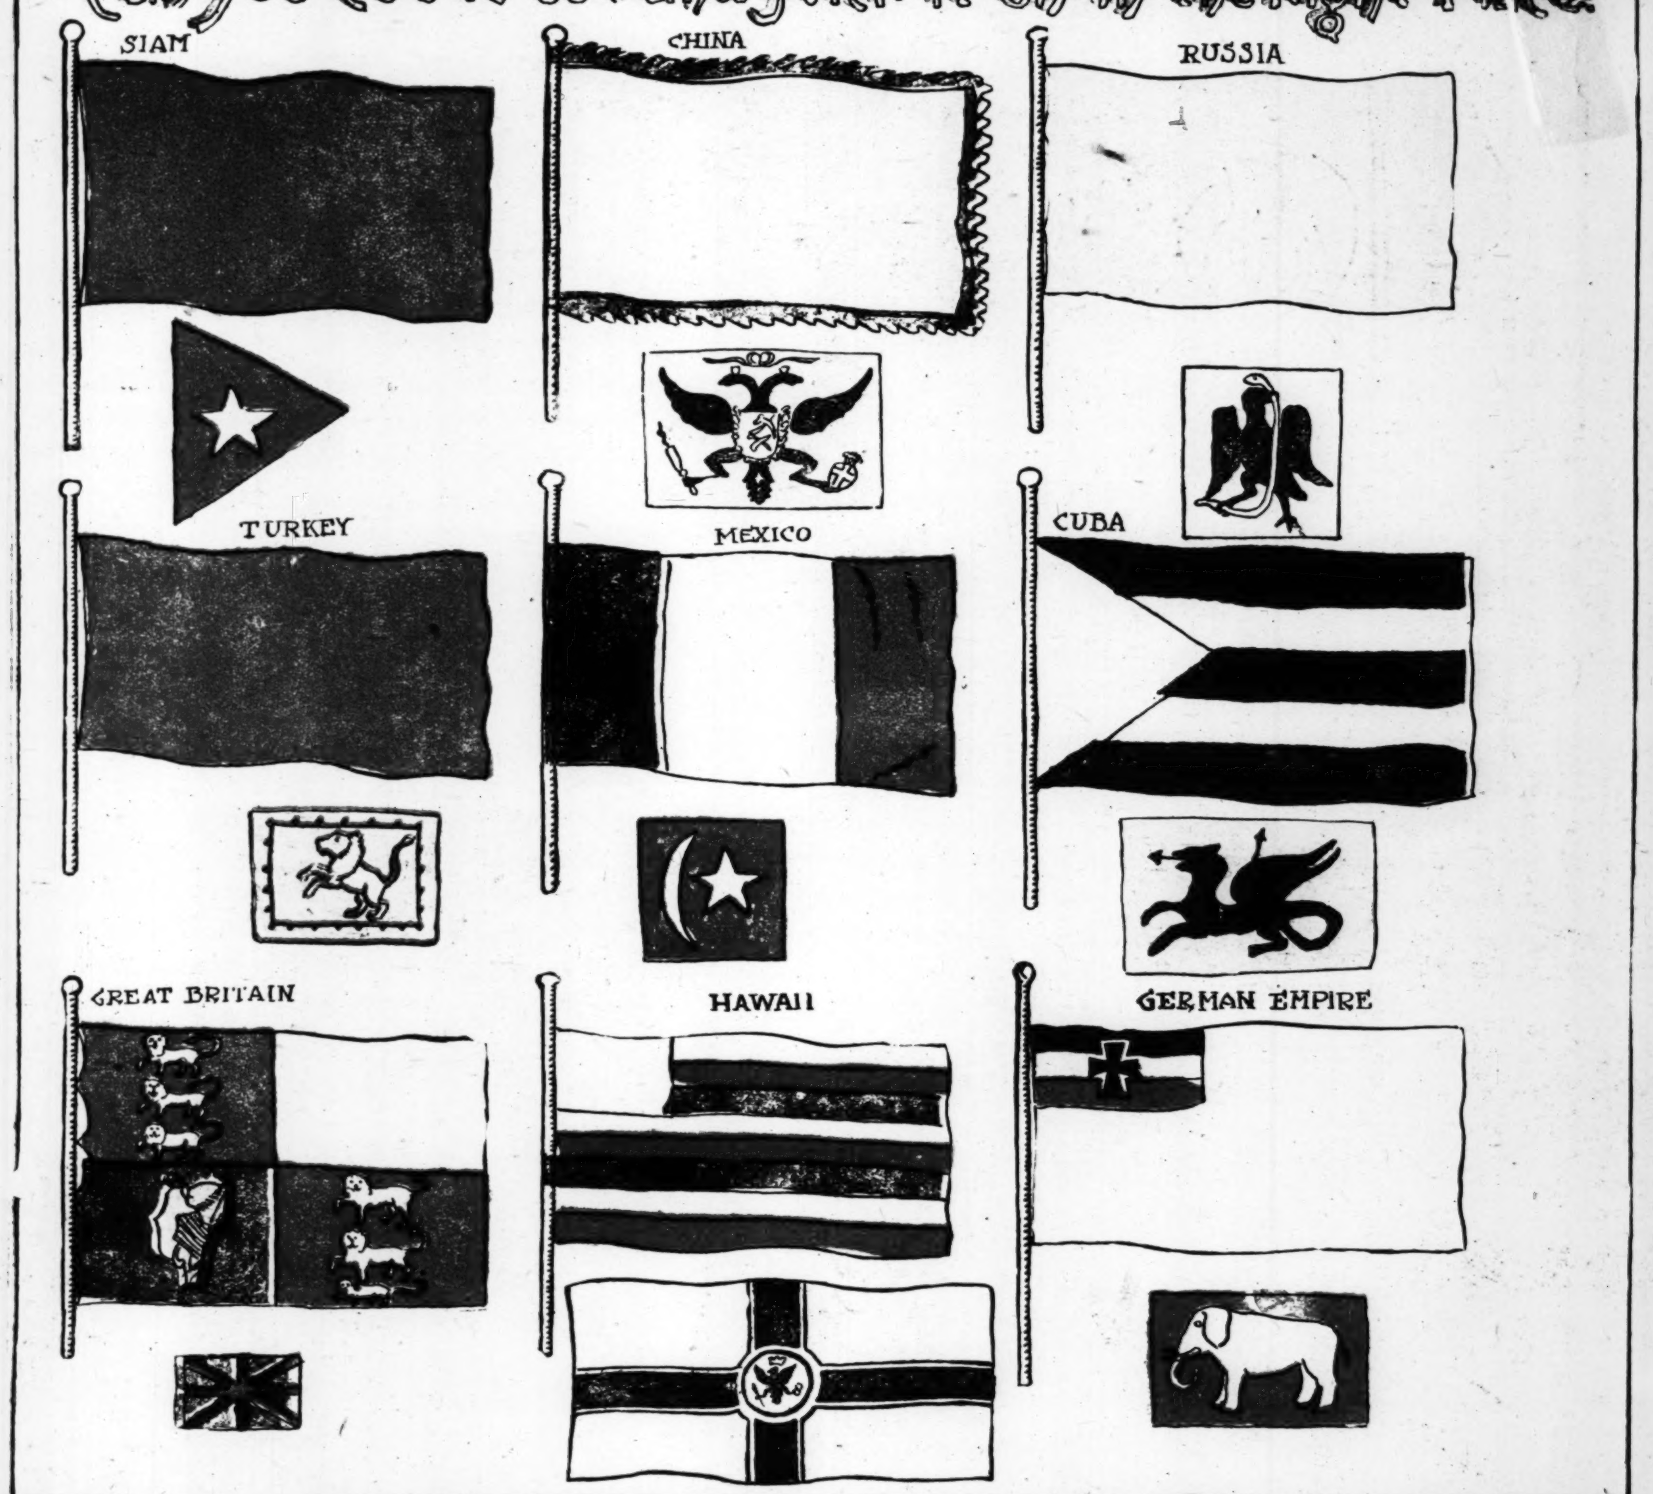
Seeing an Indian tepee in the bushes, Daniel Boone cautiously approached, and, just to show how he could size up a situation, regarded the Indian camp a short while and said: "This is the wigwam of a Sac Indian. He has short arms and is pigeon-toed. He has a squaw and a pappoose. He has a dog. Mrs. Sac is cooking venison for their supper, and they will have catsup on it. Mrs. Sac is a broad, short woman. Before her mariage she belonged to the Fox Nation." Now, how did the pioneer know these things? What is there about the camp that enabled him to ascertain so much?

CAN YOU SOLVE THE GARDENER'S PUZZLE?



A gardener was given 24 small trees and told to set them out in eight groups of four rows, with nine trees in a row. He succeeded in doing this, setting them as the picture shows. Subsequenty he was given four more trees and told to set them out with the others, not changing the position or number of the original groups, and still having nine in a row. How can he do it?

Something is missing from each of these Flags? Can you cut it out and stick it on in the Right Place?



THE ADVENTURES OF JACK AND JULIA AND THEIR DOG ROVER

So they dug some and put them in an old called their dog , and started for the creek where the live. baited 's hook, and before he could get his own ready had hooked a big . "Help!" cried . ran to her, and pulling together, they pulled out a fish one long. After that they fished a long time, and their did not even move. and opened their and ate the lunch their had fixed for them. They gave some, too, for he had promised their mother that he would take good care of and .

Of course, cannot talk, but when he was told to take good care of his little playmates he raised his and barked 'wow! wow!' That means 'I will, with .' After dinner and watched the crawfish. They have such funny little tails. They always swim backward, which tickled and so much they watched them until it was 2 o'clock by Jack's watch. When they put fresh bait on their and were just about to start for the when Jack's went straight down. "Pull, !" cried . Jack did pull, but the fish was so big he could not get it out. pulled too, and they got too close to the bank and it broke in with them. "Splash!" they went, in the water. Just then came bounding up the creek. Seeing Jack and trying to swim, he jumped in and caught by the and pulled her out. Then he jumped in after and caught him by the . and were both choking with water when pulled them out. They took their , and hurried home to tell their what Rover had done. When their mother heard about it, she cried and put her around Rovers neck and called him a dear old . But she said and could never go fishing again unless their went with them.
